A correspondent at Los Angeles says: "The boom does not appear to be over yet; a great deal of building is going on in the City and for miles outside the limits. Large towns are being built all over the county, but nobody can tell what they are for. Town after town goes up and so far all seem to be prosperous."

Five car loads of rails were shipped to Keeler recently. This is taken to be an indication that work will soon be begun on the extension of the C. & C. railroad. The managers of the road have not yet said anything in public in reference to the matter, and whether the road will soon be begun or not is known only to themselves.

Mr. C. Anthony is accumulating a large amount of ore and supplies at the Riley mill. Three teams are hauling; two of ten horses each and one team of twelve horses. In addition to these one team of four horses is kept busy at the Haggin mine hauling ore a short distance to where the other teams can reach it. From the mine to the mill the distance is about 24 miles.

Mining In Mexico.

Mr. Charles W. Brittain, an old timer in Owens valley arrived at Independence last Friday. Mr. Brittain had been in Mexico engaged in mining for several years. His buiness here at this time is to look after some mining interests at Cerro Gordo. Mr. Brittain says a poor man has no chance for success in mining in Mexico. Prospecting has been going on for three hundred years and the chances are very remote for finding any new veins or ledges. All that hand labor can do is already accomplished; a vast amount of work has been done that would only be possible where labor can be had for almost nothing. By the investment of capital in expensive machinery and other improvements, many mines may be worked at a good profit; but this is the only chance remaining for strangers to engage in mining in Mexico. The average wages for native miners is seventy-five cts. a day. He says he has traveled many hundred miles in Mexico, mostly on horseback and with only one native attendant, and never met with the least molestation from any one, nor felt the slightest anxiety about his personal safety. He says the recent murders of American miners were done by a band of robbers who infest a wild mountain region where cavalry cannot follow them. The Government is doing every thing possible to destroy the robbers. As fast as any of the gang are caught they are shot without ceremony, and in a short time the band will be extirpated.

Won't Touch Inyo.

There are increased indications that the proposed railroad from Salt Lake to Los Angeles will run too far east and south to touch Inyo county. A recent report says: —It is to be quite independent of the Utah Central, which now runs from Salt Lake City southwest to San Francisco as a connection of the Union Pacific. The road will be 650 miles in length, and will run southwest from Salt Lake City through a pass in the Snake mountains into White Pine county, Nevada, thence through Nye county, along the great Nevada plateau. Thence on, the road runs through several large valleys, touching perhaps at Los Vegas in Southern Nevada, and utilizing some miles of the valley of the Colorado river. The worst portion of the entire route is that in the Mohave desert, through which the line has necessarily to cross to reach the San Fernando mountains. The old stage route has been found to offer the best line through this steep range to San Bernardino, whence a very easy route is obtainable to Pasadena and Los Angeles. Its projectors claim that the widest stretch of desert on their route is only 35 miles in length, and the line will open up the greatest mineral belt on the continent. It will will certainly mean a short route from Los Angeles to Chicago, the survey line showing a saving of several hundred miles over the line of the Santa Fe system.

Wedding Bells.

DARWIN, Cal. Nov. 9, 1887

INYO INDEPENDENT: There was a pretty little wedding in our town last Sunday evening. The contracting parties were Mr. Ralph Nickerson and Miss Lucy Buelna. At 8:30 p. m. the ceremony, which was performed by Judge J. F. Hawley, took place at the residence of the brides mother, Mrs. M. Buelna. The bridesmaids were Miss Trinnie Buelna and Mrs. R. Harry; the groomsmen Mr. P. Clinton and Mr. R. Harry. The bride was very prettily and becomingly attired in a cream colored brocaded silk. Dancing commenced shortly after congratulating the happy pair and was continued until 12 o'clock, when a splendid supper was served. The guests departed about 1:30 o'clock, one and all pleased because of a really pleasant time. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gunn, Mr. and Mrs. R. Harry, Mr. and Mrs. F. Fitzgerald, Mrs. M. Reddy, Mrs. M. Buelna, Miss. T. Buelna, Miss Laura Buelna, L. Schalten, J. W. Murphy, J. Schannell, J. A. Hannah, J. A. McKenzie, P. Clinton, E. Buelna and G Pindlay. "Z."

Lodge Inauguration

The new Masonic Lodge at Bishop was duly inaugurated and the officers installed last Saturday evening. The Lodge is called Winnedumа No. 287, and is located in a large and well furnished room in the Academy building. The officers are A. O. Collins, W. M.; J. H. Stoutenborough Sr. S. W.; J. O. Meroney, J. W.; W. H. George, Treas, P. A. Chalfant, Sec.; T. F. A. Connelly, S. D.; John Clark, J. D.; W. McDonald and Robert Ford, Stewards; Robert Lyne, Marshall. A large number of members of the Lodge at Independence attended the ceremonies; among these were A. R. Conklin, S. D. Thurton, Martin Mee, P. H. Mack and G. W. Brady, who represented the Grand officers and conducted the inauguration and installment. At the end of the ceremonies all present were invited to a banquet in the refectory of the Academy. A number of short speeches were made, all expressing strong fraternal feelings, and on the part of the visitors the heartiest wishes for the enduring success of the new Lodge.

Another Good Work Begun.

The project so often mentioned, of daming the Lakes west from Bishop Creek is now in a fair way to be realized. The lakes are about twenty miles west from the town. Men are now at work clearing the ground for the foundation for the dam. The money for the work is provided by parties in San Francisco. Water enough can easily be stored to irrigate at least eight thousand acres of land. One mile below the dam the canal will enter the land to be irrigated. When the project was first proposed it met with a good deal of opposition from settlers along Bishop Creek. More thorough study of the subject has convinced these parties that the work when completed will benefit them in many ways, and all opposition has ceased. The completion of this work will be forlowed by a large increase in population and business and the town of Bishop will be benefitted in proportion.

Pleasant Entertainment.

Last Tuesday evening California Post G. A. R. gave an entertainment to the members and a few invited guests. After the official business of the evening the members of the Post and their guests met at Mairs hotel. A very elegant supper was served; this was followed by addresses, stories of the war on flood and field, and thrilling adventures and hair breadth escapes "i' the imminent deadly breach." About midnight the party broke up, all having enjoyed the occasion heartily.

Chautauque Circle.

After the services next Sabbath evening a circle of the above name will be organized under the auspices of the Church Lyceum. The object and work of this popular movement will be explained fully at that time. All, old and young, are invited to the membership and benefit of the C. L. S. E. T. E. SISSON.

Hattie Woolsteen has been held without bail for the murder of Dr Harlan near Los Angeles.

A few men are at work in the Ida mine at Panamint, and are getting out good ore. One tunnel is in one hundred feet, in ore all the way. By running this tunnel about thirty feet further it will connect with an incline from above. The depth of backs will be about two hundred feet. The extension of the tunnel will do away with hoisting ore or waste rock.

Miss Florence Macnaghton, of Bushmills County Antrim, Ireland, lately tried to persuad a fisherman to sign the pledge. He said he would do so if she would swim across the bay from Blackrock to Port Ballantree, a distance of about a mile. The young lady accepted the challenge, and accomplished the swim in thirty nine minutes. The fisherman now wears the blue ribbon.

The large number of cases lately appealed from the State courts to the Supreme Court of the United States is considered by some to be an alarming tendency that may necessitate almost a comple revolution in American jurisprudence. It is especially feared that wealthy criminals may avail themselves of this facility to virtually block the wheels of justice, for ordinarily the Supreme Court is three years behind its business.

Doctor Lee, of Carson, Frank McCulloch, Superintendent of the Nevada State Prison; and John M. Dormer, Secretary of State for Nevada, were in town several days this week. All of these gentlemen are interested in the east side canal and came down to see the new ditching machine in operation. All of them professed to be highly pleased with the country, and said they found the soil, climate and water supply better than they had expected to find.

Some time ago the City Council of Pasadena passed an ordinance prohibiting saloons in the town. The Supreme Court has held that the ordinance is constitutional. This is equivalent to a decision that any town or city may prohibit the liquor traffic, if a majority of the people favor it. And it may be added that to let the people of any locality decide whether they will have the liquor traffic or not is the best way of dealing with the traffic.

The school teachers of the County have been holding an institute at Bishop Creek during the week. No report of the proceedings has been furnished by the Superintendent. It is the general experience since these meetings were instituted that tha time given to them by teachers is well spent. The relation of experience by teachers conveys valuable information to other teachers and suggests new and useful ideas to all.

The jail at Chicago in which the anarchists were confined must be very loosely managed. One of the condemned men was furnished with laudanum and came near escaping justice by committing suicide. In the cell of another, dynamite bombs were found that would have destroyed the whole building and all who were in it. The discovery of these facts made a great sensation and deepened the conviction that such desperate men should not escape the penalty of their crimes.

A. R. Conklin, Esq., addressed the Teachers Institute at Bishop Creek last Tuesday. The address urged that teachers in the common schools should aim to train their pupils in such studies as will be of practical use in everyday life. How to estimate the quantity of bricks or lumber necessary to build a house, barn or other structure; the quantity of shingles and nails needed in the structure; how many posts and how much wire needed to fence a tract of land of a given area; this is the kind of knowledge, that is of real value. The address made a good impression on all the teachers present.

ORDINANCE NO. 20.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, do ordain as follows

SEC. 1. Every person engaged in the business of raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep in the County of Inyo, State of California, must annually procure a license therefor from the Tax Collector, and make therefor the following payments:

1. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 5,000 sheep or more shall constitute the first class and must pay $250 per annum for the first 5,000 sheep and for every additional 1,000 the sum of $30.

2. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 4,000 sheep and less than 5,000 constitute the second class and must pay $200 per annum.

3. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 3,000 sheep and less than 4,000 constitute the third class and must pay $150 per annum.

. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 2,000 sheep and less than 3,000 constitute the fourth class and must pay $100 per annum.

5. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 1,500 sheep and less than 2,000 constitute the fifth class and must pay $75 per annum.

6. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 1,000 sheep and less than 1,500 constitute the sixth class and must pay $50 per annum.

7. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 500 sheep and less than 1,000 sheep constitute the seventh class and must pay $2 per annum.

8. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control less than 500 sheep constitute the eighth class and must pay $5 per annum.

SEC. 2. Every person who shall engage in the business of raising, grazing, herding or pasturing sheep, or who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo, State of California, any business, trade, profession, or calling, for the transaction of which a license is required by any Ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county, without taking out or procuring the license prescribed by such Ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250, and unless said fine be paid shall be imprisoned in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 3. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the license provided for in this Ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same, and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3250 of the Political Code of the State of California.

SEC. 4. The County Auditor shall prepare and have printed suitable bank licenses for the Tax Collector to carry out the provisions of this Ordinance with blank receipts for the Tax Collector when sold.

SEC. 5. The Tax Collector shall collect a fee of one dollar for each license sold, which shall be paid into the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 6. All money collected for licenses under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be paid over to the County Treasurer as other moneys and placed to the credit of the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 7. This Ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after 20 days from its passage, and all Ordinances, or parts of Ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

SEC. 8. This Ordinance shall be published in the Inyo INDEPENDENT, a newspaper published in said Inyo County, at least four weeks, said publication to be made for a period of twenty days after the adoption thereof, and said Ordinance to take effect in twenty days from its adoption.

The above Ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, at a regular meeting of said Board, October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

CHICAGO'S PIE TRADE.

PASTRY FOUNDRIES THAT TURN OUT 12,000 PIES A DAY.

Some Statistics on a Popular Article of Food--Pies Falling "Like Leaves from the Frost Kissed Oak"--Delivery and Distribution.

The statistics will show that more pies are made, baked and eaten in Chicago, in proportion to the population, than in any other city in the world. In fact, Chicago consumes a reasonably large quantity of all sorts of eatables, and the fact that the pie is in demand is an evidence of the prevalence of a cultivated taste among the people. There are three establishments in the city where home-made pies are turned out in magnificent quantities to supply the wholesale demand. The extent of this industry has assumed surprising proportions in recent years. A person who has not investigated the matter to some extent would have but a faint conception of the magnitude of the business. It is even claimed that Chicago excels New York in the trade.

As before stated, there are three pie manufactories in the city. They each do about the same extent of business. They are generally crowded to their fullest capacity during the hot season. Taking the establishment on West Lake street as a fair average, some very interesting figures are procured. This house employs about 100 hands, of which one-half are females—generally girls—who earn good salaries. Some of them earn from $8 to $10 per week, the forewoman getting $15. This pie factory turns out pastry during baking hours at the rate of 1,000 pies per hour, or from 10,000 to 12,000 each day on an average.

RUNNING NIGHT AND DAY.

They run night and day. In fact, the ovens are never allowed to cool. The ovens have a revolving bottom, on which the pies are placed, which is kept in motion almost constantly. A pie is baked during one revolution, is removed, and another takes its place. Tin dishes, or plates, are used for baking and delivery, this one firm requiring 50,000 plates. The pies are all made by hand, and are stamped with the name of the firm and variety of the contents. An apple pie is marked "A," on the upper crust, a blackberry pie B. B. and raspberry pie R. B. Those not having an upper crust bear their identity on their face and need no branding. Apple pies are the staple and are in the most general demand. Berry pies are very popular during their season.

It is a sight not without interest to see forty or fifty girls peeling and preparing the fruit, or ranged along either side of a large table, neatly dressed in white aprons and jaunty caps, each one performing her allotted labor in the construction of a pie. This work is done with that rapidity, dexterity and skill only attained by long practice. One set of girls rolls the dough, another puts in the bottom crust, others dip in the contents and still others fit on the top crust. It is then passed to a machine, that runs by power, which trims and joins the edges with lightning rapidity. Pies fall upon the reception tables like leaves from the frost kissed oak, and are borne away to the ovens by the baking detachment.

TONS OF INGREDIENTS.

In the manufacture of from 75,000 to 100,000 pies per week a vast number of ingredients is consumed. It requires on an average a car load of flour, eighty barrels of sugar, and thirty barrels of lard, to say nothing about the number of eggs and the vast quantity of milk used. In manufacturing the crust the general rule is to use two pounds of flour to one of lard. This is more lard, however, than our pie bakers consume, as they have discovered that by the use of the best grades of flour and winter lard a sufficiently crisp consistency can be attained in the crust with less lard, while they contend the pies are more wholesome. It is generally admitted that the Chicago pie bakers use the best grade of materials attainable in their pies, and that their productions are clean and healthy. They have discovered that it takes less of a good grade of flour and lard to make a superior grade of pie.

For the delivery and distribution of this vast quantity of pastry daily, the firm visited runs sixteen wagons. As locomotive power they keep an average of forty horses. The delivery has to be done quickly, and for a city of the magnificent distances of Chicago it takes rapid driving. This necessitates a change of horses each half day. A number of men are employed to take charge of the horses, who live in the stable. Each driver hitches his own team and is held responsible for it while in his charge. The wagons each hold 450 pies, which are slipped in single shelves arranged along either side, tightly closed so as to exclude the dust while on the street. The wagons have a sort of aisle through the middle, and on the outside are painted in gaudy colors, looking something like a circus wagon. The pies are sold at different prices. The general retail price is twelve to fifteen cents. The manufacturer aims to make one-half cent on each pie made, clear of contents and running expenses. Out of this is his profit, after paying his taxes and keeping up a property in which about $100,000 is invested.—Chicago Herald.

Liberal and Penurious.

Not unfrequently a man is encountered who is a moral paradox. The late Marquis of Westminster was such a man. Liberal in large affairs, he was penurious in trifles. He wore shabby clothes, carried a cotton umbrella, saved bits of paper and twine, picked up pins, and gave away thousands of pounds.

He once drew a check of £30,000 for a benevolent object, but the donor's name was never published, and his own son, the present Duke of Westminster, never knew for what purpose the check had been drawn.

A clergyman, who had been to London to consult a doctor, was dining with the marquis.

"What did the doctor advise?" asked the nobleman.

"Too absurd, my lord! Horse exercise."

"Then why don't you take it?"

"Have you a stable and a paddock?"

"Yes, my lord."

"Then I will give you a horse."

The next day a groom rode up to the clergyman's house, leading a fine horse. The grateful parson offered the man a half sovereign, but the groom declined to take more than sixpence, saying that it would be as much as his situation was worth to accept more.

"But, please, sir," he added, "give me twopence for the turnpike gate. His lordship specially told me to be sure and ask for the twopence."—Youth's Companion.

Internal Revenue "Mixed Drinks."

When whisky, rum, gin, or any of the stuff known as "hard liquors" are now received they are all mixed together and poured into barrels. This destroys the distinctive quality of each and makes a compound that the hardest drinker would turn from in disgust, and whose smell alone would make a sober man see snakes. When about ten barrels of this has accumulated the collector of internal revenue is notified, and he sends one of his officers to gauge the liquor and certify to the proof and amount. The officer also sees personally to its delivery to the distillery where it has been sold. For after the stuff has been made unfit for its original purpose, it may be made salable again in the form of alcohol by being distilled. The purchaser pays for it at the highest market price in proportion to the amount of alcohol which it contains as shown by the internal revenue officer's certificate, and which averages ninety-six cents per gallon. Wines are served in the same way.—Boston Advertiser.

MEMPHIS' WAR PAPER IN '62.

Journalistic Experiences of Union Soldiers—"The Weekly Reveille."

Two or three days after reaching Memphis I was detailed at headquarters, and was directed to take possession of the first vacant printing office in order to print such general orders as might be received for distribution to the various commands. The other printer detailed for this work was a companionable fellow, bright and intelligent, but erratic and unreliable, and with no very deep convictions. The idea was mutual that while employed in issuing orders extra time might be utilized in getting out a paper, as there was no publication of any kind in Memphis, unless it might be The Daily Avalanche, which, of course, was of different views from that of the northern soldiery then crowding the city.

The paper was gotten out under the name of The Weekly Reveille, printed on coarse paper, and by no means attractive or newsy, but it had the gossip of the regiments, it had a flavor of Unionism which could not be denied, and it went like hot cakes, so much so that within three days another edition was issued under the name of The Semi-Weekly Reveille, to be followed on the second day thereafter with what blossomed out as The Tri-Weekly Reveille. These several editions gave attention to general orders and to news from the north, clipped from St. Louis papers of several days' antiquity, which were readily retailed at twenty-five cents each, and the tri-weekly was even more a success financially than the weekly and semi-weekly editions.

In the earlier stages of the war The Daily Appeal was apparently the leading organ in the southwest, but when the Union forces hove in sight of Memphis it shook the dust of the doomed city from its folds and followed the fortunes of the Confederate army in its search for safety. But it left a finely appointed office behind, an office complete in every respect, as remembered as this late date, save a press, and one day there came an order from the general to abandon the little, dirty, dingy, one horse stand around the corner and take possession of The Appeal building, with all its contents.

Great things were expected of this energetic advance, and so there was immediately issued probably the only unquestioned Republican Union paper ever before printed in Memphis, under the stately caption of "The Daily Union Appeal." It was a "gally" undertaking, this publishing a daily paper in the enemy's country without money or credit, or any special stock of brains; but an editor from "The Avalanche" was engaged, by the name of Casuran, or something similar, and "The Appeal" was launched.

Printers were plentiful; in fact, they could be found asleep on the office steps at all hours of the day and night, and "cases" were constantly changing hands, for as fast as one was $4 or $5 ahead he made a break for "God's country," as it was termed, meaning the north. In consequence of this intense desire to reach the north there was a great kick every pay day against accepting Tennessee money, and it was a hard pull and frequently an impossible one to get any other kind with which to meet their demands. It is recalled as well that the gang at The Avalanche office, which did the presswork for The Appeal, were also terribly exercised about that Tennessee money, and occasionally they had cause to be fearful that none was coming.

How The Daily Union Memphis Appeal managed to live from day to day is a mystery even at this late date, but it did in some way, and many a printer blessed it for the opportunity given of a chance to secure honest money and a trip to God's country, safe from war's alarms.

The correspondents of the great northern dailies, then waiting for an advance of the army, also occasionally volunteered an "intellectual etching," and The Appeal was not without weight and influence—while it lasted. My connection, however, was limited, for in a few weeks there came marching orders for the regiment, and without giving a thought to the possibility of getting a detail to remain in Memphis—these were my callow days—I turned over my share to a chaplain and joined my command. Whatever was the fate of The Union Appeal is unknown, unless it died from pure inanition.—Indianapolis News.

Equality Among the Gypsies.

In all social matters perfect equality is a living principle. The richest gypsy is of no more account socially than my friend, Bob, the tinker, here, whose big heart is always turning his purse wrong side out; and no one is left out of counsel or frolic on account of poverty or misfortune; while mutual help, one to another, is universal among them.

The greatest affairs among them are weddings and funerals. The courting—always under the severest espionage of parents—is usually done in the summer upon the road. When the winter quarters are reached the weddings follow in rapid succession, and furnish boundless recourse for feast and frolic; while some of the gypsy funerals, and especially where the camp effects of the dead are burned, which ceremony I have twice witnessed, are occasions of the greatest solemnity, though always followed by merry-makings out of consideration for the mourning ones, who must be given new spirit and interest in life.

But in all things the gypsy is temperate. Excess is abhorred. Whether in the city winter frolic, at the gayest wedding, in all singing, dancing and merry making, at rout and reel on the green sward by the flickering fires and under the glowing stars, outcast that he is, there is a geniality, loyalty, cleanliness and goodness of just, right and equable degree and kind in his every day life to those he owns and loves which cannot but be contemplated with gratification and delight, whether it be found in your home or in his.—Edgar L. Wakeman's Mystic Lake Letter.

They Both Took Tips.

Near Central park there lives a woman who occupies a comfortable apartment and seems to possess a competence. She rises late and has her breakfasts sent daily from a neighboring cafe. To the waiter she is liberal, tipping him frequently.

Not long ago this waiter, when passing along Third avenue, was accosted by a beggar woman. She was wretchedly dressed, repulsively ugly and squalid. The waiter gave her a mutilated coin and the beggar thanked him volubly. The next day the waiter received the same mutilated coin from the woman to whom he carried breakfast. He was astounded. He could not believe that the woman who tipped in so regal a manner and the wretched beggar of the avenue were one and the same person.

He concluded to experiment. Marking a coin, he took a position on the avenue. Soon the same woman that had begged from him the night before asked him for alms. He gave her the marked piece of money. Two days afterwards he received it from the woman of the apartment when she paid for her breakfast. He then accused her of mendicancy. She, discovering that she was cleverly caught, laughed and said: "We both take tips, you and I."

The waiter relished the joke. He continues to serve her. She continues to tip him and to prey upon the public.—The Epoch.

Lord Eldon's Murder Case.

I have heard some very extraordinary cases of murder tried. I remember in one where I was counsel for a long time the evidence did not appear to touch the prisoner at all, and he looked about him with the most perfect unconcern, seeming to think himself quite safe. At last the surgeon was called, who swore that the murdered man had been killed by a shot in the head, and he produced the matted hair and stuff cut from and taken out of the wound. It was all hardened with blood. A basin of warm water was brought into court, and as the blood gradually softened a piece of printed paper appeared—the wadding of the gun—which proved to be half of a ballad. The other half had been found in the prisoner's pocket when he was taken. He was hanged.—Detroit Free Press.

RICHER THAN CRŒSUS.

Money Kings Who Flourished Before the Goulds and Vanderbilts.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century the Rothschilds were hardly known outside of Frankfort. There they had a little shop in the Judengasse, wherein they sold old coins. They have risen to a fame that extends throughout the world, and they have attained a power which transcends that of Emperors or Czars.

Has this amazing rise had its source in greed, in oppression, in the heaping up and holding fast to riches? By no means. Such qualities alone would never have enabled men to do what the Rothschilds have done. A well-known New Yorker, long-noted for his success, once said: "The secret of wealth does not lie in knowing when to hold on to money; it consists in knowing when to let it go."

What is more they have not let it go solely to Kings and potentates whose gratitude when prosperous might be trusted to reward the services extended in adversity; they have let it go in open-handed and even lavish benevolence in numberless cases where there was little, if any, chance of their ever being repaid at all. No banking or mercantile house in the world has ever given away so much money in quiet, unostentatious charity as the house of Rothschild, although the splendid gift of the American, George Peabody, to the poor of London can never in this connection be forgotten.

In 1804 Mayer Amschel Rothschild, the head of the house, had become rich and prominent enough to contract with the Danish Government for the issue of a loan of 4,000,000 thalers. He had previously been made court banker to the Landgrave of Hesse. The latter, on the approach of the invading French, subsequently left his entire fortune in Rothschild's care. The French pillaged in every direction and the Landgrave fled for safety. It was years before he again spoke face to face with Rothschild.

He took it for granted his money was gone. "Not so," said Rothschild, "every penny is ready for you, with five per cent. interest." He had contrived to hide the coin in a cellar in wine casks. Afterwards he sent it to his son Nathan in London. Nathan speculated with immense success, and not only possessed the money to return, but had amassed a fortune by its use besides.

Mayer Rothschild died in 1812, aged sixty-seven, leaving five sons—Anselm Mayer, Salomon, Nathan, James and Carl. The first staid in Frankford. The others founded new branches of the parent banking house in Vienna, London, Paris and Naples. It is this famous penta rchy which, carrying out the parental plans, have made the name of Rothschild what it is. Their mother, Gudula, lived to the great age of ninety-six—that is, to the year 1849.

Every body has heard the tales of how the Rothschilds got the first news in London of the result of the battle of Waterloo; of their frequent employment of carrier pigeons on this and other occasions; of their "corners" in mercury, grain and many things besides; of their adroit use of notorious enemies on the Stock Exchange and elsewhere; of their (this is imputable individually to Nathan, however) refusing to operate with men, however clever, if they were unlucky, and so on. Another odd thing about Nathan was his careful omission to state in his will the amount of his wealth and the precautions he took to prevent this from becoming otherwise known when he died. "I am as good as you," he said to the Duc de Montmorenci when his title was granted. "You style yourself the first Christian Baron, and I am the first Jew Baron."

"One secret of Nathan Rothschild's success," says the author of "The Stock Exchange," "was the secrecy with which he shrouded all his transactions, and the tortuous policy with which he misled those who watched him the keenest. If he possessed news calculated to make the funds rise he would commission the broker who acted on his behalf to sell half a million. The shoal of men who usually follow the movements of others sold with him. The news soon passed through Capal court that Rothschild was bearing the market and the funds fell. Men looked doubtingly at one another, a general panic spread, bad news was looked for, and these united agencies sank the price. This was the result expected, and other brokers, not usually employed by Rothschild, bought all they could at the reduced rate. By the time this was accomplished the good news had arrived; the pressure ceased, the funds rose instantly, and Mr. Rothschild reaped his reward."

It is proper to say of Nathan's son Lionel, who subsequently, at the early age of twenty-eight, became the head of the London house, that he never practiced devices like the foregoing ones. He felt that the Rothschilds had outgrown the need for them, if there ever had been any such need, and his transactions, vast as they often were, included no detail that could be called a trick or that was inconsistant with the loftiest standards of commercial honor. He died in 1879, after doing a vast amount of good, and the destinies of the London house fell into the hands of his three sons—Sir Nathaniel (since Lord Rothschild), Leopold and Alfred.

It was in the person of Baron Lionel de Rothschild that the ancient system that excluded Jews from the British Parliament was successfully exploded. Baron Lionel entering the House of Commons in 1858 and representing the city of London there almost interruption up to 1874.—Cor. Chicago Times.

—Friedrich Froebel founded the first kindergarten at Blackenburg, Thuringia, in 1837. It became the model for similar institutions in many parts of Germany and other countries. The name means child's garden or child's school. Froebel's system was at first regarded as dangerous, from the great freedom allowed children, and in 1851 a kindergarten established by his nephew was closed by the Prussian Government.—Philadelphia Press.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Graphic Account of a Most Wonderful Occurrence.

[Kingston Correspondence Boston Globe.]

An event has taken place in this city so remarkable in its nature that I venture to describe it in full. The principal in the affair is Mr. Jere Smith, son of Mr. Cornelius B. Smith, of the State Insurance Department at Albany, who is well known, stands very high and is in every way reliable. I have had a long and most interesting interview with him, which I transcribed and send you in his own words, trusting it may prove valuable to your readers:

"During last year," he said, "I could not understand what was the trouble with me. I had always felt strong and hearty, but I gradually became aware that something was undermining me. I first began to feel drowsy and then in a day or two I would be unnaturally wide awake. Strange pains would come in different parts of my body. My head did not ache much but it usually felt heavy. I was sometimes hungry and sometimes I hated food, while my sleep was very irregular. I could not understand what it meant, but thought it might pass away after a time; but it did not. I don't see how I could have been so blind, but I suppose I was like most people who are troubled in the same way, and thought it nothing dangerous. After a while I noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing; that they were dark at times and very light at others. Finally I began to gain flesh, but I knew it was unnatural and that I was bloating. This frightened me, and I consulted physicians, who were very kind in their attentions, but did not help me in the least. My father than went with me to New York, and we consulted the eminent Dr. Keyes, who treated me for several weeks. At that time my condition was horrible. I was bloated from head to foot, it was almost impossible to breathe, and I could not sleep. In several places on my body the skin burst open, so great was the pressure from within. The agony I endured was indescribable. Then the doctor told me my case was hopeless, that I had Bright's disease in its worst form, and that I had only a few day to live."

PICTURE OF HEALTH.

"Fortunately I had a friend who accompanied me and would not see me die without a struggle. He did not urge, he insisted on my making one more effort, and I did so. I noticed an improvement at once; in four days the swelling greatly decreased and the pain wholly ceased. I continued to improve, and am a well man to-day, and owe my life to the marvelous effects of that wonderful preparation, Hunt's Remedy. I believe this is the greatest medicine that was ever discovered by man, and I only wish the whole world might know what it has done for me."

PICTURE OF MISERY.

"I know there are thousands of people troubled as I was and in just as great danger, but they do not realize it. Bright's disease is the most deceptive, the most horrible malady the world has ever known. It has no settled symptoms, but assumes every imaginable form. I had no idea it was Bright's disease that was undermining me until I began to bloat, and now that I am well and enjoying life, I feel like telling everybody about my miraculous escape. Is it any wonder this town is aroused over my resurrection."

Such is the account of probably as narrow an escape from death as was ever known. The first symptoms which Mr. Smith felt were such as many others feel but do not consider worth noticing. It is plain, however, that the early indications of a dangerous disease cannot be trifled with, but must be met promptly, and by such a remedy as has been proven to be indeed a friend in time of need. A STREAK OF LUCK.

A Citizen of Little Rock Draws $5,000 in The Louisiana State Lottery and Buys Out His Employer—A Run of Luck.

Mr. J. P. Schulze, the tailor, at 213 West Markham Street, who, on the 9th inst. drew one-tenth of the second capital prize of $50,000 in The Louisiana State Lottery, is pursuing the even tenor of his way. His good fortune did by no means turn his head or send him on a celebration with the boys. He is a young unmarried man, came from Saxony five years ago, and two years since moved from Atlanta to Little Rock. He obtained employment with E. J. Owens, a leading merchant tailor. After receiving the $5,000 from New Orleans he bought out Mr. Owens, and is now employing him as his cutter. He has a large business, and being both careful and enterprising, will, of course, continue to build it up. In conversing with a Gazette reporter he said: "Three drawings back was my first venture. I went in with five other boys, bought twenties and drew $10. At the next drawing we sent in the $10 and drew $35. This gave us $5.75 each. The other boys kept their money. I put the 75 cts. in my pocket, returned the $5 for tickets in the August drawing and drew $5,000." He had a good run of luck and has made the best of it.—Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette, Aug. 25.

WRETCHED, INDEED,

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint Nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of the blood and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most distressing, as it is one of the most common, of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grand specific for fever and ague.

"A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT."

Catarrh is not simply an inconvenience, unpleasant to the sufferer and disgusting to others—it is an advanced outpost of approaching disease of worse type. Do not neglect its warning; it brings deadly evils in its train. Before it is too late, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It reaches the seat of the ailment, and is the only thing that will. You may dose yourself with quack medicines 'till it is too late—'till the streamlet becomes a resistless torrent. It is the matured invention of a scientific physician. WHAT THEY ARE GOOD FOR.

BRANDRETH'Z PILLS are the best medicine known.

First—They are purely vegetable, in fact a medicated food.

Second—The same dose always produces the same effect,—other purgatives require increased doses and finally cease acting.

Third—They purify the blood.

Fifth—They stimulate the liver and carry off vitiated bile and other depraved secretions.

The first two or three doses tell the story. The skin becomes clear; the eye bright; the mind active; digestion is restored; costiveness cured; the animal vigor is recruited and all decay arrested.

"CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED."

Dr. J. S. Combs, Owensville, Ohio says: "I have given SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites to four patients with better results than seemed possible with any remedy. FOR TABLE USE. FOR DAIRY USE.

It is more highly refined than any Salt. All harmful ingredients found in most Salt are removed: therefore it is the safest to use.

It is free from lime and pan scales, requires no sifting. It is the strongest and altogether the most economical.

It dissolves very easily, therefore does not spoil butter by the gritty particles, as often happens with other Salt.

Common Salt is too risky for anybody to use in making Butter. The poorest families use so little Salt on their table that they can afford to get that which is the most healthy and the best.

PROFESSIONAL SPIES.

A Calling That Is Considered Infamous by Thousands of Good People.

Although the changes wrought by time and social progress have elevated into respectability many professions anciently regarded as infamous, and converted into mere baseless prejudices objections once by no means without foundation, some are still honestly and wholesomely detested.

That of a spy, for instance. Involving ideas of deceit, lying and treachery, with which it is but too often associated, it is at best tolerated as a disagreeable necessity. No man or woman likes to be called a spy, and to be regarded as a professional spy is to be infamous all the world over.

The purpose of the spy is not that of the detective only, who is secret and watchful, but not necessarily treacherous. A genuine spy makes it his heartless and cruel business to win confidence only to betray it—to enjoy hospitality as a guest that he may bring down ruin upon his host and misery upon his family. He professes friendship to those he is anxious to disgrace, and affection where his only intentions are those of cold-blooded malignity. What could be more vile or base?

And yet spies of the very worst type have existed in all classes of society and in all times. In Russia to this day there are men and women of the highest rank who are not ashamed to act as spies, secretly engaged by the chiefs of police, and others who do such dirty work as amateurs merely to serve political ends, those of the government or those of the secret assassins, called Nihilists.

While the Bourbons were on the French throne, and all through the reigns of Napoleon the Great and Napoleon the Little, spies abounded. In Austria they were for many years not less abundant, and also in Italy. Nor are these hateful pests to be found only in their own country. They travel to other lands in pursuit of their victims, plotting and scheming to get them within their craftily created toils. Even their employers regard them with suspicion, and those they most benefit are often those who regard them with the greatest contempt and disgust. In the reign of Louis XVIII. the Duc Decazes was once atacked, as head of the Parisian police, by a member of the Chamber of Deputies, who pointed out as disgraceful to his department and their government the vile characters he employed as spies for detecting crimes. The Duc replied, sarcastically: "Show me the honest men who will undertake their duties and I promise to employ them!" The retort was a crusher to which the Deputy had no reply, for spies were then regarded as absolute State necessities.

During the last French Empire you could not venture even in any private assembly and utter safely any political opinion if they chanced to be antagonistic to the Government, and it is said that this policy was but a continuance of that adopted during the latter part of the reign of King Louis Phillippe, when a complete network of espionage surrounded every social circle and had its representative in almost every home. It was said that no reunion, private or public, composed of more than a certain number of people, ever took place in Paris without the cognizance and surveillance of the police. No matter what the rank or position of the giver of a feast might be, he was commanded to forward a certain number of tickets to the Prefecture for guests who were sure to arrive, courteous in manner, fashionable in dress and apparently highly educated and very agreeable men and momen of the highest respectability, but spies every one.—London Tid-Bits.

SPOOLS FOR THREAD.

The Wood and Machinery Employed in Their Manufacture.

Birch wood is preferred. The birch is first sawed into sticks four or five feet long and seven-eighths of an inch to three inches square, according to the size of the spool to be produced. These sticks are thoroughly seasoned. They are sawed into short blocks, and the blocks are dried in a hot-air kiln. At the time they are sawed a hole is bored through them. One whirl of the little block against sharp knives, shaped by a pattern, makes the spools at the rate of one a second.

A small boy feeds the spool machine, simply placing the blocks in a spout, and throwing out the knotty or defective stock. The machine is automatic, but can not do the sorting. The spools are revolved rapidly in drums, and polish themselves. For some purposes they are dyed yellow, red or black. They are made in hundreds of shapes and sizes.

When one sees on a spool of thread "one hundred yards" or "two hundred yards," these words do not signify that the thread has been measured, but that the spool has been gauged, and is supposed to contain so much thread.

When a silk or linen or a cotton firm wants a spool made, it sends a pattern to a spool-maker. This pattern gives the size and shape of the barrel, and of the head and bevel. These patterns determine the amount of thread that the spool will hold.—Golden Days.

A Great Institution.

"A Dakota man was traveling in the East and got into conversation with a man who appeared to be a capitalist. After some time the Eastern man said: "You say that your town has a population of one thousand, twenty stores, ten banks, eight lumber yards and six saloons. That's good, so far, but is there any thing that is permanent, any thing that really brings wealth and business into the place, any one institution or industry to which you people can point with pride?"

"Stranger," replied the Dakota man, slowly and impressively, "there is. We have the finest half-mile race-track in the Territory!"—Dakota Bell.

GATHERING THE GOLD.

Methods Adopted for Getting the Metal Out of the Free Milling Ore.

At Breckenridge, Col., the other day, I saw the Jumbo stamp-mill, and there got a fair insight into the method of getting the gold out of what is called free milling ore. The stuff that comes from the mine is first put through a crusher, which breaks it up fine, and the product is then run through rollers which pulverizes it, though, perhaps, coarsely. From the rollers it falls to the lower floor, upon which the mortars are located. At the Jumbo mill the dirt is fed to the stamps by hand; in other mills it falls through chutes which work automatically, and never feed more than is necessary at a time. The stamps are arranged in batteries of five stamps each. They work up and down in oak casements, and their motions are regulated by cams on a shaft geared to the motive machinery. The stamps weigh from 450 to 900 pounds, according to the character of the ore treated. Water flows into the mortars and out of them down tables to the waste flumes which carry the refuse away. Stamps in this country run as low as thirty drops a minute, and seldom over sixty; in California they drop seventy to 100 times a minute. The two kinds of mills are distinguished by the rapidity or slowness of their drops, and those used here are all built by Peter McFarland, and are called Gilpin County mills, from McFarland's home place, which is in Gilpin County, while the others are known as California mills. They cost from $350 for a five-stamp prospecting mill to $50,000 for a 100-stamp mill. The dirt being fed into the mortars is pounded and pounded by the stamps; the silica, porphyry and other refuse is carried off by the water, but the gold is caught by two copper plates coated with quicksilver that line the sides of the mortar; any of the precious metal that escapes from the mortar may be caught on the 4x8 feet copper plates that are quicksilver coated and lie on the table over which the refuse is carried. Some of the gold gets away, of course but the Jumbo saves as much as 80 per cent. of its gold, and McFarland is now building mills which he claims will save 95 per cent. of the assayed value of ore.

Concentrators are used where the ore is too low grade to pay for smelting in its crude state. By concentrating a $10 or $12 ore may be handled so that the mill product, which will represent six or seven tons in ore, may be worth $70 to $80 per ton. The scheme is very simple. The crushed and rolled ore is fed through chutes to revolving screens ranging in size from three-fourths inch openings to one-eighth. Each of these screens has a trough and a chute which feeds a jig box. The jig boxes work on an eccentric and keep up a spasm-like motion. There is a screen in each about six inches from the top, and this screen is covered with lead or other heavy ore material, which prevents the silica, porphyry and other light stuff from going through. The motion shakes the metal to the bottom of the boxes, where it remains until valves in the bottom are opened and the concentrates are removed. This machine, like all the others called by different names, and known as trumps, frue vanners, buddles, bump plates, etc., is an application of the well-known law of specific gravity; the heaviest material falls to the bottom in all these machines, and the light stuff goes dancing away on the water. The bump plate, which is claimed to be a new invention by Peter McFarland, is a large steel plate set at an incline of a few degrees; the ore is fed to the lower part of the place from a water trough, and as the high end bumps it carries forward and up over the top of the plate the heavy concentrates.—*Cor. BETTER THAN CORK.

Buoyancy of Life-Saving Apparatus Made of Reindeer Hair.

A Norwegian engineer, Herr W. C. Moller, of Drammen, Norway, having had his attention drawn to the extreme buoyancy of reindeer hair, has succeeded in constructing various articles of this material for saving life at sea, with which some interesting experiments were recently made. The first life-saving object tried was one which can be used on board ship as a chair, bedstead or couch, but which in case of need may be converted into a small boat. This apparatus was found capable of supporting three full grown men in the water, although only intended to bear two. Another object tried was a suit made entirely of reindeer hair, and covering the entire body except the face, and in which a man floated on the water without having to make the slightest movement. It was found perfectly impossible to dive in the dress. The third object tried was a door-mat made of reindeer-hair, and this supported a man easily, although he was dressed in full out-door clothing. On comparing life-belts made of reindeer-hair with similar ones of cork, it was found that the former was much lighter than the latter, a very important advantage to an exhausted drowning person when he has to put it on in the water. Herr Moller's assertion that reindeer-hair is capable of supporting a weight ten times its own was fully borne out by these experiments. It should be pointed out that jackets, belts, etc., made of reindeer-hair are soft and pliable, and that they impart a good deal of warmth.—London Iron.

—"Dear me!" exclaimed a red-haired girl to her brother, "I see that bonnets are now made of paper. What next, I wonder!" "Well, sis, if you put one on I think a conflagration would come next.

LEARNING TO SWIM.

An Important Accomplishment That Should Be Acquired by Everybody.

Learning to swim requires intellectual as well as physical effort; the former is rarely used, and the consequence is that it sometimes takes months, and often years, to learn. The great trouble in learning is the nervousness that every one feels at first about getting the head under water, and all efforts are used in keeping the head out. The experience of the writer in teaching boys to swim has convinced him that this is wrong. A good swimmer should be able to swim under water as well as at the surface, and the first step in learning should be to get accustomed to having the head under water. The learner should at first have all fear taken away, and then the rest is easy. The writer has taught quite a number of boys to swim, and in many cases they have learned at the very first time trying. His method is as follows: Take the learner into the water, clear water if it can be found, about waist deep, so that he knows that he can recover his footing at any time he chooses. The first effort should be to hold the breath and submerge the face, keeping the eyes open, or better still, if he can do it at first, submerge the whole head. This should be practiced until no difficulty is experienced in keeping the eyes open, and excluding the water from the mouth and nose, and until all nervousness is gone. There need be no fear of injury to the eyes or ears. Then the learner should select an object, say fifteen feet away, plunge boldly under the water, and make the best of his way to it by swimming under water with his eyes open, and fixed upon the point selected. In almost all cases, his mind being relieved from fear, he will instinctively adopt the methods calculated to accomplish the end desired, while, on the other hand, a nervous effort to keep the head out of water fixes the mind upon that alone, and the effort is made in that direction, rather than in learning to swim.

Some instruction in making the stroke, however, should be given. The finger ends should be brought together at the breast, with the thumbs side by side between the palms of the hands and level with their upper edge; with the hands in this position, the arms should be extended to their full length, when the backs of the hands should be rolled inward, bringing the thumbs down, until the backs form the letter V, the thumbs being back to back and the edges of the forefingers touching. The learner is now in position for making the most important movement in learning to swim, and this is made by sweeping the extended arms and "dishing" hands rapidly around until they touch the sides, when they should again be brought to the breast ready for another stroke. There are few readers who have not seen the movement of the frog in the water, and the aim should be to imitate it in the movement of the legs. In the recovering stroke the movement should be slow; that of the propeling stroke rapid by comparison.

Only about two and one-half pounds of lifting force, in addition to the buoyancy of the body, is required to hold the head entirely out of the water.—O. Guthrie, in Chicago Herald.

STIRRING ADVENTURES.

In the earlier days of Colorado mining camps there were some very stirring scenes and adventures, and the tenderfeet were broken in without much ceremony sometimes. I remember visiting a certain camp when it was quite new, and saving a man's life the very first night. He was in the bed next to mine in the tent, and about midnight an order came for him to get up, as he was wanted. He was asked to lose no time, as he was to be summarily tried for having shot a man. I jumped up and declared that the man was innocent, but I was shown the muzzle of a 42-caliber and told to lie down. However, as there was no help for it, I said I would accompany the accused, who was nearly frightened out of his wits. We went down to one who was styled "the Justice," and the complaint was lodged that the prisoner had shot a man. As he could say nothing in his own behalf, I spoke for him, and stated that at the time the shooting was said to have occurred the accused was soundly sleeping. Just then a stranger appeared and announced that he did the shooting, and proved that it was in self-defense, and the matter was all settled. Next day we were treated to a little "fun." A tin can was tied to an unwelcome visitor's coat-tail, and he was told to "git." He lost no time in striking a 2:40 gait, and as he flew down the road the can dangling behind him was a mark for all the rest of the boys to "take a crack at." More than one of them hit the can, too, and I am not sure but that I made it quiver myself. We thought it was funny, and so did the poor victim—perhaps.—G. Trumbull, in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—A young woman appeared at the post-office a day or two since, and passing a letter over to a clerk asked how much it would cost to send it to its destination. The letter was weighed and the price announced. The young woman sighed heavily as she remarked: "Well, it's his picture, and I don't want it now, and he shall have it if it costs me 25 cents." She didn't explain why she had no further use for it.—Taunton Gazette.

THE CHANGE WAS EFFECTIVE.

Burdette Tells of a New and Fetching Kind of Barber.

"OUR beard is very soft and easy to cut," remarked the barber, passing his trusty cimeter across the cheek of the condemned man.

The victim gasped, but was silent; there was an air of originality about the remark that he did not easily understand.

The unhappy man, bewildered by a new order of things which passed finite comprehension, confessed his guilt.

"I thought so," said the Inquisitor, "because your face is so smooth, so free from cuts or scratches, and your mustache is so evenly trimmed. A man always knows better himself than any one else the style of beard most becoming to him. Your hair has been trimmed most tastefully," he added, "but, of course," with a little laugh—"you did not do that yourself?"

The Martyr moaned feebly, and confessed that his hair was last cut in a little country barber shop down in Bluejeans county.

"Yes," said the Executioner, "some of the best artists in our business are in the country shops. A man learns his trade thoroughly in the city, and then sensibly goes into business where all custom is cash, rents low, expenses light; he can do just as fine work and make more money. I think of going into the country myself in a few years. Your scalp is very clean and healthy, sir."

"Your head really does not need shampooing," said the barber, for it was indeed he, "and the tonic I do not keep. These so called tonics and hair renewers are the worst thing in the world for the hair. Clear water is a better dressing than patent renewers, and you can take better care of your scalp yourself than any barber can do for you, if you"——

"YES," SAID THE EXECUTIONER.

He paused and bent to look into the strangely quiet face of the man in the chair. He was dead.

MUSIC IN THE AIR.

Like a katydid singing a mandolin's ringing just two doors above with its "zum-zum-zum," and out in the street half a dozen boys beat on the head of a cask for a big bass drum. In the room just below, at the big piano, a maiden is playing the tra-la-la-loo; and the children upstairs, in trios and pairs, are practicing songs that are noisy and new. And over it all, through kitchen and hall, too bass for a shriek and too shrill for a squall, like a calliope yowling, our Bridget is howling the one line she's mastered of "Lanigan's Ball." "Oh, Phebus Apollo! they warble and holloa, they shriek up to Izzard and growl down to A, they start in the morning without any warning and their second wind comes at the close of the day. Why, the very deaf mute makes a noise with a flute, and a blind man seesaws on a loud violin; and people born dumb still can tinkle and strum on things that are rattling and noisy as sin. So their music and songs go it hammer and tongs, old women and maidens and old men and boys, and I'm mad with delight from morning to night—I was born in a mill and am fond of a noise.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Spoiling the Lord's Work.

A devout and placid faced Quaker lady was talking in the cars to a brilliantly handsome young woman, whose manner was in the sharpest possible contrast to the serenity of the elder lady. The conversation was carried on in tones waxing continually higher, so that one could not help overhearing the elder say, in a voice raised, but still calm:

"Thee must remember, my dear, that he is still thy husband and that the Lord made him."

"Perhaps the Lord made him," the young woman retorted with instant and malicious readiness, "but the devil must have got hald of the mold before it was cold! The man has his finger marks all over!"—Providence Journal.

A Fatal Omission.

Managing Editor—Why, what's the matter?

Editor in Chief—You have neglected to insert the usual notice that Jake Sharp passed a sleepless night, and that omission has ruined our status as a great metropolitan daily.—Texas Siftings.

The Reason Why.

'Twas on New England's sandy, wave washed shore.
The place: Nantsaket; her name: Lenore.
Perhaps a week I'd known her, hardly more,
But I madly worshiped fair Lenore.

Bronze brown her hair, her lovely eyes the same;
But neither flowing locks nor eyes could name
That nameless charm, that witchery that came
From added graces feeding beauty's flame.

Yes, I worshiped her! And she? Ah, well-a-day!
She may have hated me, who can say?
For her eyes shunned mine, and she turned away
When I offered my heart in my hand one day.

No, I've never married. The reason why?
'Twas not because she had passed me by,
But simply because of this: three times have I
Proposed, and nary once received an aye.

LIGHT WEIGHT COINS.

An Ancient Saw Which Prevents These from Being Redeemed.

"When is five dollars not five dollars?" was the conundrum hurled at the head of a reporter by Edwin L. Abbett. He is a well-known attorney, active in politics, and the brother of ex-Governor Leon Abbett, of New Jersey. When the reporter had confessed that he was ignorant enough to believe that five dollars was always five dollars, he replied: "Not if it is light weight. Let me tell you a story of my experience with a five dollar gold piece. Mind you, it was a gold piece—the coin of the realm. It had been given me by a client, with a number of other pieces and some paper money. I don't know at what bank he procured it, but I know that he went to some bank to get the cash for me, and returned with this piece among others. The banks pay them out, but they don't take them in when they know it, as I found out later. There is a restaurant near my place of business where I have little business transactions occasionally with the proprietor or the man behind the counter. During the day this five dollar gold piece went over the counter. The handsome young man with the white apron balanced it in his palm for a minute and then handed it back, saying: 'It's light weight sir, we can't pass them.' I was staggered. I thought a five dollar gold piece was good for something for its intrinsic value at least. But after satisfying myself that it was light weight I put it back into my pocket and paid the bill out of other funds. It occurred to me that I ought to test the passing qualities of the coin at least once more, so I tried it at the cigar store on my way up Broadway. It was no go. Then I sallied into the Park National Bank. I told the cashier frankly that I understood the coin to be light weight, and asked him to give me its value. 'We can't do any thing with it,' said he. But he suggested that I might be relieved at the sub-Treasury. By this time I was somewhat mad, and I determined to follow that five-dollar gold piece to some kind of a resting-place if it took all day. At the Treasury there was less encouragement than any place I had yet entered. They said they could not exchange it or redeem it or do any thing with it. This struck me as a strange condition of things. As I went along Nassau street in a brown study my eye happened to light on the sign of an office on John street. There is an announcement there that old gold will be bought. I walked in and held out the coin. 'It's short weight,' was all I said. 'So I see,' said the man in attendance, as he held it in his hand. 'What can you do with it?' I asked. 'Melt it,' was his reply. He gave me $4 70 for it, the value of the gold. Curiosity possessed me to know what would be done with it. He said the gold would be used for manufacturing purposes. Then it struck me that there is somewhere on the statute books an iron-clad law that no United States coin shall be melted up for manufacturing purposes under heavy penalties. I looked the law up. There it is an old law, very old, but I believe still in force. If I am correct about it, do you see the situation? The Government issues a gold coin. It says it shall be of such a weight, but it must necessarily get worn and abraded in constant circulation. Then it says it shall not be redeemable in any way, shall become worthless in circulation because it is not redeemable, and yet shall not be converted into any thing else. My gold piece bore date of 1847. I think on the whole I prefer greenbacks to coin, especially short-weight coin."—N. Y. Tribune.

A Race for Life.

Mr. Inglis, a resident of Travancore, India, had a narrow escape from death the other day, having to run for his life before a rogue elephant. The animal was among a small clump of trees close to the jungle path by which Mr. Inglis had to pass. After a careful survey of the "monarch," that gentleman dared to throw stones at him. The first one missed, and only caused the animal to cock its ears to catch the slightest sound. The second went straighter and hit him right in the eye. The elephant made a salaam-like movement with his trunk, accompanied with a terrific roar of anger, and made straight for his assailant at a furious pace. Mr Inglis, however, was too clever for him, and ran very fast, but, in suddenly turning a corner round a huge tree, he stumbled and fell. The elephant was close on him with outstretched trunk, the point of which at one time touched Mr. Inglis's coat, and had his forefoot already raised to crush him; but the animal's head being caught at this instant by the tendrils of a climbing plant which had suspended itself from the branches above, he turned away, leaving Mr. Inglis frightened, but with no limb broken. The rogue is a great terror on the hills.—N. Y. Sun.

"Lillie Brown! What for?" he asked, astonished.

"I hate her."—N. Y. Sun.

CIGARETTE-SMOKING.

A Practice Which, When Carried to Excess, Results in Death.

It is perfectly well known to physcians that excessive cigarette-smoking does do a great deal of harm. In the first place, people who smoke cigarettes do more smoking than those who use cigars and pipes. If a man is going to leave his office to run across the street for a minute, or is walking to the corner to take a horse car, he will not light a cigar; he knows it must be thrown away immediately, and a sense of economy restrains him. But if he is in the habit of rolling cigarettes, he may take a whiff at any time, and is pretty sure to be always doing it. The result is that where a non-smoker has the benefit of some fresh air in the lungs whenever he is out of doors, the cigarette smoker takes in air charged with nicotine.

Smokers of cigars and pipes do not, as a rule, inhale smoke, but cigarrette smokers do. Why this should be, it is difficult to say, but it is an acknowledged fact that it is so. It is thus easy to see why the results of cigarrette smoking should be so baneful. The air in reaching the lungs and the blood goes through the windpipe and the bronchial tubes. Between the windpipe and the lungs the bronchial tubes keep dividing into two. This incessant subdivision reduces them ultimately to great fineness. In the lungs they are scarcely wider than a hair. At the end of each bronchial tube there is what is called a pneumonic globule. It is in this globule that the air and blood meet; it is here that the blood becomes "aerated," or oxygenized. In the case of men who inhale the smoke of cigarettes, these globules, instead of receiving fresh air, receive air charged with nicotine. In order to know the extent to which the lungs receive the poisoned air it is only necessary to remember that the area of these pneumonic globules is some thousand and two hundred square feet.

There is a popular notion that the paper wrappings of cigarettes do the mischief. The paper perhaps does burn the mouth. The wrappers of some Turkish cigarettes are impregnated with opium, and these, of course, do harm; but that is not the fault of the cigarette. The trouble with cigarettes is that people will smoke cigarettes at times when they will not smoke cigars, and that cigarette smokers thus use more tobacco than other people, and that cigarette smokers inhale tobacco and take into the lungs air charged with nicotine.—N. Y. Times.

BUTTER FOR EXPORT.

That Used by Uncle Sam Must Keep Sweet for Three Years.

"One hundred thousand pounds of butter in air tight packages, is what Uncle Sam's navy requires every year," said an old butter packer. "A special tin package is used," he added, "which is hermetically sealed, either by soldering, or by employing a machine constructed for the purpose, and we are obliged to guarantee that the butter will keep sweet for three years. We use a similar package for all butter exported to the tropics. It is a round tin can, which is filled from the bottom and sealed by a machine. It is made in all sizes, from half a pound to twenty-eight pounds. Sizes above five pounds are provided with a pail and an extra cover, so that they can be used as a pail when empty. The utility of the package is of some moment in many parts of South America and the West Indies that the butter goes to. That they are appreciated may be inferred from the fact that I have seen ladies use them to boil laces in. We send the very finest butter and also the poorest, according to the demand. In some parts of the West Indies butter is too expensive and the inhabitants use lard, while portions of Venezuela, Costa Rica and San Domingo take the best butter that that they can get. The export of butter to the tropics is a specialty in the hands of two or three houses, while the European trade is scattered among a large number. We send butter to England and Germany in the original packages. A good quality is called for, but the high price of best creamery keeps it at home, and only the fair grades reach the other side. A few years ago refrigerator compartments were put in all the large steamers, but they were too expensive and have nearly all been removed. Now shippers wait for cool weather and take their chances. The oleomargarine scare hurt our butter trade in England, but that is over now, and the bad season in Denmark and Ireland has made the demand active."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Two Rich Cattle Queens.

The richest widow in Colorado was the wife of the late John W. Iliff, who was known some years ago as the cattle king of Colorado. Iliff left about 100,000 head of cattle, and it is said that his widow manages his estate as well as any business man could. She went to Colorado as a sewing-machine agent, though she came of a wealthy family and could have remained home doing nothing. She there met Iliff and married him, and I doubt not the experience she obtained in connection with the sewing-machine aids her in the management of her fortune. Speaking of cattle, there is a cattle queen in Texas, near Corpus Christi—Mrs. Rogers—said to be worth $1,000,000, and who has many times as much stock as Job had in his most prosperous days. Her husband is a preacher, but Mrs. Rogers manages the business. She sells the stock herself, buys all the supplies, and can ride a horse as well as any of the many cowboys whom she has in her employ.—Boston Traveler.

Second Class. Those dying business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $5 per and for each bowling alley, $15 per quarter for each alley, but no license must be granted for a term of less than three months.

SEC. 4. For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a caravan or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $7. And for each show for pay of any figures, jugglers necromancers, magicians, wire or rope dancing, and sleight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this Section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable entertainments, by any amateur dramatic association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter

SEC. 7 Every person who sells spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and make the following payments:

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,000 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter

SEC. 8 Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, (except Agricultural or viticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale under license) and all persons who keep horses or carriages for hire (except such as are used in the transportation of goods) must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, license, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector; such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates.

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 per month or more constitute the first class and must pay a licen e of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $1,250 and less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $4 50 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $1,250 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $3 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon measure.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines.

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $5 per month; and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares, or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $15 per month.

SEC. 11. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or bull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for hire must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and pay therefor as follows:

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $75.

Second. At $75 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $60.

Third. At $50 and less than $75 constitute the third and require a license of $40.

Fourth. At $35 and less than $50 constitute the fourth class and require a license of $25.

Fifth. At $15 and less than $35 constitute the fifth class and require a license of $15.

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A license for propagation obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 12. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said fine be paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 13. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3.40 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 15. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks.

The above ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county at a regular meeting of said Board October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes: Harger, Robinson and Eldred.
Noes: None. J. D. HARGER, Chairman.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.

The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.

No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.

Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.

If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.

JOHN C. EVANS, STOUTSMAN, Mo., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get up any instrument that will take as much labor off of men as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it."

JOHN S. DODGE, JR., jeweler, Norway, Ind., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. 1st. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just as good dinners on Monday as any other day. 3d. If your run short, you can not buy ours for gold."

I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19 1887

DIED.

HEAVY—At Cerro Gordo, November 11, 1887, Christopher Heavy, aged about 66 years. Killed by a fall of rock in a mine.

Mr. James E. Jones, of Big Pine was in town during the week.

A good deal of snow has fallen upon the summits the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Mr. B. F. Leete, of Reno, was at Independence in the beginning of the week.

Several men from Los Angeles were at Independence during the week, looking for land.

Mr. Laird, Register of the Land Office, is making great improvements on the building where the office is located.

Austin, Nevada, appears to have "gone in;" it is said that over 500 people left the place in the past two months.

Mr. F. K. Andrews, of Candelaria, was at Independence during the week. He was buying beef cattle for the Candelaria market.

Jack Stephens, of Gold Hill, died of pneumonia toward the end of last week. He had been on the Comstok twenty years, and was widely known.

The Crocker Brothers took possession of the Big Pine Hotel last week. They are making many improvements on the house and surroundings.

Watches and jewelry, spectacles and eyeglasses. Watches cleaned, jewelry repaired. Prices as low as in San Francisco.
R. W. Scott, Bishop Creek.

Andrew Dell, of Bishop Creek, passed through town last Tuesday on his way to Los Angeles. From there he will go to Cincinnatti to visit his parents whom he has not seen in thirty-two years.

Monday of last week a ten year old boy fell into a tank of hot water at the Standard mine, at Bodie, and was scalded to death. The boy was named James D. Lowry; he was the son of N. Lowry.

The water mains are laid the whole length of Main Street. Branches are already laid and supplied to most of the business houses in town. Streams can now be thrown higher than the Court House.

The Bodie Miner says Edwin H. Davisson has been appointed Superintendent of the Blackstone and Calumet mines at Monoville, and that it is probable both mines will be worked all winter.

Mr. C. Schuman was introduced by a friend at Independence as "the next democratic candidate for the Legislature." The lessons of history in the seventy-second Assembly District have no terrors for Charley.

It is reported that the land swindler, W. H. Martin, has been arrested and jailed in San Francisco. As the report goes parties in Nebraska who had been swindled by Martin tracked him up and procured his arrest. He ought to go to State prison for a long term, he is a conscienceless robber.

There is great excitement in Prescott, Arizona, caused by the reported discovery of immensely rich gold ore. A telegram from Prescott last Monday said a number of the best citizens had returned from the find that day and reported that the first statement would not do the discovery justice. There is considerable rock in sight that goes $75 000 to the ton. A committee of citizens was appointed to go to the mines—distance from Prescott not stated—and investigate as to the truth of the reports.

Further Delay.

By the new time table of the C. P. R. R., passenger trains for San Francisco will arrive at Reno at 6:15 morning and at 1.40 afternoon. The first train will stop twenty minutes for breakfast, and the second half an hour for dinner. Trains from San Francisco will arrive at Reno at 8 25 night and at 6.35 morning. Unless some change shall be made the new arrangement will cause further delay in reaching San Francisco from all stations on the C. & C. R. R. By the table lately in use passengers on the C. and C. road reached Reno in time to catch the train for San Francisco the same evening; but by the new table they must stay in Reno till next morning. Passengers from San Francisco for stations on the C. & C. road will continue to come through as at present. This additional delay in reaching San Francisco will cause no end of complaint, particularly from south of Belleville; if the stop over at that place could be avoided not so much fault would be found.

Bodeites in Owens Valley.

G. W. Penter, Doctor Walker, M. J. Cody and C. Schuman, all of Bodie, spent several days at Independence last week. None of the party but Mr. Schuman had ever been in Owens valley before. According to their own statements they found the valley better in every way than they had expected to find it. They said that so far from published accounts of the valley and its resources being exagerated, they considered that not as much had been published in favor of the country as the facts would warrant. They expressed some surprise at finding lovely flowers blooming in the gardens, while at their own homes in Bodie there is only the cold sterility of winter. Californians as they all are, they had not expected to find such great difference of climate in passing from their own to a neighboring county. Some of the party expect to return to Independence a month or so hence, to make a longer stay.

Mistake Corrected

In transcribing from the returns of the judges at the late District fair, the Entry Clerk made an error of an award in one particular case. The premium for best display of gold ores was by the judges awarded to M. C. Lasky, for a display of rich ores from the Keynot mine. But by the error alluded to the premium was paid to A. W. Eibeshutz. On the matter being explained the Board of Directors ordered the mistake corrected, and Mr. Eibeshutz promptly returned the premium, which was then paid to Mr. Lasky. Mr. Eibeshutz had no knowledge that any mistake had been made till informed of the fact by the Secretary of the Association.

Warrants Held Over.

The November meeting of the Board of Supervisors still continues, the Board having temporarily adjourned till November 29; Tuesday of week after next. No warrants for bills allowed last week will be issued till the close of the session, which will probably be two weeks hence.

Supervisors Proceedings.

THURSDAY, NOV. 10, 1887

On this day the Board of Supervisors met at 10 o'clock a. m. pursuant to adjournment, all the members present, chairman Harger presiding.

The minutes of the preceeding day read and approved.

W. P. George and C. Meysan appeared before the Board at this time and advocated the granting of petitions heretofore filed asking that the Board repeal ordinance No. 20, commonly known as the sheep ordinance.

Moved by Boland, seconded by Eddy, that ordinance No. 2 be repealed. Lost by a unanimous vote, all the members voting.

The application of the Independence Water Company, by its Secretary, A. R. Conklin, asking the Board to fix the water rates for said company, was considered and the following rates are fixed.

For each hotel under 10 rooms per week	$1 00
For each hotel over 10 rooms and under 30	2 50
For each Livery stable	1 00
" " corral	50
" " wash house	1 50
" " brewery	2 00
" " family for all domestic purposes	50
" irrigating garden, each lot	25
" water per 1,000 gallons, owner to pay for metre	50
" Court House and grounds per week	1 00
" each store	50
" " saloon	50
" business house	25

The resignation of R. L. Peeler as member of the Board of Education was read and accepted.

A. E. Janvier was appointed a member of the Board of Education, vice Peeler resigned.

The Board took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m. of this day at which hour it reconvened, all the members being present.

The following bills were allowed, and warrants were ordered to be issued.

T. McLeod, labor on road	$26 00
S. J. McMurry " "	15 00
T. C. Boland, cash advanced	8 00
A. W. Eibeshutz, merchandise	35 80

The bill of Chalfant & Yaney laid over till next regular meeting.

The petition for a bridge across Lone Pine creek in the town of Lone Pine laid over till the next regular meeting.

The report of T. J. McLeod and S. J. McMurry, overseers for Road Districts Nos. 2 and 4 respectively were examined, accepted and approved.

A petition signed by the guardian or parents of at least fifteen school children residing within the proposed school district, asking that a new school district be formed, was granted and said new school district to be known as Fish Spring School District ordered established, and the same is hereby established in accordance with the original prayer of the petition.

The boundaries of said district are as follows.

Commencing at a point on the summit of the Sierra Nevada mountains, at the western boundary of Inyo county, where the Township line intersects between townships 9 and 10 S. intersects said boundary line, running thence east, following the said township line to the State line. Thence south east, following the State line to a point where the United States township line between townships 11 and 12 S. intersects said State line. Thence west following said towoship line to the summit of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Thence north westerly following the county boundary line to the place of beginning.

The Board adjourned till Friday November 11, 1887 at 9 o'clock a. m.

Clerk.

FRIDAY, Nov. 5, 1887.

On this day the Board of Supervisors met at 9, o'clock a. m. pursuant to adjournment, all the members being present, chairman Harger presiding.

Reports of Treasurer and Auditor presented acceeted and approved.

Annual county financial report presented accepted and approved.

Ordinance No. 21, providing for regular meetings of the Board, passed.

It was ordered that the said ordinance be published in "The Inyo Independent" a newspaper published in Inyo county for at least two weeks.

Board adjourned till 1 o'clock p. m. at which time it reconvened, all the members being present.

Mrs. Kepler was employed by the Board to keep the rooms and hallways of the Court House clean, compensation to be $10. per month.

R. S. Miner was engaged by the Board as special counsel in all cases arising under the Sheep license and other ordinances.

The Board adjourned till Tuesday, November 29, 1887, at 10 o'clock a. m.

J. D. HARGER
Attest: P. H. MACK, Chairman.
Clerk.

Vacancies to be Filled.

The term for which two of the Directors of Agricultural District No. 18 were appointed will expire December 1st. These two Directors are T. J. Goudale and W. S. Enos. Both of these gentlemen have made as good Directors as need be wished for. Mr. Goodale has repeatedly said he would not accept a re-appointment to the office; Mr. Enos has not said anything publicly on the subject; but would probably be willing to serve again, and if so it might be hard to make a better selection. The Directors are appointed by the Governor on recommendation from the District. Every member of the Association has a right to make his preference known who he would prefer for a Director. Before any persons are recommended to the Governor for appointment to fill the two vacancies that will soon occur in the Board of Directors, some steps should be taken to ascertain who the people of the District would prefer as Directors.

Death Of Tom Nixon.

In Belmont, Nevada, October 29, 1887, of pneumonia, Thomas Nixon, a native of Ireland, aged 56 years.

The above notice appeared in a recent issue of the Belmont Courier. Tom Nixon was one of the oldest prospectors and miners in Eureka, Nevada. He was a dark thick-set man, weighing 150 to 160 pounds, and about as fearless, active, tough and strong as "they make them." He was a steady worker, paid his debts, and provided for his wife and children well, but when in liquor he seldom sobered before breaking some one's ribs, nose or head with the iron-like fist at the end of his arm.

He worked on Ruby Hill as a miner, where there was a faction of wiry Cornish boys and another of Irish lads, who seldom allowed pay-day to pass without a shindy. In different brawls Tom. Nixon has met such men as Frank Wallace, Jimmy Tickel, Bing Williams and Jimmy Trevellyan, and on more than one occasion he has been "double banked" and piled on by the score and sometimes shot and cut, but he was never incapacitated from work for a single day. It was the general expectation of all his friends that Eureka county was too small for him to live long in the presence of the large number of mortal enemies he made, and they often begged and implored him for the sake of his wife and children to leave the county, but he would merely laugh at them and say if he had been born to be killed it would have occurred long before. The last fisticuff he had was an impromtu prize-fight with Frank Wallace Bob Mellin, one of the most desperate characters that ever lived in this State, was Tom's second. Mellin once had a fight in San Francisco in a dark room, where both men went in nearly naked with knives. Bob came out out with his back slashed and his face nearly cut in two. The other man was packed out dead. In Salt Lake City he fought a duel with knives across a clothes line with the left hands tied and killed his man. These are merely samples of Bob's record. The Vigilantes of Virginia, Eureka, Reno and Truckee often "had it in" strong for Bob, but he always bobbed around again. At Truckee he walked out in broad daylight. They started down the track after him. He had a rifle secreted out of town and then he lay in wait for them. When they approached near enough he opened fire and put them to flight and then returned to town and stopped there that night. He died in Sacramento six or seven years ago. This digression is to show the character of the second Tom Nixon had.

The police were satisfied that the men had gone about 100 yards from Main street to fight a prize fight and hurried to the scene, but they hurried somewhere else when they found who the fighters were.

The seconds had agreed upon certain rules to govern the fight, and they further agreed to force the principals to observe them. Time was called and Tom pitched in with all tours and the seconds immediately grabbed, but it was no use, for he simply turned on the three and kicked and belted them all to route and run them all over town.

From Eureka he went to Bodie, which was like getting out of the frying pan into the fire, for he was soon heard of again there. But the camp did not last long, and he settled down with the times.

Now that he is no more, in justice to the man, it must be said that he was never known to cross any man who did not cross him, or take advantage of any man in a fight.

A Badly Damaged Nose.

At the beginning of the week Mr. S. M. Gauber went out quail hunting in the neighborhood of Blackrock. A large flock of the birds flew up and Sam blazed away with both barrels of his shot gun at once. The charge may have been too heavy, or was too long in the gun; but from some cause the sense and wind were knocked out of Sam and he was sent heels up in a pile of brush. On regaining consciousness he found himself covered with blood; the hammer of the gun lock had struck him on the nose and tore quite a chunk out of what had once been rather a good looking feature. Sam has had a good deal of trouble with his nose in times past, but this last is "the unkindest cut of all." Strange as it may seem, though a good portion of the nose is gone it is now bigger than ever.

Prospecting For Brains.

Last Tuesday morning while Paul Myrtengreen was at work making a trench for water pipe on Main Street, he had a narrow escape from being killed. J. C. Gregory was also at work, and while the latter was making a blow with a mattock Myrtengreen, who was stooping down in the trench, moved his head and the mattock hit him on the crown. Paul was badly dazed by the blow; a cut was made in his head about two inches long and quite to the bone. Doctor Woodin was called and dressed the wound. It was a close call; if the blow had been a very little heavier the mattock would have penetrated his brains and Paul would have climbed the golden stair.

Beats Brick

Here where brick have to be imported by rail the cost of building chimneys is comparatively great. Much better material and at half the cost is terra cotta pipe. This makes a much neater job than brick; takes very much less room; can be put up by any one of ordinary common sense and will last as long as brick. Two or three entire flues can be put up in a building in part of one day by two men. Any building, old or new can be fitted with these flues at any time. The office of the "Inyo Independent" is provided with terra cotta flues, and the character of the material and way of putting up can be seen by any body who will call at the office. The pipes are made by Gladding, McBean & Co., Lincoln, Placer county Cal.

Petition For A Mail Route.

A movement is on foot to get up a petition for the establishment of a mail route from Mojave to Independence and other points in Owens valley. Recent changes in time table on the Central Pacific railroad instead of shortening the time of travel between this region and San Francisco causes further delay. It was bad enough to be forced to lie over one night under the old system; but by the new arrangements another night will be lost at Reno. There is good ground to hope that before long we will have a southern outlet by rail, and then all trouble about mails and travel will be at an end.

Miner Killed.

On Friday of last week an old miner named Chris. Heavy was killed in a mine near Cerro Gordo. He was working alone when a large rock fell upon him and crushed him to death. As he failed to return to his home that night, Jake Pfoh, a neighbor, went in search of him next morning and found the body as stated. R. C. Spear and Mr. Burton assisted to remove the rock and bring the body into Cerro Gordo where it was decently buried.

Where are the Quail?

From some unknown cause nothing like the numbers of quail are seen in the valley that we had last year. Then great flocks of the birds were seen everywhere; now they are comparatively scarce. An observing neighbor says he noticed last spring that the birds did not pair as usual. Have we a naturalist among us who can throw any light on the subject?

Branch of the Land League.

A branch of the Irish National Land League has been established at Virginia City. The following officers were elected. Treasurer, Joseph B. Mallon; Recording Secretary, W. English; Corresponding Secretary, Michael Feeny; Financial Secretary, P. J. Dunne.

There will be preaching to morrow (Sunday) evening at the M. E. Church by the pastor in charge, Rev. T. E. Sisson. Sunday school at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. Everybody invited to attend both the services.

There are fifteen men employed in the Defiance mine at Darwin. Two teams of eight animals each are constantly employed hauling ore to Keeler.

ORDINANCE NO. 20.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, do ordain as follows

SEC. 1. Every person engaged in the business of raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep in the County of Inyo, State of California, must annually procure a license therefor from the Tax-Collector, and make therefor the following payment:

1. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 5,000 sheep or more shall constitute the first class and must pay $250 per annum for the first 5,000 sheep and for every additional 1,000 the sum of $50.

2. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 4,000 sheep and less than 5,000 constitute the second class and must pay $200 per annum.

3. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 3,000 sheep and less than 4,000 constitute the third class and must pay $150 per annum.

. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 2,000 sheep and less than 3,000 constitute the fourth class and must pay $100 per annum.

5. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 1,500 sheep and less than 2,000 constitute the fifth class and must pay $75 per annum.

6. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 1,000 sheep and less than 1,500 constitute the sixth class and must pay $50 per annum.

7. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 500 sheep and less than 1,000 sheep constitute the seventh class and must pay $2 per annum.

8. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control less than 500 sheep constitute the eighth class and must pay $5 per annum.

SEC. 2. Every person who shall engage in the business of raising, grazing, herding or pasturing sheep, or who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo, State of California, any business, trade, profession, or calling, for the transaction of which a license is required by any Ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county, without taking out or procuring the license prescribed by such Ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250, and unless said fine be paid shall be imprisoned in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 3. The Tax-Collector shall have the collection of the license provided for in this Ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same, and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3 3 3 0 of the Political Code of the State of California.

SEC. 4. The County Auditor shall prepare and have printed suitable bank licenses for the Tax-Collector to carry out the provisions of this Ordinance with blank receipts for the Tax Collector when sold.

SEC. 5. The Tax-Collector shall collect a fee of one dollar for each license sold, which shall be paid into the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 6. All money collected for licenses under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be paid over to the County Treasurer as other moneys and placed to the credit of the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 7. This Ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after 20 days from its passage, and all Ordinances, or parts of Ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

SEC. 8. This Ordinance shall be published in the Inyo INDEPENDENT, a newspaper published in said Inyo County, at least four weeks, said publication to be made for a period of twenty days after the adoption thereof, and said Ordinance to take effect in twenty days from its adoption.

The above Ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, at a regular meeting of said Board, October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes—Harger, Eldred and Robinson.
Noes—None. J. D. HARGER,

WONDERS OF THE SEA.

Its Great Depth, Deceptive Waves and Power of Evaporation.

The sea occupies three-fifths of the surface of the earth. At the depth of about 3,500 feet waves are not felt. The temperature is the same, varying only a trifle from the ice of the pole to the sun of the equator. A mile down the water has a pressure of over a ton to the square inch. If a box of six feet deep was filled with sea water and allowed to evaporate under the sun, there would two inches of salt left on the bottom. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of pure salt 230 feet thick on the bed of the Atlantic. The water is colder at the bottom than at the surface. In the many bays on the coast of Norway the water often freezes at the bottom before it does above.

Waves are very deceptive. To look at them in a storm one would think the water traveled. The water stays in the same place but the motion goes on. Sometimes in storms these waves are forty feet high and travel fifty miles an hour—more than twice as fast as the swiftest steamer. The distance from valley to valley is generally fifteen times the height, hence a wave five feet high will extend over seventy-five feet of water. The force of the dashing on Bell Rock is said to be seventeen tons for each square yard. Evaporation is a wonderful power in drawing the water from the sea. Every year a layer of the entire sea fourteen feet thick is taken up into the clouds.

The winds bear their burden into the land, and the water comes down in rain upon the fields, to flow back at last through rivers. The depth of the sea presents an interesting problem. If the Atlantic was lowered 6,554 feet, the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. If lowered a little more than three miles, say 18,689 feet, there would be a road of dry land from Newfoundland to Ireland. This is the plane on which the great Atlantic cables were laid. The Mediteranean is comparatively shallow. The drying up of 660 feet would leave three different seas, and Africa would be joined with Italy. The British Channel is more like a pond, which accounts for its choppy waves.

It has been found difficult to get the correct sounding of the Atlantic. A midshipman of the navy overcame the difficulty, and shot weighing thirty pounds carries down the line. A hole is bored through the sinker, through which a rod of iron is passed, moving easily back and forth. In the end of the bar a cup is dug, and the inside coated with lard. The bar is made fast to the line, and a sling holds the shot on. When the bar, which extends below the ball, touches the earth, the sling unhooks and the shot slides off. The lard in the end of the bar holds some of the sand, or whatever may be on the bottom, and a drop shuts over the cup to keep the water from washing the sand out. When the ground is reached a shock is felt as if an electric current had passed through the line.—Ocean Wave.

The Climate of Chili.

Although the climate of Santiago is about that of Washington or St. Louis, the people have a notion that fires in their houses are unhealthful, and, except in those built by English or American residents, there is nothing like a grate or a stove to be found. Everybody wears the warmest sort of underclothing and heavy wraps indoors and out. The people spend six months of the year in a perpetual shiver, and the remainder in a perpetual perspiration. It looks rather odd to see civilized people sitting in a parlor, surrounded by every possible luxury wealth can bring except fire, wrapped in furs and rugs, with blue noses and chattering teeth, when coal is cheap and the mountains are covered with timber. It is odd, too, to see in the streets men wearing fur caps and their throats wrapped in heavy mufflers, while the women who walk beside them have nothing on their heads at all. During the morning, while on the way from mass or while shopping, the women wear the manta, as they do in Peru; but in the afternoons, on the promenade or when riding, they go bare headed. Although the prevailing diseases are pneumonia and other throat and lung complaints, and during the winter the mortality from these causes is immense, the Chillano persists in believing that artificial heat poisons the atmosphere, and when he visits the home of a foreigner and finds a fire, he will ask that the door be left ajar so that he may be as chilly as usual. At fashionable gatherings, dinner parties and that sort of thing, I have seen women in full evening dress, with bare arms and shoulders, with the temperature of the room between 40 and 50 degs. Fahrenheit. They often carry into the salon or dining room their fur wraps, and wear them at the table, while at every chair is a foot warmer of thick llama wool, into which they push their dainty slippered toes. These foot warmers are ornamental as well as useful, have embroidered cases, and are manufactured at home, or can be purchased from the nuns, who spend much of their time in needlework.—Harper's Magazine.

What Salt Is Good for.

When you give your cellar its spring cleaning add a little copperas water and salt to the whitewash.

Sprinkling salt on the tops and at the bottoms of garden walls is said to keep snails from climbing up and down.

For relief from heartburn or dyspepsia, drink a little cold water in which has been dissolved a teaspoonful of salt.

Ink stains on linen can be taken out if the stain is first washed in strong salt and water and then sponged with lemon juice.

For stains on the hands nothing is better than a little salt, with enough lemon juice to moisten it, rubbed on the spots and then washed off in clear water.

In a basin of water, salt, of course, falls to the bottom; so never soak salt fish with the skin side down, as the salt will fall to the skin and remain there.

The very simple remedy of common salt has cured many cases of fever and ague. A teaspoonful taken in water, and a teaspoonful deposited in each stocking, next to the foot, as the chill is coming on. This comprises the whole of the treatment.

For weeds in pavements or gravel walks, make a strong brine of coarse salt and boiling water; put the brine in a sprinkling can and water the weeds thoroughly, being careful not to let any of the brine get on the grass, or it will kill it too.

If a chimney or flue catch on fire, close all windows and doors first, then hang a blanket in front of the grate to exclude all air. Water should never be poured down the chimney, as it spoils the carpets. Coarse salt thrown down the flue is much better.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—It is said that more gold pens are made in New York than in all other cities in the world.

—An ornithological expedition to the country about Kina-bula, the great flat-topped mountain of Borneo, has resulted in the discovery of twenty-one new species of birds, including what is described as a splendid new broadbill.

—The Charleston News and Courier urges that the South should manufacture every pound of cotton grown on its fields, and thus derive the whole profit from its principal agricultural product.

—There are 337 blast furnaces in operation in the United States, producing 125,539 tons per week, and 313 idle, with a weekly capacity of 122,042 tons. The anthracite capacity has increased from 33,602 tons weekly a year ago to 35,278 now.—Public Opinion.

—Some instructive observations on the supposed anti-malarial influence exerted by sunflowers have been made by the editor of the Monthly Journal of Pharmacy, who has found that a quarter of an acre of sunflowers will exhale in the form of vapor sixty-five gallons of water a day. This was in June, at a place where the mean mid-day temperature was only seventy degrees Fahrenheit.

—Stormy Seas.—The annual average of dangerous storms in different seas and gulfs has been tabulated by Mr. W. Doberck, of the Hong Kong observatory, as follows: Arabian sea, 70; Bay of Bengal, 115; Southern Indian ocean, 53; Java sea, 12; China sea, 214; Gulf of Mexico, 355. In the Antilles the maximum frequency is in August; in the China sea, December; Java sea and Southern Indian ocean, February; Bay of Bengal, October; Arabian sea, June. —Arkansaw Traveler.

—By observing how far the sun has to sink beneath the horizon before the topmost summit of the air is cut off from its rays, the conclusion has been arrive at that the greatest upward limit of twilight is some 378,000 feet, r nearly seventy-one miles above the ea level. It is a well-known fact that, y observing the earth's shadow on the noon during the time of eclipses, the nference came to be held by astronomers that the atmosphere must be sufficiently dense to produce twilight for at east 240,000 feet away from the earth's urface.—Boston Budget.

—German scientists have discovered a worm that devours steel rails. Railroad accidents at Hagan led to an investigation of the rails. After six months had elapsed the surface of the rails appeared to be corroded, as if by acid, to the extent of 100 yards. The rail was taken up and broken, and it was perceived that it was literally hollowed out by a thin gray worm. It is two centimeters in length and of the size of the prong of a silver fork in circumference. It is of light gray color and on the head carries two little glands filled with a corrosive secretion which is ejected every ten minutes upon the iron.

—Observations at Rothamsted, the celebrated farm of Sir John B. Lawes, in England, show that with an annual rainfall of a little less than thirty-two inches, each acre of land receives over fourteen pounds of pure chlorine every year in the rain water, or as much chloine as is contained in twenty-four pounds of common salt. The sulphuric acid which the soil receives from the same source amounts to upwards of seventeen pounds per acre annually, and the ammonia between two and three pounds. Thus it will be seen that the rain possesses distinct fertilizing properties apart from the necessary moisture which it supplies.—N. Y. Ledger.

Increasing Danger of Tape Worm.

In the Texas grazing region, from which has sprung, within the last two decades, the entire stock of range cattle of the western states and territories, the beef tape worm is a most common occurrence. In fact, I do not believe I exaggerate when I say that at least every fifth person is afflicted. The cause of this is that on open ranges the eggs of tape worm are most easily and widely distributed, and hence the cattle more frequently become infested with cysts. Stall fed cattle, on the other hand, where the water is usually less subject to contamination, and the food cleaner, are only seldom infected, and hence tape worm was not so prevalent in regions where the latter were used.

In the last few years, however, the shipment of range cattle, by means of refrigerator cars, has become the chief beef supply of the east, and the danger and frequency of tape worm greatly increased. Of course no one should stop the use of well cooked meat on this account, but rare and half cooked meats can easily be avoided.—"R. T. H." in Science.

Forgetting Their Own Language.

The Germans of St. Louis find it very difficult to prevent their children, born in this country and educated in English public schools, from forgetting their own language. In a great many German families the children are forbidden to speak English in the house and are punished if they do. My father, for instance, has a system of fines and punishments for speaking anything but German in the house, which he applies to all the members of his family. All the older sons and daughters, who are either given an allowance of money or are making money for themselves, are fined five cents for every English word they utter in the house, and the smaller children are punished in various ways. If they are sitting at the table when the forbidden word is spoken, they are sent away without their meals. In this way all of our family have preserved their fluency in German speaking, but they speak English by choice.—Globe-Democrat.

The "Sea Shell Mission."

Among the many curious missions to be found in London is the "Sea Shell Mission." According to a statement in a London paper, this mission has distributed over 10,000 boxes and bags of shells, which represent over 4,000,000 shells, to as many poor, sick and invalid children in London and elsewhere.—Public Opinion.

Tenure of Human Life.

Dr. Barr favors 100 years for the tenure of life, but makes these divisions: Boyhood, 10 to 15; youth, 15 to 25; manhood, 25 to 55; maturity, 55 to 75; ripeness, 75 to 85, and old age from 85 upward. Professor J. R. Buchanan places the attainable limits of longevity at 140, and he cites the fourteen people of that age found in Italy by a census under one of the later Roman emperors.—Brooklyn Eagle.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—A diamond weighing a carat and a half was recently found in a gravel mine in California.

—The importation of American flour into the United Kingdom so far this year has largely exceeded last year's receipts.

—The first book containing musical characters was issued in 1495 from the press of the celebrated "Wynken de Worde."

—It is said that not less than two million pounds of dried sage leaves are used annually in the United States for various purposes.

—Susan Cooley, of Analomink, Pa., arose in her sleep, climbed upon the cowcatcher of a Philadelphia & Erie engine, and took a ten-mile ride at thirty miles an hour before she awoke.

—A new substitute for cloth or leather for use in the bookbinding industries is a substance made by preparing fibers of linen, cotton, wool, wood and such materials with a solution of albumen and glycerine. This is said to be absolutely water-proof.

—An old man dressed in white duck was selling needles and other articles in Warren, Pa., the other day. He had a wheel-barrow on which was loaded his stock in trade. He said he had pushed his paddy carriage all the way from Ohio and was on his way to New York City.

—The San Francisco Alta boasts that the voting citizens of that city come from sixty different political divisions of the world, Egypt being about the only country not represented. The "American" party certainly stands a poor chance in a city where there are 23,348 citizens of foreign nationality and 25,236 born in the United States.

—To sharpen razors, says the Electrical Review, place in water to which has been added one-twentieth of its weight of hydrochloric acid, removing after one-half hour, wipe and rub upon hone. The acid acts like a whetstone and corrodes the whole surface uniformly. The process never injures good blades, and often improves bad ones.

—At Kirkwood station, N. J., recently, Frank Besse, colored, twenty-three years old, jumped from the Atlantic City express, which just then was making forty-five miles an hour. He landed squarely on his head in a dry ditch; rolled over, got up and walked to Camden. "His head was slightly cut," says an awe-struck reporter, "and one leg was bruised, but otherwise he was uninjured."

—At Monticello, Fla., a day or two ago Dr. G. B. Glover extracted from the back of a negro man named Kiah Hall a piece of knife-blade two inches long which had been placed there four years ago by a colored man named James Miller. Kiah had not the remotest idea that he was carrying cold steel in his body, and went to the doctor with the idea that a boil was developing. He was mad when he found that he had been taking care of Jim Milber's knife-blade for four years.

—A Georgia mule fell into an old well thirty feet deep. He took his position in a sitting posture and was the unwilling "monarch of all he surveyed" until his excited owner summoned a posse to his aid. A rope was tied around the body of the mule and he was drawn to the top of the well. The rope broke and the mule again went to the other end of the well. A second attempt was successful. He leaped to his feet and commenced feeding on grass as though nothing had happened.

—Dooly County can boast of the tallest man as well as the smallest woman in Georgia. Sam Cason stands in his stocking feet seven feet and two inches and there is room enough for several more inches. Cason is so slim that he hardly casts a shadow, but he can get over ground about as fast as a locomotive. Mrs. A. Hall has a daughter, Anna, that was born in 1872; consequently she is fifteen years old, yet is only thirty inches in height. She goes about her household duties like a little lady, but, being so small, she is not required to do much. She is about the smallest woman in the world.

THE CHLORAL HABIT.

A Drug That Should Not Be Taken Without a Physician's Advice.

Chloral hydrate is one of the best sleep-producers known to science. It leaves few pernicious after effects, and does not lessen pain like opium or produce the delightful, dreamy condition that follows the use of the last-named drug in many people. As taken by some as an habitual dose to induce sleep it is not free from danger. Sleep should be natural in order to be refreshing. The effect of chloral is to induce an artificial condition resembling natural sleep in some respects, but not giving the weary brain all the rest it needs in order that waste of substance shall be followed by complete repair. The chloral habit is not easily formed, for the taste of the mixture in which it is necessarily given is not pleasant. There are instances of it being formed and the consequences are mental and physical debility, the former sometimes amounting almost to complete imbecility. Like the other drugs of its class, it should not be taken except by the advice of a competent physician. Insomnia—sleeplessness—is better treated by exercise carried to fatigue, by baths, avoidance of stimulants, including tea and coffee, and by methodical attention to diet, ventilation of sleeping apartments, and massage when necessary, than by any of the drugs which produce a condition more or less closely imitating sleep.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—The question is often asked, in regard to the pronunciation of Latin, How do the majority of American colleges teach it? According to the most reliable statistics, 155 of the entire number, 333, pronounce by the Roman method, 144 by the English method, and 34 by the Continental.—Christian Union.

A SCIENTIST'S WARNING.

Synopsis of a Remarkable Lecture Delivered by Dr. H. E. Hammond Before the National Scientists' Convention.

"We call this an 'age of progress,' and so in many respects it is, but I do not hesitate to declare most emphatically that in many things that constitute TRUE happiness we are simply children. Let us see: We are startled constantly by the sudden death of some man who seemed the picture of health. He thought he was well. Occasionally his appetite was poor, but then in a few days afterward it was ravenous. He felt strange pains shooting through his body, but as they did not stay long he forgot them. His head pained him periodically, he was somewhat paler than common, and was unaccountably tired, but he felt comparatively well and vigorous. And yet he suddenly died! It is a shame to our boasted civilization."

THE SUDDEN DEATH.

Dr. Hammond then instanced a number of persons well known to him who had died in great agony, although they had experienced few symptoms and little pain, and continued:

"Why is it that so many little children are to-day stunted, and apparently blighted for life? Because those early and inevitable diseases, measles, scarlatina, etc., have so weakened certain organs that nature cannot do her work, and the child languishes, perhaps dies. Look at the list of women who die in childbirth, and why is it? Simply because their maternal organs have been so weakened by the most terrible of all diseases that they cannot withstand the fearful sudden strain that is brought to bear upon them. How many women escape monthly agonies? And yet nature never intended that pain or inconvenience should attend the operation of her natural laws. The solemn and terrible fact is that men and women drag along, die, and are buried, and their friends and the doctors say heart disease, apoplexy, pneumonia, congestion, convulsions, when the cause lay far back of these things and was Bright's disease of the kidneys. That was the inward cause; these are the outward manifestations. Every disease must have a root, just as certainly as every plant. Kidney disease is the great root from which most modern diseases, no matter what their name may be, actually spring.

"But because the kidneys are so important, so delicate, and so powerful, they require the greatest care in treatment. Ever since the day when Dr. Bright discovered the connection between morbid outward symptoms and internal decay, physicians, scientists, and chemists have sought for a pure and powerful relief. It has been a difficult, often a fruitless search. Many remedies are now before the public, but so far as I have been able to learn by chemical analysis and actual test, only one possesses absolute merit and power. I have seen a number of cases, and learned from unquestionable sources of many others, where the preparation Hunt's Remedy has been almost remarkable in its results. One case in particular was that of a prominent banker residing in New York, whose family physicians, assisted by the best counsel that city could produce, declared his case to be hopeless, and who was afterward restored to perfect health by the means I have named. I have not hesitated to use it freely among my patients, and from the results I have secured, I shall continue to do so."

THAT PUNY CHILD.

The doctor explained how men and women should live in order to meet this terrible malady, and instanced several additional cures which had followed the use of the remedy before referred to. In concluding he said:

"If men and women could only be aroused to a realization of their actual danger; to a sense of what is before them unless they take prompt and proper action, and then by a correct course of life and the use of just the right means seek to prolong their lives, most of the present suffering and untimely deaths might and would be avoided."

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—There are 2,000,000 men engaged in the building trades in the United States.

—The cost of the recent coke strike to the men and operators is estimated at $2,000,000.

—There are 108 cotton mills in the South. Georgia heads the list with 36, Tennessee comes next with 27, and Alabama 20.

—A physician living near the sea says that during the past five years he has noted the hour and minute of death in ninety-three patients, and every one has gone out with the tide, save four who died suddenly by accident

—It is reported that a rich American is about to establish a paper factory at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, with a capital of at least $500,000. The principal material used will be "tochugilla," a fibrous plant which grows abundantly in that section.

—About midway between St. Petersburg and Moscow, Prince Putiatin has made the important archæological discovery of an image of the constellation of Ursa Major engraved on a grindstone of the Stone Age. A similar discovery had already been made near Wellmar in Germany.

ANOTHER OMAHA BOY WINS A PRIZE.

Oscar Groshell, a salesman in Richardson's wholesale drug house who was the lucky-holder of ticket No. 46,856 which drew one-tenth $2,000 of the $20,000 capital prize in the drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery on the 9th ult., was called upon by a representative of the Bee, to whom he said that he had held tickets in the lottery since last January and drew a prize at each drawing. The first time he got $5, the second $30, the next $15, then $10 and the last before this time $5.

He says that he is not alone in the tickets but that the young men of the house have formed a syndicate and have invested $150 in tickets this month. One thing strange about our last drawing was that a young man clerking in a drug house in Shelton sent me $5 to be invested with our money. Along with the money came the note, that he hoped it would win as he wanted to take another course of lectures in a medical college but did not have money enough. I invested for him and he got $200 out of the prize and is now in a Chicago medical college taking his course.—Omaha (Neb.) Bee, Sept. 10.

Science Knocked Out.

Railroad Engineer—You say I am color blind because I call that red zephyr blue, do you?

Great Scientist—Yes sir, you are color blind.

"I say that zephyr is blue and you say it's red; now how do you know it isn't blue?"

"Any one with good sight can see that it is not blue; it is red."

"Did your wife ever send you to the store to match zephyr?"

"Y-e-s."

"Did you ever succeed, Mr. Scientist? Tell me that."

"No."

"There now!"—Omaha World.

He Wanted Matters Understood.

"Say, mister," said an excited man, as he rushed into police headquarters, "I want you to hurry up and arrest a young feller by the name of John Simpkins."

"What for?"

"He ran off with my daughter and a stole a couple of my horses to run off with."

"Certainly; we will do our best. A man that runs off with a girl ought to be punished with great severity."

"Yes, but say, mister, I don't want ye to git this thing wrong; it's the horses I want him arrested for."—Washington Critic.

"Be wise with speed;

So said Young. Straw's show which way the wind blows, and there are a score of symptoms any one of which shows the existence of catarrh. Neglected, it will rob the blood of its purity and the system of its strength. Get Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures even long-standing cases, as thousands testify, and should be used for colds in the head, which often result in confirmed catarrh.

An exchange, announcing the close of the Medical Congress at Washington, heads the article: "The Doctors Mission Ended." This looks like a grave mistake.

WRETCHED, INDEED,

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint. Nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of the blood and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most distressing, as it is one of the most common, of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grandspecific for fever and ague.

A muzzled dog trotting down the street attracted the attention of a 5-year old, who observed: "Gosh! mother, that dog's got his bustle on the wrong end."

A FACT TO BE REMEMBERED.

Do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask your druggist for ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS and let no explanation or solicitation induce you to accept a substitute. ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS are a purely vegetable preparation the formula of which is known only to the manufacturers. Their valuable curative qualities are due to the employment of the highest medical and chemical skill. They act safely, promptly, and effectually. Over 1,000,000 persons have been cured by ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

News comes from Paris that the bustle is to be much reduced in size. Thus does Fashion's decree cast a stumbling-block in the path of female smugglers.

"O, IT WAS PITIFUL!"

Of course it was! He tried one remedy after another, and finally gave up and died, when his life might have been saved by taking Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery"—the great "Consumption Cure"—which, if promptly employed, will soon subdue all threatening symptoms, such as cough, labored breathing, night-sweats, spitting of blood, etc., and restoring waning strength and hope, effectually stop the poor consumptive's rapid progress grave-ward. Is it not worth trying? All druggists.

"CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED."

Dr. J. S. Combs, Owensville, Ohio, says: "I have given Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites to four patients with better results than seemed possible with any remedy. All were hereditary cases of Lung disease, and advanced to that stage when Coughs, pain in the chest, frequent breathing, frequent pulse, fever and Emaciation. All these cases have increased in weight from 16 to 28 lbs., and are not now needing any medicine."

CURES ALL HUMORS,
from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, White Swellings, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a treatise on Scrofulous Affections.
"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and vital strength, will be established.
CONSUMPTION,
which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its marvelous power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.
If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills, alternating with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and coated tongue, you are suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is unsurpassed.
For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS, at $1.00, or SIX BOTTLES for $5.00.

AS TO EQUAL RIGHTS.

The Banner Generally Found at the Head of the Procession.

It is wrong to consider the variety of equality contemplated by the Declaration of Independence as likely in any way to be mistaken for a kind of communism of brains. We can safely say that the time will never come when the men with vast aggregations of brains will have to divide up with those who simply have an opening for brains. That kind of communism would be a mighty good thing, however, for the people who claim that political equality is a chestnut.

If the man who dreads the day when equality is a settled fact could work it some way to have brains divided up equally and could be around when the division is made he would be ahead.

But the equality referred to in the Declaration is not that kind. It is the kind that does not chisel out a poor man's vitals in the matter of wages and then compel him to buy every thing he needs of his employer at a big price. It is the kind that protects the toiler who appeals to the law as promptly and efficiently as it does the swollen, stiff-necked imitation Lord, with his hired brains and his bogus crest.

Equality in America ought to mean that the bravest, ablest and best men should rule the State and the Nation. Then the United States Senate will not look like a mass-meeting of plumbers.

When equality is better understood and becomes something besides an empty name, the term "political pull" will lose its significance, and the average voter will not even need a political pull to operate an election day cigar.

There has never been a better banner to fight under since the world began than that of freedom and equality before the law, and the banner that has this device written on it in a plain, running hand will generally be found at the head of the procession.

The man who is born in America finds, as soon as he does so, that he has in his inside pocket a small package of inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. If he happens to be born into our set he uses these inalienable rights with perfect impunity, swapping about among some of his more unfortunate companions until he also has their inalienable rights. He then proceeds to make a nuisance of himself.

Universal equality before the law has not been asserting itself very much lately, but the man who treads on the tail of his coat is liable not to get home in time for lunch, and when he does get home the chances are that he will bring a lobe of his liver with him in his pockt-handkerchief.

There is a little contemptible fear lurking about in the breasts of a few one-horse Americans that some one may spring suddenly upon them and charge them some day with being the equal of somebody.

Their fear is entirely groundless. They can go to bed every night perfectly secure in the comforting consciousness that they will wake up in the morning perfectly free from any such charge, and no man will ever go to them and insist on an equal division of brains with them unless he is a man whose brains are so abnormally large that they actually pain him.—Bill Nye, in N. Y. World.

TECHNICAL POINTS.

A Very Smart Lawyer Who Got a Dose of His Own Medicine.

A sensational breach of promise case was on trial not long ago in East Tennessee. One Reuben Barnes was placed on the stand, and when the attorney asked him a question which he did not understand he asked for an explanation before answering. "Mr. Barnes," replied the attorney, who was getting very angry, "that is a technical point in law that you need know nothing about. You will please tell this court and jury what you saw with your own eyes on the last Sunday evening in May as you passed through the orchard toward the calf lot." "Wall, I saw Dick and Sarah sitting under an apple tree." "What were they doing?" "They 'peared to be sittin' 'longside each other on an old sassafras stump." "Was there any thing in their actions to indicate that they were engaged in more than a friendly conversation?" "Wall, yes," slowly ejaculated Barnes, while the whole court and spectators held their breath, "I seed 'em gum-suckin', lally-gaggin' and sich." "Now, sir," exclaimed the lawyer, jumping to his feet, will you please tell me what you mean by lally-gaggin'?" "That, sir," replied the witness, imitating as far as possible the pompous tone of his interlocutor, "is er tecker-nickle pint in courtin' that you needn't know nothin' about!" It was too much even for the sedate old judge, and the scattering locks bobbed up and down on his bald pate as he screened his face behind a law book and laughed until he cried. As for the crowd—well, as soon as the judge could regain his self-control court adjourned for dinner.—Philadelphia Call.

Majesty of the Law.

It is generally a good indication when a man magnifies his office. A simple-minded and honest German, having been called upon to quell a disturbance in a western town, undertook his official duty with courage and zeal.

Seizing a member of the "disturbing element" by the collar at the back of his neck, he was met with the indignant demand; "Who's got hould of me? Who's houlding me?"

"You wand to know who haf got holdt of you, hey? Now I shoost told you! It was der Shtate von Ohio!"—Youth's Companion.

E CHAMPION LIAR.

The snake liar and the fish liar, both bowed in their gray old age,
Came traveling back from their journeys wide, from their earth wide pilgrimage;
A tear drop stood in the snake liar's eye, and the fish liar groaned in pain,
And a deathlike look of infinite grief came over the face of the twain.

"I cannot compete with the modern lie," the sad eyed snake liar said,
"In its limitless length, and breadth, and depth, and I wish that I were dead;
For I stand rebuked with a shame faced look 'neath the triumphant gaze of the eye
Of the newspaper affidavit liar with his circulation lie!

"For the snake liar, and the fish liar, and the horse liar own his sway,
And the easy going liars who work by the job, and the liars who work by the day;
The traveling liar, old inhabitant liar, and liars of low degree,
And liars who lie for the fun of the thing, and liars who lie for a fee.

"The horse liar, the peach crop liar, the sea serpent liar and all,
With their wide, untraveled wastes of cheek, and their soundless seas of gall,
All bend the knee to the sceptered sway of this crowned and peerlesss one,

CASHING A CHECK.

How a Gentle, Lovely Buffalo Woman Went About It.

A gentle, lovely woman entered a Main street bank yesterday. She wanted a check cashed, so she went to the receiving teller's window and thrust the check in. The teller shoved it back. "Next winder," said he. "Next winter! I can't wait till next winter," exclaimed the lady. "I said next winder," shouted the teller, "w-i-n-d-o-w, winder; tother winder." "Oh, yes, but this is the receiving window, isn't it?" "Yes, but you can't get any money here." "But I'm going to receive it, ain't I? "Not here you ain't; go to the other winder, lady, he'll fix you."

The lady was still uncertain, but she went and shoved in her check. The polite official thrust it back. "It's not indorsed, madam," said he. "Not indorsed! What does that mean?" "Is your name Tucker?" "P'raps it is and p'raps it isn't. What business is that o' yours?" "Is this your name on the face of this check?" "Yes, it is." "Well, you've got to indorse it." "That's what you said before. What do you mean?" "You must write your name across the back of it." "But my name's on it already." "Not on the back." "On the front." "That ain't enough; it must be across the back." "Oh, well, gi' me it."

She took it and carefully wrote her name upside down across the bottom of the check, and handed it in. "You indorsed it wrong, madam." "How'd I know how you wanted it?

WOMAN CASHING A CHECK.

Why didn't you tell me?" "I thought I did; here, write your name across the top, so," and the teller painfully showed her, and with much grading she complied. The teller thereupon cashed her check with two silver dollars. "I'm going to take these," she said. "Gi' me 'em." The teller sighed and gave her two six bills, whereupon she picked up her parasol and departed.—Buffalo Courier.

Some Hackneyed Names.

The casual visitor had dropped in to talk with the editor, and opened by saying: "I wonder why newspaper correspondents generally select such old, stale and hackneyed names as Veritas, Observer and Citizen?"

"I don't know. Taxpayer is another."

"Yes, and Vox Populi."

"And Justitia."

"And Junius."

"And Witness."

"I have brought you an article that may come in handy on a dull day."

Extravagance in Dress.

Husband of Literary Woman—How are you coming on with your magazine article?

An Unjust Suspicion.

Wife (who has been very silent all through breakfast)—John Smith, you talked in your sleep last night about a Miss Ford. I distinctly heard you say that she was a daisy. And you the father of a family! Mother shall hear of this.

But Two Painters in the World.

An admirer of Whistler said to him: "Ah, Mr. Whistler, I only know of two painters in all the world—Velasquez and yourself."

"Why," said Mr. Whistler in the softest tones, "why drag in Velasquez?"—The Epoch.

He Spoke.

He spoke, and yet I turned away my head,
And heeded not the murmur, soft and low,
The few words whispered as I turned to go,
The quick petition that his proud lips said.

That shone beneath his curls, by breezes stirred,
When, as his low, impassioned tones I heard,
I turned away my head and did not speak.

I could not see his eyes and say him nay;
The words he spoke I did not understand—
I only saw his mute, imploring hand,
Stretched in my pathway as I turned away.

He spoke again, and then I had my say.
I told him most emphatically, "No,"
And as I turned, this time resolved to go,
I mentioned that I wasn't built that way.

And yet you would have done the same, I know;
He was a shoestring fiend upon Broadway,
Who waved his wares forever and a day.
He made me tired and I just told him so! —Tid Bits.

THE SOCIETY GIRL.

Some of the Elements Essential to Her Success in Polished Circles.

Many people believe that the society girl is synonymous with "the tailor-made girl," that she who can lay claim to the most elaborate wardrobe, to the most ambitious tournure, to the latest Parisian wrinkle, to the services of the most extortionate modiste, may call herself a society girl; but while they are right in a degree, they leave out the essential elements. She is not merely a society girl by virtue of her clothes any more than she is a student on account of her library. Good clothes are very excellent as far as they go, and sometimes they do not go as far as they ought, and the society girl should take care not to follow this style too closely. She must have a rare fund of health to endure the wear and tear of the season—late hours, standing on her feet, thin garments, draughts, unwholesome food at unseasonable hours; she must attract, not on account of her toilettes—although there is no denying that a pretty and becoming costume shows art and enhances the peculiar charms of the wearer, if she happens to have any—and not always, by any means, on account of her beauty, since some of the most successful have been plain belles. But she must have tact and taste, and especially discretion; she must discover art and culture, and know how to keep the ball rolling under the most depressing circumstances; she must not only know how to talk, but how to listen eloquently; she must not be disputatious, nor seem to show too much earnestness in the vital questions of the day. Society is not the place in which to preach woman's rights or other hobbies; and she who would undertake to set a dinner-table by the ears, so to speak, with an expression of her deepest convictions, would be pretty certain to receive no second invitation. There are those who go so far as to say that the society girl should have no convictions but the conviction of her own acceptability. She may have interests, but no hobbies; at the same time she must not be shallow. Still, the girl who ignorantly aspires to society puts clothes first and culture last, has more or less contempt for every thing but her fallals. It is manner that carries the day, and good nature and kindness, even in society—the art of making others happy, of amusing without apparent effort, of being invariably agreeable. Moods should not belong to a society girl if she would be a success; she must allow herself to be bored with a smile, she must submit to disappointments with a bonmot, for society has its price like other worldly things.—Harper's Bazar.

THE DIVINING ROD.

How Water Was Found at the Avonmouth Docks, England.

One of the most recent triumphs of the divining rod in Britain has been at the Avonmouth docks. The company owning the docks having received an intimation that an American company proposed establishing a sugar factory near the docks, provided a good water supply could be secured, a certain Mr. Lawrence—who has the reputation of considerable success as a water finder—was engaged to examine the neighboring ground. In this case the rod employed was a piece of spring steel, which was bent to the shape of a horse shoe, as the searcher, holding his elbows close to his sides, began to walk slowly over the field. After a while the steel became so violently agitated and twisted itself with such force, that one of Mr. Lawrence's fingers was cut. He directed the company to commence boring at the spot indicated by the shedding of his blood, and the work was accordingly commenced. At the depth of one hundred and seven feet water was struck and has since flowed at the rate of a thousand gallons per hour. In New England also the location of wells is said to be frequently decided by the aid of the water twig. And, moving westward, we are told that the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific railroad companies have, in crossing arid plains, been glad to avail themselves of the services of the divining rod in order to successfully locate their artesian wells. Doubtless, ere long, this seemingly mysterious power will be scientifically explained. For the present, however, it remains among the number of unfathomed mysteries, of which a few still remain, to puzzle our wisest and to provoke the contemptuous sneers of those who (forgetting how little our great grandparents knew of the forces of steam and electricity and how certain it is that Nature still holds many a secret which science has as yet failed to discover) believe that whatever is beyond their own powers of understanding must necessarily be foolishness.—Quiver.

—Even the farmer does not always have pure milk for his own use. The quality of the food, condition of the animals, purity of the water, the atmosphere of the stables and the habits of the person who performs the milking are all important factors, and affect the quality of the milk. No two cows give milk of the same quality, while farmers differ in their modes of feeding their animals.—St. Louis Republican.

STILLWATER'S SENATOR.

Some of E. W. Durant's Jokes Told at Long Branch.

E. W. Durant, Stillwater's senator and joker, has been on a summer trip to the sea shore with his wife, and if the stories that come floating in from Long Branch are all true he had a good time. One day at table a big musquito of the Jersey breed lighted on the senator's hand. With an expression of horror and amazement on his countenance the senator beckoned to a waiter and inquired:

"What is this animal?"

"What is it? Why, it's a skeeter. Didn't you ever see a skeeter?" replied the waiter.

"Kill it!" commanded Durant.

The waiter obeyed.

"Remove the corpse."

The waiter gave the senator's hand a brush with a napkin.

"Well, I never saw anything like that before!" solemnly remarked the gentleman, who had been fighting musquitoes at Stillwater all his life.

On another occasion at table Mr. Durant observed sitting near him quite an old gentleman accompanied by a pretty young lady, who he correctly surmised was the old gentleman's bride. They were on their wedding trip. The senator gave his wife the wink and began to guy the ill assorted pair.

"Are you enjoying your wedding trip with me," he remarked to Mrs. Durant, "as well as you did the one you took with your first husband?"

He heard the old gentleman mutter between his teeth: "That's a devil of a question to ask a woman in this place."

The Stillwater senator gained fresh inspiration from this, and the way he played the game of a second husband on a wedding trip was a surprise to the whole table. The old man and his darling, however, failed to relish it, and blushed with an intensity that caused the ice cream to melt.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

INFLUENCE OF FLOWERS.

The Cheapest and at the Same Time Most Elevating of Pleasures.

Since the earliest ages of the world flowers have borne an important part. They were dedicated to the gods. Venus is represented wearing a garland of roses; Juno holds a lily in her hand, and Ceres is adorned with bearded wheat and corn poppies. In the days of Roman and Athenian luxury and refinement, flowers held an essential place in festivities and religious exercises; they were heaped upon altars, bound to the heads of beasts which were sacrificed to appease the wrath of the gods, and wreaths were worn not only by women, but also by men, whose heads were crowned with flowers upon all festive occasions. As many people made a business of raising and arranging flowers in those ancient times as at the present day, and every occasion had its particular adornment.

All over the world flowers are planted, watered, weeded and cherished, and from their influences the hearts of thousands upon thousands are nourished and uplifted to a sense of a higher power. We can not enjoy our lives fully without flowers, and they are the cheapest of pleasures. A five-cent packet of pansy seed will give you at least twenty different varieties of purple and gold and lilac, and blue and cream color and white flowers, whose lovely faces will look up into your eyes with a beauty all their own. Five cents will purchase a packet of mignonette, of whose odor one can never tire. Women, therefore, can not plead poverty to excuse the flowerless condition of their surroundings, because even three or four can club together paying only ten cents each, and procure eight or ten varieties of seeds, which will give each person an abundance of plants. Cultivate but a few varieties as a beginning. You will receive a tenfold return for your labor. I have always said I should have a garden if I had to plant it in a wheel-barrow and trundle it around to catch the sunbeams.

Go into the woods in the early spring and carry a basket and trowel, and dig up some moss and fern roots with partridge berries intermingled; add to them some roots of the wind anemone and wood sorrel, wild violet and saxifrage, and plant them in a deep dish from your pantry if nothing better is obtainable, and keep them well watered in a sunny window where you can watch their growth and see the tender ferns unroll and the tiny flowers open; they will teach you a lesson of faith and love which you can never forget.—American Garden.

ANTIDOTES FOR POISON.

Simple Remedies at Hand in Every Well-Regulated Family.

"More than two-thirds of the deaths from poison could be avoided if men and women would only acquaint themselves with the simple remedies always at hand in every well-regulated household."

The speaker was a house surgeon at a city hospital. "I see the names of six persons on this record of mine whom I know might have been saved had their friends or the police known what to do," he continued. "All six died because too much time was lost in notifying the police, calling an ambulance, and in getting the sufferers to the hospital. Paris green, rough on rats and laudanum seem to be the favorite poisons for suicide. For each of these poisons an antidote can be found in almost every household. The chief points in cases of poisoning are to encourage vomiting, and thus get rid of the substance; to counteract the poisons by antidotes, and to check death by the use of stimulants and artificial respiration.

"Rough on rats is simply arsenic. Hardly a day passes but some one suicides by its use. If on discovering that this poison has been taken the sufferer is given one or two raw eggs, and the eggs are followed up with large draughts of tepid water into which a tablespoonful of salt or mustard has been thrown, the stomach will usually throw the poison off. These, supplemented by a dose of castor oil, sweet oil or milk to offset the action of the poison, will usually save the life of the patient. The same treatment is the one to be followed when Paris green, opium, morphine, paregoric or laudanum is the poison used. When opium, morphine, paregoric or laudanum is swallowed, it is well to give a cup of strong black coffee after the emetic, to apply cold water to the head and neck, and to prevent sleep. These poisons represent the majority of those taken by accident, or by persons intent on suicide. When tartar emetic is taken, after encouraging vomiting, it is well to give milk and strong tea to drink. When poisons like mineral acids are used—such as aqua fortis and oil of vitrol—after an emetic solutions of soda, magnesia, and even of plaster scraped from the wall can be used with good effect. Oxalic and carbolic acid calls for the same treatment after using a little flour and water, the white of an egg, or castor oil in order to protect the gullet and walls of the stomach. When poison like caustic potash soda or lime is used, administer vinegar, lemon or orange juice in water, emetics and oil. If phosphorous is taken, like the ends of matches, for instance, keep up the vomiting and administer big doses of magnesia in water. Oils in such cases must not be used. For corrosive sublimate administer the white of an egg, flour and water, or milk, and then the emetic. In poisoning from chloroform or illuminating gas, let the patient have fresh air, loosen the clothing and dash cold water about the face and neck.

"All of these antidotes are, as a rule, always at hand, and if used will almost every time save the life of the patient and greatly facilitate the work of the physician when the case comes under his care."—N. Y. Evening Sun.

Coins of Many Realms.

Some of these boxes were on the "put in a penny and the figure will work" principle. A Canary's Four Notes.

In the song of a canary four notes are recognized by dealers, and they can tell by listening to it for a very few minutes whether the bird is German or American. They are the water note, which is a rippling, gurgling, attractive bit of warbling like the murmur of a rill; a flute note, clear and ringing; the whistling note, of the same class, but very much finer, and the rolling note, which is a continuous melody, rising and falling only to rise again. It is in the last-named note that the American birds fail. They can not hold it. Another difference between the two is that the German canaries are night singers—they will sing until the light is extinguished. But American birds put their heads under their wings with darkness.—N. Y. World.

HOW TO MAKE JELLIES.

Helps and Hints for Young and Inexperienced Housekeepers.

In no part of the preserving does the inexperienced housewife have as many discouraging failures as in the making of jelly. She follows the rule explicitly given her by a woman who is famous for making clear, firm jelly, but even then does not succeed, and she wonders why it is. The experienced housewife comforts her with: "I had just such a time when I first undertook to make it; don't get discouraged; you'll get the knack of it by and by; it needs just so much practice." This is poor consolation to her, after wasting time, labor and fruit, to be told, that if she lives long enough, and throws away enough of time, labor, etc., she will succeed in the end. The housewife told her to boil it probably ten or fifteen minutes, and is surprised when told that by following this rule, she does not succeed. The neighbor here says: "I'm not so sure about the time, for you see I never go by time; I am so used to making it that I know when it is done by looking at it." A few more consoling remarks.

A young housekeeper writes to one of our household publications: "Will some one tell me what is the matter with my jelly, which isn't jelly at all," and received in reply, from one housewife: "You haven't boiled it enough;" and from another, "You have boiled it too much." Now she knew that one or the other of these two things she had done, and her object in asking the question was to try and find out which; but she is no nearer the truth than she was before asking, and the would-be jelly is very likely long ere this thrown away as a miserable failure. She evidently expected that they would tell her just how long she ought to have boiled it, which they, not knowing the kind of fruit she had used, could not do, but gave her their answers according to their own individual judgment.

Some housewives contend that the chief art in making jelly is to boil it continuously, slowly and gently, for half an hour, while others aver that the best jellies are boiled about five minutes. It is hard for the housewife having such rules before her to know which to follow, and the most sensible thing for her to do is to follow neither. There can be no rule as to the boiling time of jellies, as it must depend upon what kind of fruit is used. The juice of some fruit, such as the quince, coagulates in much less time than the juice of others, consequently it requires less boiling. Then, again, some housekeepers use more sugar than others, which also makes a great difference in the time of boiling. The only reliable rule to follow, and one that never fails, is the old-fashioned molasses-candy test, of dropping a spoonful into cold water, or upon a cold plate, and if it "jells" it is done, but if it doesn't it requires more boiling.

In extracting the juice some use a little water to hasten the process, and with the larger fruit, such as apples, etc., this is very good, but with the smaller fruits (with the exception of the gooseberry, which is said to be better with a little water) no water should be used. Pick the berries over carefully, put in an earthen or crockery dish, mash well, cover, place in a kettle of boiling water, and keep it boiling until all the juice is extracted. Remove from the fire, strain through a fine sieve or flannel bag. The best authorities say that to have clear jelly it should be allowed to drain slowly through a flannel bag without squeezing it, as the squeezing is apt to make it muddy. In the amount of sugar to be used, housewives differ, but the majority agrees that a cupful of sugar to a cupful of juice is the right proportion, though in the case of blackberries and whortleberries, a little less sugar can be used. Put juice and sugar in a kettle, and boil, removing carefully the scum as it arises, until it is done. Place in jars or tumblers and put away to cool. The old way of putting a piece of paper soaked in brandy on top of the jelly, and pasting over the top of the glass a paper cover, is fast going out of use. Cotton batting is an excellent thing for covering these tumblers, used in the same way as for preserves. Melted paraffine is used with good success for the covering of jellies, and for durability and cleanliness should commend itself to all house-keepers. Melt the paraffine, and when the jellies are cold, pour it over the tops, and in a little while it will form a thin crust. Over this, across the mouths of the tumblers, tie paper covers, to keep out the dust, and put your jellies away. When they are wanted for use the paraffine can be very easily removed, and can be put away for use again, for the same paraffine can be used a number of times.

Perhaps many housekeepers do not know that green grapes make a much nicer jelly than riper ones. They should be picked just before they commence to turn. They make a beautiful, clear jelly, and have a delicious flavor, that the ripe ones do not possess. Another nice jelly is made from one-half whortleberries (huckleberries) and one-half green grapes.—Boston Budget.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

County Official Paper.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

LONE PINE, Nov. 23, 1887.

ED. INDEPENDENT: I do not much like to intrude on your space, but I feel that the following few facts and figures should be brought before the voters of our Irrigation District. When the district was first talked of the cost of the proposed ditch was estimated at a sum not exceeding $90,000; now it has grown to $200,000. Let us see what it will cost the tax-payers of the district the first year: The interest on $200,000 at 6 per cent. for one year is $12,000; Mr. Seeley's title to the water will cost $7,000; the Secretary's salary will be $2,500; the Directors' services and advertising fees will not be less than $3,500, making a total of $25,000 to be paid at the end of the first year. During the following nine years it will cost us not less than from $18 to $20,000 per annum to keep things afloat, and this at the expiration of ten years will be in the neighborhood of $200,000, to be paid by annual taxation. As I understand it the principal it to be paid up during the next ten years, with the interest for that time, which interest, together with other expenses, will amount to about $100,000. It has been said that the bonds will not all be sold at once, but it is evidently the opinion of the Directors that the canal will cost very nearly the sum called for, and as the ditch is to be completed in two or three years I think my figures will be found not far wrong. Putting it in tabular form:

Bonds	$200,000
1st ten years interest, etc	200,000
2d do	100,000
Total	$500,000

These being my views I shall be compelled to vote against the issuance of the bonds at the coming election unless the matter be presented in a more favorable light.

Respectfully, J. R. TURNER.

Big Excitement.

A report from Prescott, Arizona, last Friday, says the excitement caused by the recent rich gold discoveries is increasing instead of diminishing. The mine belongs to Harlin and Barrington, and is on the Hassayampa river, ten miles south of Prescott. The ledge runs north and south, and can be traced two miles. The strike was made on the hillside, 200 feet above the level of the creek. At this point a small portion of the ledge can be seen about ten feet selow the surface. At this depth the vein is rich and literally filled with gold. The rock when broken hangs together by the gold it contains. Pieces of gold as large as $20 pieces can be seen all over the quartz. Within the last two days visitors to the mine have been numerous. Yesterday L. H. Wilson, Trafic Manager, and E. L. Low, Superintendent of the Prescott & Arizona Central Railway, went out to the mine. They reported that the facts have not been exagerated, and that the half has not been told. The owners of the mine have taken out several thousand dollars in the past week. It is nothing unusual for them to pan out $100 in gold in two hours in a common eight inch mortar. The product of the mine in gold exceeds the wildest dreams of Cortez and his followers.

Mr. Low telegraphs the following account of his visit, to the officials of the Santa Fe Railroad.

"A gold ledge twenty inches wide has been discovered ten miles west from Prescott, on the Hasayampa river, which averages $100.000 per ton. It is the greatest discovery of the age. L. H. Wilson, myself and others saw yesterday over $100 worth of pure gold pounded out in a common eight inch mortar inside of an hour. The ledge is one which has supplied the Hassayampa river, from which thousands have been taken out in the past twenty years by placer diggers. Any citizen will verify the above statement. Great excitement prevails."

A committee of citizens, who visited the mine yesterday, say that the reports have not been exagerated. The shaft is now down twelve feet. Very rich pocket ore was encountered at a depth of three or four feet, from which $3.000 or $4.000 were taken. The last shot at the bottom of the shaft blew out some remarkably rich rock

The general character of the rock is of a very high grade, and it may be truthfully said the prospect is the richest, as far as worked, that has ever been discovered in this section.

Preparations are being made to sink deeper on the vein. The mine bids fair to develop one of the richest in the world.

Loveliest Summer Resort on Earth.

The loveliest summer resort on earth is probably the plateau of Newera Ella, the "King's Summit," as the natives call it, in the highlands of southern Ceylon. Like the seat of the Olympian gods, it is above all earthly troubles. On "Ceylon's isle," it would be a mistake to suppose with the old hymn that "man alone is vile." In the lowlands there are not only scorpions, lamia ticks, venomous snakes, and thirty or forty varieties of mosquitoes, but landleeches, hastening through the grass with a cloth-measure movement—an alternate contraction and extension of their anatony. They introduce themselves in the lower garments of persons trespassing on their native jungles, and extract toll at the rate of an ounce of blood apiece.

But neither leech nor lamia ever visits the heights of the King's Summit. An elevation of nearly 6,000 feet so fully insures the plateau against the peril of climatic diseases that the recovery of lowland refugees generally dates from the second day of their arrival. The climate is that of a perpetual May—light showers now and then, but generally cool mornings and sunny afternoons, even in August, when the monsoon clouds brood over the coast plain and vent their electric wrath in thunder-claps resembling the crash of a volcanic explosion.—Dr. Felix L. Oswald.

A Method of Pneumatic Lighting.

A new method of lighting, called the pneumatic system, has been described by a Frenchman, M. Bender. He employes the fatty residues obtained from the rectification of crude mineral oils, through which he passes a current of air. The air takes up a definite quantity of this hydrocarbon, and the flame produced is very brilliant, giving off no smoke. Cheapness and immunity from explosions are advantages claimed.—Arkansaw Traveler.

CONSTRUCTING THE PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. A. P. Smith, of Salem, who for the past fifteen years has lived in South America, and more recently has been employed as an engineer by the Panama Canal company, has just returned from Aspinwall, and tells an interesting story in regard to the method of prosecuting the work on the great De Lesseps canal.

"I was making my way home from Cathagenia," said he to a reporter, "but, attracted by the financial inducements offered by the Panama company, I went to Aspinwall, and immediately secured employment as an engineer in that city. I remained a number of weeks, and should probably be there to-day, but that I fell a victim to the yellow fever, and on my recovery, finding that I could not stand the climate, I packed my chattels for home. During my stay I thoroughly inspected the canal, walking its entire length of fifty four miles.

"At present the outlook is bad, very bad. A great deal of money is being wasted, and it wouldalmost seem as if it were culpably wasted. That portion of the canal thus far completed is at the eastern end, and is a stretch about eleven miles long. Here the country is low and flat, the banks rising scarcely six feet on an average above high water mark, and the land is mostly of a clay formation. Through a country of this kind a cut eighty feet in width has already been made for a distance, as I have stated, of eleven miles. While forests have been cleared away, and other cuts have been made at various points along the fifty-four-mile line of the proposed canal, yet little more than the eleven miles already referred to has been accomplished, for reasons which I will make clear to you later on. For another half-dozen miles the diggers and dredgers will have comparatively easy work, because, for about that distance, the general character of the soil is similar to that already encountered. But harder work remains behind. About seventeen miles from the coast foot hills will be encountered, and the great mountain chain which runs through the continent from Alaska to Patagonia, is just beyond. Of course, that point has been selected for the bed of the canal where the mountains are the lowest, but cuts of 500 feet—and there will have to be several such—are no trifling matter, and can not be accomplished without great expense and considerable time. On every hand may be seen evidences of mismanagement and gross extravagance. Money is literally thrown away, and signs of "jobs" are more plentiful than mosquitoes in July. Much of the work is let out by contract, and all sorts and kinds of people secure the contracts."

"What sort of men are the employes?"

"The very scum of the earth," replied Mr. Smith. "Most of them are blacks, who recieve $2 per day, equivalent to something like $1.60 in our money. This means affluence to these men, and all higher grades of labor are paid proportionately. But the money is the only possible inducement, and the wages must necessarily be high to attract men to a region which will in all probability prove fatal to them if they remain there long. So the men and the women who come are the very lowest and vilest. Convicts and outlaws and prostitutes make up a large percentage of the sojourners there, and murder and arson are common. Police regulations are a farce, and justice is almost impossible to obtain."—Boston Herald Interview.

By order of the Board of Supervisors,

W. L. HUNTER, President.

A. R. Conklin, Secretary.

Dated November 1, 1887

ORDINANCE NO. 19.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, state of California, do ordain as follows:

All persons doing business within the county of Inyo shall obtain licenses from the Tax Collector of said county as follows

SEC. 1. Auctioneers are divided into two classes and must obtain licenses from the Tax Collector as follows

First Class. Those whose average monthly sales amount to $2,500 and upward constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those whose average monthly sales are less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter

SEC. 2. Persons engaged in banking, loaning money at interest, or in buying or selling notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of private persons, or in buying or selling State County or City stocks, or other evidences of State, County or City indebtedness, or stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness of incorporated companies, or in buying or selling gold dust, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver coin, are divided into two classes and must pay licenses as follows

First Class. Those doing business in the aggregate to the amount of $10,000 per quarter, or over, constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those dying business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $50 per and for each bowling alley, $15 per quarter for each alley; but no license must be granted for a term of less than three months

SEC. 4 For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a caravan or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $7. And for each show for pay of any figures, puppies necromancers, mag class, wire or rope dancing, and sleight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this Section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable enterprisments, by any amateur dramatic association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter

SEC. 7 Every person who sells spirituous malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and make the following payment

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,500 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $30 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter

SEC. 8 Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, [except Agricultural or Viticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale under license] and all persons who keep horses or carriages for hire [except such as are used in the transportation of goods] must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, license, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector, such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates.

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 per month or more constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $1,250 and less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $4 50 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $1,250 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $3 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon measure.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $25 per month; and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares, or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $15 per month.

SEC. 11. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or bull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for hire must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and pay therefor as follows

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $75.

Second. At $75 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $50

Third. At $50 and less than $75 constitute the third class and require a license of $40.

Fifth. At $15 and less than $25 constitute the fifth class and require a license of $15

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A license for propagation obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 12. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said fine be paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 13 The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3769 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 15. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks

The above ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county at a regular meeting of said Board October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes: Harger, Robinson and Eldred.
Noes: None. J. D. HARGER, Chairman.
Attest: P. H. MACK, Clerk.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.

The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.

No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.

Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.

If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and effect them from attack.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.

JOHN C. EVANS, SCOTLAND, Mo., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get up any instrument that will take as much labor off from mankind as Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house. If they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it." JOHN R. DODGE, JR., Jeweler, Nodaway, Iowa, writes: "You asked what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. Yes, it is the best machine ever invented by man. 24. We have just as good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 32. If you run short, you can not buy more for money."

I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26 1887

DIED.

MANROY—At Lone Pine, Novembar 18, 1887, Jesus M. Manroy, aged 78 years.

Tom Bastian is quite unwell and has been so for some weeks.

Miss Lively Hunt was recently married in Visalia. She caught him.

Mrs. Julia Church is down from Hawthorne on a visit with her mother, Mrs. Blair.

Mr. White Smith was in town yesterday; his teams are hauling ore from Darwin to Keeler.

There is not hay and grain enough in the south end of Owens valley to supply the local demand.

It is reported from Bodie that M. J. Cody will move to Bishop Creek and go into business.

Mr. F. J. Wall has gone to San Francisco to buy supplies for the mines and new mill at Panamint.

There is an increased demand in the east for small silver coins, and the banks are asking for silver dollars.

Miss Sophie Rhine, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Henry Rhine, has gone to San Francisco to spend the winter.

Miss Naylor of Big Pine is telegraph operator at Independence during the absence of Mr. Henry Rhine at San Francisco.

Bonds of the Turlock, Stanislaus county, Irrigation District, were sold recently to the amount of $50,000, for 90 cents on the dollar.

Rev. T. E. Sisson will preach at the M. E. Church tomorrow, [Sunday] evening at half past seven o'clock. Sunday school at two o'clock p. m.

Surveyor Risk has reported that a pass with an easy grade has been found through the Sierra Madre Mountains for the Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad.

Rails and ties have been delivered to put twelve hundred feet of tramway in the San Carlos mine, near Independence Station. Mr. Russell is pushing work vigorously.

Butter is in demand at Independence at sixty cents a roll. Eggs now sell for forty cents a dozen. A great deal more of both articles will be needed than are produced here.

Mr. G. Sanger on his place at Alvord has about 250 acres of grain planted. It is now up about six inches and growing rapidly. The alfalfa seed put in with the grain is also coming up well.

Last Saturday night the Dutch Steamer, W. A. Scholten was run into by the English Steamer Rosa Mary, near Dover, England, and one hundred and forty persons were drowned.

Northey, the tool of Morrow in bribing jurors, has been sentenced to serve nine years in the State prison. Now it will be a mockery of justice if the principal himself shall escape punishment.

There is an overplus of unskilled laborers in Los Angeles. First class workmen as carpenters, masons, painters, plumbers, zinc workers and cabinet makers can find employment at current wages. Poor workmen are not wanted at any price.

The number of people arriving in California is nearly two thousand each day. Not less than sixteen hundred of these come to the southern counties. When rail communication shall be made with Los Angeles hundreds of the strangers will swarm up into Owens valley.

Parnell says the effect of the coercion law in Ireland is, that for every offense against law committed before the enactment of the Coercion bill hundreds are committed now. The people have been taught the bad lesson that law may be successfully defied, and it is defied daily by thousands of men and by newspapers all over the country.

A Grand Jury in Arizona last week returned indictments against E. Low, Superintendent of the Prescott and Arizona Central Railroad, for burglary in the first degree for stealing a barrel of apples consigned to a merchant. The barrel head, with the consignee's name on it was found in Low's boarding house, where he sent the apples.

A suit has been brought to test the constitutionality of the irrigation law, known as the Wright law. It is expected that the Supreme Court will decide upon the case at an early day. If the law shall be declared unconstitutional, then all proceedings under it will be null and void. It will be of far more benefit to the State if the Court shall declare the law constitutional.

The Los Angeles Express estimates that five new buildings, with an average of nearly six rooms in each, are completed each day in the City. Putting the average cost of each building at $1 000, and this is very low, there would be $7 000 000 worth of new buildings erected in the course of the year. Yet with all this building it is impossible to house all the people who flock to Los Angeles; and not a store room is for rent in the City.

A great deal of fiddling is yet kept up on the Anarchist one string. It was not for being Anarchists, but because they were murderers, that the men were hung at Chicago. Andrew Jackson said Calhoun might say what he pleased about nullification, but if he committed an act of treason he would be hanged. It is the same with the Anarchists; it was not for their opinion, but for committing murder that they were punished.

Mr. C. Mates went to Panamint yesterday to look over the ground with a view to making a contract for packing ore and wood to the mill. Men who know the District well and who have handled much of the ore say there is plenty of ore available to keep the mill running a long time, even though no more should be discovered. A good deal of ore has already been shipped from the mines that went 275 ounces silver per ton.

John T. Irwin has gone to Panamint.

Old man Manroy, long a resident of Lone Pine, died there last week.

A litile fuss at Lone Pine; a little friendly advice and the affair settled amicably.

It is reported that the new railroad thro' Nevada will strike Nye county at Baxter Springs, eighteen miles south of Belmont.

Mrs. Bellah arrived at Independence at the begining of the week from her home in Kern county. She is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Roeper.

The Indians had a big time at Big Pine during the week. There was a "heap big eat" and a "heap big dance." Not a machada could be found to work for several days.

While assessment work was being done last week at the old Silver Sprout mine, west from Independence, some fine silver ore was found, mostly gray carbonate. The mine belongs to Henry Levy.

Grant & Crough offer several good properties for sale. Every one of the places offered will be a good investment. See description of properties in advertisement elsewhere.

W. Ham Hall, late State Engineer, has discovered by experimenting that an extensive artesian belt underlies the country between Los Angeles and Centinella Springs, and solves the problem that water can be obtained in that section by artesian wells.

Barnum's big show was destroyed by fire last Monday, at Bridgeport, Connecticut. Elephants, lions and other animals got out of the building and escaped to the country but were afterward captured or killed. The loss is said to be $700 000.

High metal tops have been put on the chimneys of the Court House. This was found necessary, as the wind eddied back from the tower and blew the smoke down the chimneys, making it impossible to keep fires in many of the rooms a good part of the time.

A few days ago Mr. W. T. Grant received a beautiful card of invitation to attend the silver wedding of his brother, Doctor Grant and wife, at their residence at Carrollton, Missouri, on December 2nd. Billy regrets that press of business will prevent him attending.

Mr. H. J. Robinson has already made many improvements in the buildings and grounds of the place lately bought by him at George's Creek. When Mr. Robinson came here from Butte county he was in poor health but is very much better; he is quite strong and vigorous.

A former resident of Gold Hill known as Bullion Pete, Pete Anderson or Dutch Pete, was murdered recently at Park City, Utah. A barkeeper named Grant shot him twice, both bullets passing through his heart. Pete was said to be an inoffensive man and the killing without excuse.

The Kinkead mill, near Luning, has long been hindered in its operation by scarcity of water. Lately a very deep well has been sunk and a powerful steam pump put in, and now it is expected that the mill will be kept in constant operation. There is said to be plenty of ore.

In the case of Broder and others against Conklin and others, notice of appeal to the Supreme Court has been filed; stay of execution of judgment in favor of defendants granted, and bond for double the amount of judgment and costs accepted and filed. The case will now go to the Supreme Court.

The columns of this paper are always open for the publication of communications on matters of public interest. The author of the article on irrigation published this week is well known to the voters of the Irrigation District and he alone is responsible for the article. The editor of the paper has much to gain and nothing to lose by the bonds being issued; but that does not prevent the publication of the article.

On Friday of last week a man named George Campbell was sentenced at Carson to be confined in the State Prison ten years for the crime of rape. This is far too light a punishment for such a brutal crime. For this and a few other violent crimes it would be in the interests of humanity to have a law providing for the castration of the perpetrators. Such a law if rigidly enforced would tend to prevent the transmission of criminal instincts to offspring.

Thanksgiving passed off pleasantly throughout the valley. Parties were given at Bishop Creek, Big Pine, Independence and Lone Pine. At Lone a dramatic entertainment was given under the direction of Miss Mollie Stevens. This was very successful and was followed by a ball equally successful. Independence had a masquerade. The attendance was rather limited, in consequence of the attractions at other places. But those who were present appeared to have a good time generally.

A Valuable Tract.

Over on the south side of Kings river in our neighbor county, Fresno, a large force of men are now at work preparing a tract of land containing 7680 acres to be planted with vines and fruit trees. Two sections of land will be planted to raisin grapes this season and fig, olive, orange, lime, lemon, peach, pineapple, apricot, prune, almond, English walnut and pecan trees will be planted, the object being to raise semi-tropic fruits and fruits to dry. Each year both the vineyard and orchard will be added to, and as the company do not expect any returns from their outlay for three or four years and no large returns for six years, by the time the first planting is bearing the whole tract will be under cultivation.

Suit For Divorce.

In the case of Munzinger against Munzinger, a suit for divorce, called in the Superior Court last Monday, the complainant asked leave to amend his complaint. The original complaint asked for a divorce on the ground of desertion; the amended complaint contains a much more serious charge. Leave to amend was granted and the amended complaint was filed.

Sunday School Change.

The hour for Sunday school has been changed from 11 o'clock forenoon to 2 o'clock afternoon, This arrangement will continue during the winter months. It is in contemplation to give a Concert at Christmas and to have one or more large Christmas trees in the Church at that time.

The Coming Bond Election.

In reply to the comments of Mr. Turner on the cost of the irrigation canal, it may be said that the question is, not what the canal will cost, but what will it be worth when finished. If this or any other work should cost half a million dollars, or five millions dollars, and be worth twice the cost when completed, the money would be well spent. Whether the proposed canal in this case would be worth the cost or not those whose property will be held as security for the bonds may determine. According to the figures of Mr. Turner a very large part of the sum total figured out by him would be int rest; but while this interest would be accruing profits and taxes would be returned from the lands irrigated from the canal vastly in excess of the interest. This excess, whatever the amount, would be clear gain. Other considerations than those already mentioned deserve attention. It is stated that the amount of patented land within the district is about eight thousand acres. This is the only security that can be offered for the bonds, and the amount of bonds proposed to be issued is $200,000, being twenty-five dollars upon each acre of patented land. It is worth considering what would be the probability for selling the bonds on such security. As the bonds if sold would be a mortgage upon the land, doubtless those who own it will consider the matter carefully before voting on the bond question. It is proposed to pay a large amount for a notice of location of water out of the first proceeds of the bonds sold. Notices of location have since been made by other parties; but these parties will have their canals built and be using water long before the proposed canal can by any possibility be built. As the title to water rests upon appropriation and use, and without these notice of location is of no value; and as the locators will have appropriated and be using water first, and will therefore be confirmed in their title to the water; those who would have to pay the money may refuse to assume a debt without getting something more substantial for their money. These questions and many others in relation to the bonds are being discussed throughout the district. The subject appears to be fairly well understood and no doubt all who are entitled to vote will do so intelligently.

Grossly Misnamed Powder.

A frightful accident occurred in the Hale & Norcross mine, Virginia City, last Sunday night. Emil R. Hoffman was instantly killed by what is called "safety giant powder." Hoffman had been charging a hole with the powder when it exploded, tearing him all to pieces. One side of his head was blown off and one arm and other parts of the body were torn to shreds. Patrick Connelly was working with the deceased and though close at hand when the explosion occurred escaped unhurt. It appears that a very inferior article of powder is now being sold to miners, and that it is excessively dangerous to handle it. The Enterprise has made inquiry and says mining men stated that a bitter powder war has been waged for some time past between San Francisco manufacturers. The price has fallen from $49 50 per hundred, where the combination had raised it, to 24 50 by competition; and instead of manufacturing powder with 70 per cent. glycerine—No. 1—it is now mixed with chlorate of potash or nitrate of amonia in order to enable them to keep up under the competition. No 1 powder, which contains 70 per cent. glycerine, or No. 2, with 60 per cent., has never been known to explode without a cap or fuse. Men can handle it during a railroad or wagon collision with perfect safety. Neither cap nor fuse had been put into the hole which Hoffman was filling with powder, for both cap and fuse were found at the place designated by Connelly; therefore this powder exploded by the mere tamping of it, if Hoffman was even doing that.

Wretched Mail Service.

Everywhere from here to Reno bitter complaint is made about the poor mail facilities afforded. It may so tend increase the speed of the trains that pass Reno should not be allowed to stop long enough to change the mails at that place, but such is the fact. No other place this side of Reno suffers more from the wretched service than Virginia City; but all other places suffer with it and are therefore in sympathy with it. The Enterprise says: Mr. Yerrington, who has always endeavored to do what he could for the benefit of the State, says that he is willing to arrange for a mail service on the morning local if the Postmaster General will sanction it. He, however, earnestly desires that the Government shall pay for the work the Virginia & Truckee does for it.

The remedy, it seems to us, lies with the authorities at Washington. As was said yesterday in these columns, the morning train on the Central Pacific should be authorized to carry the mail as well as the afternoon one. Then we would have a good mail service.

Mr. Yerrington desires to benefit the people by running his trains in their interest. But he must at least have some assistance from the part of the Washington authorities.

Articles of Incorporation Filed

The Los Angeles Express says it is now beyond doubt that Gould and company do propose to build the road from Salt Lake to Los Angeles. October 29, at New York City, articles of incorporation of the Salt Lake, Los Angeles and San Pedro Railway Company and of the Southwest Freight Dispatch Company were filed with the County Clerk or Recorder.

In the articles of incorporation of the railway company, it is stated that the object is to build, equip, operate and maintain a line of railroad from or near Salt Lake City, in Utah Territory, to a point at San Pedro harbor in the State of California; to construct and maintain branch lines, where such lines may be deemed necessary; to build depots, etc.

The articles for the Dispatch Company simply state that the objects of the company is to transact a general freight-carriage business.

Now the interesting part of the business comes in. Signed to the railway articles are the names of Jay Gould, S. M. Nicholls, Richard Smith, J. S. Trumbo and Isaac Salisbury—the first three New Yorkers, the last two residents of Salt Lake City. If the filing of articles of incorporation and the subscription of $1,000 000 goes for anything, Los Angeles will have another transcontinental line, and Jay Gould will run it.

A Good Suggestion.

The Esmeralda News makes a good suggestion. Nearly all the freight for Belmont, Ophir Canyon, Smoky valley, San Antonio, Jefferson and Barcelona is at present shipped by way of Austin. This is a roundabout and very expensive way of carrying freight. From Sodaville on the C. & C. road the distance is said to be shorter and the road much better than from Austin. The News suggests that by a little effort all the freight for the places mentioned could be secured to be be taken by the way of Sodaville. There is a great deal of teaming done and if the change were made a very large amount of farm produce would doubtless be taken from Owens valley; from here to Sodaville the cost for freight on produce would be verry light.

Good for the Academy

Since taking charge of the financial affairs of the Academy at Bishop Creek, Mr. Sisson has had very great success. September 1st, the encumbrance upon the property was seven thousand dollars. In two and a half months two thousand dollars of this amount has been paid and a thousand more provided for. The prospect for paying off the balance of the debt is very encouraging.

DELINQUENT NOTICE

NEW COSO MINING COMPANY.—LOCATION of principal place of business, San Francisco, California; location of works, Darwin, Inyo county, California.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT AT a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on 19th day of Oct., 1887, an assessment (No. 21) of TEN CENTS per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, 808 Montgomery street, San Francisco, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of December, 1887, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Monday the 26th day of December, 1887, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

JOHN L. HUNT Secretary.

Office—808 Montgomery street, San Francisco California.

ORDINANCE NO. 20.

Sec. 1. Every person engaged in the business of raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep in the County of Inyo, State of California, must annually procure a license therefor from the Tax-Collector, and make therefor the following payment:

1. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 5,000 sheep or more shall constitute the first class and must pay $250 per annum for the first 5,000 sheep and for every additional 1,000 the sum of $50.

2. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 4,000 sheep and less than 5,000 constitute the second class and must pay $200 per annum.

3. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 3,000 sheep and less than 4,000 constitute the third class and must pay $150 per annum.

4. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 2,000 sheep and less than 3,000 constitute the fourth class and must pay $100 per annum.

5. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 1,500 sheep and less than 2,000 constitute the fifth class and must pay $75 per annum.

6. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 1,000 sheep and less than 1,500 constitute the sixth class and must pay $50 per annum.

7. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 500 sheep and less than 1,000 sheep constitute the seventh class and must pay $2 per annum.

8. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control less than 500 sheep constitute the eighth class and must pay $5 per annum.

Sec. 2. Every person who shall engage in the business of raising, grazing, herding or pasturing sheep, or who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo, State of California, any business, trade, profession, or calling, for the transaction of which a license is required by any Ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county, without taking out or procuring the license prescribed by such Ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250, and unless said fine be paid shall be imprisoned in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

Sec. 3. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the license provided for in this Ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same, and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3430 of the Political Code of the State of California.

Sec. 4. The County Auditor shall prepare and have printed suitable bank licenses for the Tax-Collector to carry out the provisions of this Ordinance with blank receipts for the Tax Collector when sold.

Sec. 5. The Tax Collector shall collect a fee of one dollar for each license sold, which shall be paid into the Salary Fund of the county.

Sec. 6. All money collected for licenses under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be paid over to the County Treasurer as other moneys and placed to the credit of the Salary Fund of the county.

Sec. 7. This Ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after 20 days from its passage, and all Ordinances, or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith here hereby repealed.

Sec. 8. This Ordinance shall be published in the Inyo INDEPENDENT, a newspaper published in said Inyo County, at least four weeks, said publication to be made for a period of twenty days after the adoption thereof, and said Ordinance to take effect in twenty days from its adoption.

The above Ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, at a regular meeting of said Board, October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes—Harger, Eldred and Robinson.
Noes—None.

Exquisite Appearance and Trappings of an Eastern Place of Worship.

The Mosque of Omar is beautiful; its walls are adorned with marbles of delicate colors, and the dome is roofed with tiles of a brilliant blue, and some green and yellow. The effect from the Mount of Olives is of a turquoise dome roofing walls of pearl. It stands high; white pavements and tall cypresses around; steps lead down to other courts, once the Court of the Gentiles, the Court of the Great Brazen Laver, etc., and drives, and grass of emerald green, and abundant wild flowers, cover the nakedness where Solomon's offerings had enriched the entrance ground between the golden gate and the eastern wall of the temple itself.

Inside the mosque is exquisite. A circle of marble pillars inclose the veritable rough rock top of Mount Moriah, and support the inner part of the dome, which is rich in mosaic worthy to be compared with that in Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome. Portals and partitions, inlaid with tortoise shell, mother of pearl and ivory, divide the little side chapels from the central passageway between them and the sacred rock, the scene of Abraham's awful obedience and of the sacrifices which interpreted to men and made them partakers of the one great sacrifice of the Son of God. We saw the opening cut in the rock for the escape of the sacrificed blood, and, descending into the excavation below, we found a similar opening communicating with a duct which discharged into a cesspool by the Brook Kedron. We crossed the outer southern court and passing the fountain supplied by the water as its grander predecessor on the backs of brazen oxen, we descended beneath the present mosque, El Aksar, close to the mosque of Omar, into the very same gallery which led to the old temple from the south and up which our Lord walked again and again when He was here. It is now half filled with rubbish and earth, but the ceiling is still so high above that we needed to be reminded that the ground level is far down under the rubble. The pillars in single, solid blocks, the round keystone in the roof and the lintels of long, single stones are witnesses of the glory which has departed. Leaving this gallery we climbed the city walls by the Golden Gate and, walking south at the angle of the walls, we descended underground into the stables of Solomon. That they may have been utilized by him, and certainly were by the Crusaders, the halter rings declare; but it seems that the original intention was to raise the level of the valley and the thick forest of pillars are chiefly for support.—Quiver.

Terrible Process of "Marooning."

"Maroon—to put ashore on a desert isle, as a sailor, under pretence of having committed some great crime." Thus our good Noah Webster gives us the dry bones, the anatomy, upon which the imagination may construct a specimen to suit itself.

It is thence that the marooners took their name, for marooning was one of their most effective instruments of punishment or revenge. If a pirate broke one of the many rules which governed the particular band to which he belonged he was marooned; did a captain defend his ship to such a degree as to be unpleasant to the pirates attacking it he was marooned; even the pirate captain himself, if he displeased his followers by the severity of his rule, was in danger of having the same punishment visited upon him which he had perhaps more than once visited upon another.

The process of marooning was as simple as terrible. A suitable place was chosen (generally some desert isle as far removed as possible from the pathway of commerce), and the condemned man was rowed from the ship to the beach. Out he was bundled upon the sand spit; a gun, a half dozen bullets, a few pinches of powder and a bottle of water was chucked ashore after him, and away rowed the boat's crew back to the ship, leaving the poor wretch alone to rave away his life in madness, or to sit sunken in his gloomy despair till death mercifully released him from torment. It rarely if ever happened that anything was known of him after having been marooned. A boat's crew from some vessel, sailing by chance that way, might perhaps find a few chalky bones bleaching upon the white sand in the garish glare of the sunlight, but that was all. And such were marooners.—Howard Pyle in Harper's Magazine.

Conception as to Colors.

Experiments made by scientific men prove that much dullness of conception as to colors of shorter wave lengths, such as green and blue, exists among rude nations. Some aboriginal tribes of India have the color sense developed only as far as red, their knowledge of yellow, green, blue, being most limited and rudimentary; the uncivilized Damaras cannot give names to blue and green and think such colors need no names; while the Nubians are very indifferent to colors of middle and shorter wave lengths. The dullness in regard to shorter wave lengths is in sharp contrast to their ease in distinguishing red.

My own observations, which are necessarily limited, indicate that average man prefers red first and blue next; and as the shorter wave lengths are approached, his interest and power of distinguishing differences become less, and only among the most highly cultivated are the softer shades of color preferred or enjoyed. Most women will agree with me that the average man rivals the barbarian in color perception when he matches worsteds or buys a bonnet. Experiments on a large scale might result in proving that the color sense has been equally developed in man and woman, but hardly that man has reached superior development.—Kate Elizabeth Clarke in Home Journal.

Curative Effects of Alvelos.

Several cases of epithelioma, or cancer of the face and lips, are alleged to have been cured by the juice of alvelos, a plant which belongs to the family of euphorbiaceæ; it acts as an irritant, and destroys the diseased tissue, which is quickly replaced by healthy granulations. Of the three different kinds of alvelos—male, female and wild—the second is considered the most valuable; it is found at Pernambuco, and although the natives have employed the juice for some time past, it has not come into extensive use on account of the severe pain that it causes. The best results have been attained with the juice in a concentrated solid form, and with the addition of vaseline or lanoline.—British Medical Journal.

Jessie Benton Fremont.

Jessie Benton Fremont, famous for her beauty when she made her runaway match with the army lieutenant, in her maturer womanhood is hardly less captivating or interesting than in her younger period. Tall and with grace of movement, she reflects in face and form the mellowed tints of that which, when a belle, was in it glow. The contour of face and head is queenly. In profile, the forehead, nose and mouth are perfect in Grecian mold. Her face, in repose, is sweet, confiding and matronly. The thick hair that covers her head is of the purest white, but she still looks youthful, nevertheless.

"We are roughing it here," she said as she entered the parlor. "Here we find quiet, and the general much pleasure in preparing the manuscript for the second volume of his book. He has gone to New York today to see his publishers."

I asked Mrs. Fremont if the general, in view of his advancing years, showed any cause of breaking down.

"Not a bit of it," was her cheery answer. "The general is 77 years of age, but he is yet a young man. I feel for him sweltering this hot day in New York. But in his work and purposes he is as young as ever. In the preparation of his book he dictates much of it to me. Lillie, my daughter, is somewhat proficient with the typewriter, so that the publishers get the manuscript in the best of form."

I then led the conversation up to her father. At once Mrs. Fremont became enthusiastic. Apparent was it that the old time favorite son of Missouri was her idol. "I keep posted on politics now," she said; "but I do not take the interest I once did. You see we are between the stages of politics. The questions at issue between the parties are not as absorbing as they were when the question of slavery was a constant agitation. Now we have the tariff. I can recall delegation after delegation calling on father discussing the pros and cons of it. I once said to him: 'Why do these men talk of the tariff? Why not something else?' His answer was the tariff and its adjustment would ever be an important question. To me the talk of the crops, so much repeated, often became a bore. My father once said good crops enable the kings to squeeze the people out of more taxes, and bad crops provoked revolution. Quite a way of illustrating," she added, with a laugh.—Cor. Boston Globe.

The Speculator and the Rustler.

The real estate agent met the man at the depot, who had invested in the new Dakota town by mail, and after a twenty mile ride across the prairie, he said to him:

"We are now exactly in the center of Metropolis City."

"What?" yelled the speculator, "I don't see but three houses!"

"Of course—I live in one, the newspaper is printed in another and the postoffice is in the other."

"Coming, sir, all of them coming. No mistake about it, because I am president of each company."

"Such questions make me tired. No, sir, those lots by the postoffice are for the chamber of commerce, and all the others around here are business lots. You bought residence lots—they are beyond the slough and over the hill, about a mile from here. You don't want to live right in the heart of a city, do you? By the way, I keep a hotel as well as a real estate office—do you want to stay with me to-night, or will you lay out? If you want to stop with me you'll have to pay in advance—I don't like the looks of your baggage."—Dakota Bell.

Effects of Tea Tasting.

"Ten years ago only one store in a hundred had what is known as a tea taster; now there is no tea house of any importance whatever which has not in one of its employes a good tea taster," said a large wholesale tea dealer. "A thousand chests of tea will be received; the tea taster then gets in his work. A little tea is taken and put in a scale; just enough to balance a five cent piece. It is then placed in cups and boiling water is poured over the tea. The taster then takes a sip from each cup and writes down on a piece of paper his idea of its worth.

"No two tasters, however, agree to the value of tea, especially the black Oolong, which is mostly drank in this city."

"Does the tea have any injurious effect on the taster?"

"Sometimes he will get hold of a positively rank grade, and then he will spit it out as soon as he can. Frequent tasting often makes a man very nervous, and most of these men soon acquire a positive dislike for tea and drink nothing but coffee. There are connoisseurs of tea as well as whisky."—Philadelphia News.

Libraries of New York City.

Recently published figures concerning the ninety-five public libraries of New York show that all but about a dozen belong to clubs, societies or educational institutions, and are, therefore, of no use to the general public. The ten or twelve remaining are of two classes—one devoted to consultation and reference, the other to general circulation, and this latter class is again divided into free and subscription libraries. Of the 1,400,000 books in the public libraries of the city, only about 100,000 are accessible to any and every one. These figures do not compare favorably with those furnished by other cities. Boston has a free public library containing 434,000 volumes. Cincinnati has one containing 145,000 volumes. Chicago has one containing nearly 100,000 volumes, while many other smaller cities are in advance of New York in proportion to their size and population.—Frank Leslie's.

Monuments in Berlin.

Berlin contains monuments of fifty celebrities, ten of them being crowned heads—Frederick William I., Frederick the Great (2), the Elector Frederick I., Frederick William III. (2), Frederick William IV., Emperor William (2) and Queen Louise. Twelve are monuments of Generals—Leopold of Dessau, Zieten, Schwerin, Keith, Winterfeld, Seydlitz, Blucher, York, Gneisenau, Bulow, Scharnhorst and Wrangel. Three are monuments of statesmen—Stein, Count Brandenburg and Chancellor Cocceji; two of poets—Schiller and Goethe; five of scholars—Alexander von Humboldt, Wilhelm von Humboldt, Hegel, Graefe, Wilms; five of religious, political or economic reformers—Jahn, Beuth, Thaer, Calvin and Neuhaus; and thirteen of artists or writers on art—Schinckel (2), Schadow, Ottfried, Muller, Winckelmann, Rauch, Cornelius, Knobelsdorf, Kiss, Hirt, Kugler, Schnasse and Waagen.—*N. VALUE OF FERTILIZERS.

Interesting Figures for Economical and Progressive Farmers.

Commercial fertilizers are valued all the way from ten to forty and more dollars per ton. The value of cattle manure also varies, depending upon the kind of feed that has produced it and the care given it after it is produced. According to J. B. Lawes' table, a ton of manure made from feeding decorticated cotton seed cake is worth $27.67; linseed cake, $19.54; oats $7.40; wheat $7.08; corn, $6.76; potatoes, $1.51; turnips or carrots, only 86 cents; meadow hay, $6.42; clover hay, $9.65. Ste art calculated the value of various feed stuffs on the basis of 18 cents of nitrogen, 6 cents for potash, and ten cents for phosphoric acid, and makes value higher than Lawes does. The manure from 1 ton of corn and 3 tons of straw is worth $14.69 at above value. Harris estimates that in feeding this amount, with bedding, liquid, etc., 10 tons of manure will result, which would make it worth about $1.47 per ton.

Probably the following standard of values taken from Science in Farming, are as near correct as possible, and may be used in estimating the commercial value of farmyard manures:

MIXED MANURES.

Nitrogen is worth	15 cents per lb.
Phosphoric acid is worth	8 cents per lb.
Potash is wort'	5 cents per lb.

SOLID EXCREMENT.

Nitrogen is worth	10 cents per lb.
Phosphoric acid is worth	6 cents per lb.
Potash is worth	4 cents per lb.

URINE.

Nitrogen is worth	22 cents per lb.
Phosphoric acid is worth	12 cents per lb.
Potash is worth	6 cents per lb.

Taking these values, it is estimated that

ton fresh barnyard manure is worth	$2 21
" well rotted barnyard manure	2 72
" fresh hen manure is worth	8 20
" air-dried hen manure is worth	16 41
" fresh solid horse excrement	1 36
" " " cattle "	0 86
" " " sheep "	1 59
" " " swine "	1 79
" urine, horses, is worth	8 62
" " cattle, is worth	3 14
" " sheep, is worth	11 31
" " swine, is worth	3 06

In estimating the value of commercial fertilizers, our State Board of Agriculture rates ammonia worth 16½ cents, soluble and reverted phosphoric acid 11 cents, insoluble phosphoric acid, 4(@5 cents, and potash 5 cents per lb. A ton of pure bone, for instance, contains about 96 lbs. nitrogen and 364 lbs. phosphoric acid. The nitrogen is worth 21½ cents per pound, and the phosphoric acid, being insoluble, and must be decomposed in the soil before it is available to plants, is worth 5 cents per pound. Hence a ton of pure bone dust would contain plant food valued as follows:

Total	$34 54

Other commercial fertilizers are valued in a similar manner, analyses being made by the chemist of the State Board, and the results published in the various crop bulletins issued. All the manufactured fertilizers in the market in Ohio have been analyzed and their commercial value estimated in these reports. The agricultural value of a fertilizer is only to be ascertained by actual test, in the soil, and varies with the soil, the season and crop.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Two Sides to It.

BROWNING'S SIDE.

Love making—how simple a matter! No depths to explore,
No heights in life to ascend! No disheartening before,
No affrighting hereafter—love now will be love evermore. —Browning.

OUR SIDE.

Love making—how awful a matter! We've been there before;
The bull dog loose in the yard! The cowhides her grim papa wore,
The terrible force of propulsion, as swiftly we passed through the door!

LUCK STRIKES NEW YORK.

Four of The Louisiana State Lottery Company's Big Prizes Come to this City.

Good fortune often comes when least expected and smiles upon those who are not looking for her. A striking instance of this is the case of Dr. R. Asselta of 41 Marion st., whom the fickle goddess favored in a most agreeable way. About four weeks ago he and a number of other prominent gentlemen belonging to the Italian colony in this city were at a ball, and in the course of conversation at the supper-table discussed the variations of good and bad fortune which they had each experienced. As a result of the conversation some one proposed that they should try their luck by buying lottery tickets. After considerable discussion it was decided that each of the fifteen gentlemen who had taken part in the conversation should buy a ticket in The Louisiana State Lottery Company's drawing to be held on the 13th ult. Each was to buy one-tenth of a ticket, which costs $1, and if any one should win a prize he was to give the others a wine supper.

Dr. Asselta bought one-tenth of ticket No. 61,677, and was agreeable surprised to hear the day after the drawing that his ticket had drawn the fourth capital prize of $10,000, and he was entitled to one-tenth of that sum. Last week the doctor got his money and his friends their wine supper at his expense.

There were three other lucky men in this town besides Dr. Asselta on the 13th ult. One of them held one-tenth of ticket No. 61,503, which won the second capital prize of $50,000. The winner was a modest man and didn't want his name published, so he had the money collected for him by the People's Bank of this city through Adams Express Company.

Another lucky man was Godhilf Wizeman, who conceals his identity by giving his address as New York City, but his name does not appear in the city directory. He is evidently a Wiseman, who does not want to be overrun by strikers and others willing to share the good fortune that befell him when he paid $1 for one-tenth of ticket No. 95,272, which drew the third capital prize of $20,000 and was worth a cool $2,000 to Mr. Wizeman.

A fourth favorite of fortune in this city also held one-tenth of ticket No. 95,272 and scooped in $2,000 for his investment of one dollar. He, too, preferred to conceal his identity and got his friend Mr. Benjamin Nathan, of 838 Broadway to collect it for him through Adams Express Company.—New York Daily News, October 5.

A Big Agricultural Fair.

"I understand you are going to have a big agricultural fair up your way."

"Yes; or rather we did intend having one, but we've been disappointed."

"Disappointed? In what way?"

"Why, you see we got the race course all laid out, and the baseball field fixed up nice and handy, and everything was getting on splendidly, when we found that we had no room for go as you please pedestrian races."

"You don't say so!"

"Yes; and that isn't the worst of it. There's a lot of old fossils who want to exhibit cattle, vegetables and all that sort o' stuff."—Boston Transcript.

Expensive Legs.

De Smith—Did you ever hear of a man having a pair of legs worth $40,000 apiece?

McGinnis—I never did.

"Well, read the paper for yourself."

McGinnis took the paper and read: "The furniture warehouse of Wilson & Jones was burned to the ground last night. An iron safe was overturned on the porter, breaking his legs. Loss, $80,000."—Texas Siftings.

In the Ranks.

A friend told me that he once overheard the following dialogue between two members of the old state militia:

Officer (half jokingly)—I guess I'll have to report you for disrespect to your superior.

Private—(sturdily)—Report and be nanged. When we get home I'll discharge you.

For the first and second speaker bore to each other in civil life the relation of employe and employer.—North American Review.

His Only Rival.

"Charley, do you know that you're generally considered the greatest liar on the road?" said one traveling man to another.

"Well, I don't want to seem boastful, but I think I am."

"Bill Jenkins says you're the greatest liar that ever lived."

"Bill is wrong. I have one great historic rival. I never yet had the gall to say I couldn't tell a lie."—Merchant Traveler.

NEVER TRAVEL WITHOUT THEM.

Persons should never travel without a box of BRANDRETH'S PILLS. A few doses taken before going on ship will prevent sea sickness, and one pill every night on ship board will counteract the costive action of the sea air. When sick, troubled with pains, colds or dizziness, or having rheumatism, take from three to five Pills, and if they do not operate in an hour or so take three or four more.

"Oh, mother, what do you think!" remarked a high school girl, "our minister has an amanuensis." "You don't say!" remarked the old lady, with much concern, "is he doctorin' for it?"

WRETCHED, INDEED,

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint. Nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of the blood and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most distressing, as it is one of the most common, of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grand specific for fever and ague.

COMING HOME TO DIE.

At a period of life when budding womanhood requires all her strength to meet the demands nature makes upon it, many a young woman returns home from the severe mental strain of school with a broken-down constitution, and her functions disarranged, to go to an early grave. If she had been wisely counseled and given the benefit of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" her bodily development might have kept pace with her mental growth, and health and beauty would not have given way to decline and death.

CARLOADS OF MONEY.

Gold and Silver in Uncle Sam's Treasury in Incomprehensible Quantities.

Few persons, perhaps, who read the frequently published reports of the fiscal operations of the Government give any consideration to the vastness and significance of these operations. It is only when the auriferous contents of the treasury vaults are weighed and measured and placed by the side of articles and commodities that are daily handled by the masses, that an intelligent comprehension can be obtained by the people of the financial strength of the treasury and the great extent of the Government's fiscal operations.

I find by reference to the latest published statement of treasury assets and liabilities that among the assets was $281,096,417 in gold and nearly $250,000,000 in silver, including 34,000,000 of trade dollars and fractional coins. Taking up this $281,000,000 of gold and placing it on scales I find that the gold held by the Treasury weighed 519 tons, and if packed into ordinary carts, one ton to each cart, it would make a procession two miles long, allowing twenty feet of space for the movement of each horse and cart.

The weighing of the silver produces much more interesting results. Running this over the scales, I find its weight to be 7,396 tons. Measuring it in carts, as in the case of the gold, the silver now held by the Treasury would require the services of 7,396 horses and carts to transport it, and would make a procession over twenty-one miles in length. The surplus about which so much is said in the daily newspapers amounts to nearly $47,000,000. Counted as gold, the surplus would weigh 86½ tons. Counted as silver it would weigh 1,885 tons. Each million of gold adds 3,685 pounds to the surplus, and each million of silver adds 58,930 pounds.

Apply cubic measurement to the Treasury gold and silver and piling the two metals on Pennsylvania avenue as cordwood is piled before delivery to the purchaser, I find that the gold would measure thirty-seven cords and the silver 490 cords, and that both would extend from the Treasury Department to Four and a Half street, or from the Treasury to the Pension Office in a straight line, and forming a solid wall eight feet high and four feet broad.

Extending these calculations and comparisons to the interest-bearing debt, equally interesting results are obtained. The public debt reached the highest point in August, 1865—twenty two years ago, when it was $2,381,530,295. The general reader will better appreciate the vastness of this sum when informed that it represents 70,156 tons of silver, which would make a procession of carts that would extend from Richmond, Va., to a point twelve miles north of Philadelphia, the distance it would thus cover being 266 miles. The interest-bearing debt is now (not including the Pacific railroad bonds) $1,001,976,850, showing that the sum paid has been $1,379,553,445, or more than one-half of the total amount, and representing 40,637 tons of silver dollars, which would extend 154 miles if packed in carts containing one ton each.

Reducing the figures to a basis where they may be intelligently comprehended, and that the rapidity with which the Government has reduced its bonded debt may be fully realized by the general reader, I find that the reduction has been at the averaged rate of $62,706,975 each year, $5,225,581 each month, $174,186 each day, $7,258 each hour, and $120.47 for every minute of the entire twenty-two years. Pursuing the calculation to the smallest divisible space of time, the bonded debt of the United States has been decreased at the rate of $2.00.7 for every second, or for every swing of the pendulum, for the entire period from August 31, 1865, to July 31, 1887.—*Cor. Self-Winding Clocks.

It is curious what a revolution in the watch trade self-winding has made, and I have often wondered that no such plan had been adapted to clocks. This has now been done, and I fancy the clock which winds itself up ever hour will produce a complete change in the clock trade. The invention is very ingenious. The mechanism eliminates the heavy and costly parts of the clock work, gives the movement one-fifteenth part of the work to do originally entailed on it, and secures greatly increased efficiency and accuracy by the lightness of its action. Old favorites need not be discarded, as, in most cases, while retaining entirely their old appearance, they can be converted to the new principle, and no longer need the weekly visits for winding. I went the other day to Queen Victoria street to see these clocks, where all about them was explained to me, and where I heard the Government has already adopted the system for the new post-office building in Manchester.—London Truth.

—A man who had become annoyed beyond endurance by the fault-finding of his children with their food, exclaimed: "You children are intolerable! You turn up your noses at every thing. When I was a boy I was often glad enough to get dry bread to eat!" "Poor papa!" said little Rose, the family pet—"poor papa! I'm so glad you're having so much nicer times living with mamma and us!"—N. Y. Ledger.

—A fast horse is not the best for the plow or cultivator, as such horses not only soon exhaust themselves, but the driver also. The best work can usually be done with a slow animal, as the grass and weeds can thus more easily be destroyed.

EATING TOO MUCH.

A Vice That Was at One Time Cultivated Among Different Peoples.

The testimony of theologians, of historians and of an immovable tradition, embodied in most if not all European languages, proves that among our remote though civilized ancestors, it was a common thing for men to cultivate the appetite for quantities of food till it became diseased, and that they gorged themselves with it habitually, till they became almost as incapable of business and duties of life as drunkards now do. They sought quantity, they ate for eating's sake until they could eat no more, and when they ceased, were as incapable as many animals after a similar indulgence. (It is a popular mistake to suppose that only pigs are gluttons. Horses and cattle will kill themselves with certain kinds of food, and so will individual dogs, while all the wild carnivores are liable at times to eat themselves into temporary imbecility). They could not work, they could not converse, and they could not think. They were full to bursting, and repeated the feeding until their lives became one long debauch and their faculties died away as completely as if they had been drunkards, though of course the remedy, protracted fasting, was easier to apply. Many of the Roman nobles were gluttons as well as gourmands; indeed the accounts of their feasts indicate a deep delight in overeating as well as epicurism; and it is probable that the vice existed in Syria, and amidst a generally abstemious population—a Jew to this day is rarely a drunkard, and an Arab never—may have seemed specially disgusting. Another bit of evidence is the continuance of the practice in the East. Men who eat enormously, who crave for huge quantities of food and seek in overeating a torpor which pleases them as much as the calm before stupefaction pleases the drunkard, or apathetic rest the opium-smoker, or kef the tobacco-smoker, are perfectly well known types throughout India (where every district has its notorious glutton), in China and and among some African tribes. Indeed, Captain Colville, in his recent ride through Morocco, became convinced that even the Moors, who are distinctly abstemious by habit, count in their ranks men to whom overeating is so attractive that they renew the practices of Vitellius, which scandalized even Rome, and obtained by emetics the power of swallowing two or three successive dinners straight on end.—Farm and Fireside.

FLEET LOCOMOTIVES.

A Novel Experiment on the Southern Railroad of France.

It is within the recollection of young men of this day that the horse which trotted a mile in 2:40 was one of the fast ones, and when talk of a steam locomotive making a mile in a minute was received with expressions of incredulity. To-day the limit for a locomotive is little more than half that expressed in the phrase, "a mile a minute." Engineer John Hogan, on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad engine No. 134, has driven it at the astonishing speed of a mile in thirty-eight seconds. Other engineers, with Reading engines Nos. 206, 411, 96, 97, 98 and 99, have made miles in forty-three and forty-four seconds. Hogan's speed is at the rate of over ninety-four miles per hour; those of the others are respectfully eighty-three and a half and almost eighty-two miles per hour. These high rates of speed were made under circumstances all of which were favorable to a successful test.

These are extreme limits of high speed for short distances, but locomotive builders are emulous to increase the speed of their machines so that an average speed of eighty miles per hour shall replace the old time limit of sixty.

A novelty in the line of engine building is just now attracting the attention of engineers and builders. It is a locomotive designed by M. Estrade, a graduate of L'Ecole Polytechnique, which is to be experimented with on the Southern lines of France. The new locomotive depends on its large sized driving wheels for its speed of seventy-eight miles per hour which it is expected to attain. The engine, tender and coaches are fitted with wheels eight and one-half feet in diameter. The engine is of the outside cylinder type, with slide valve on top of cylinder and all the gearing carried outside. The average speed which the locomotive is expected to make is between seventy-two and seventy-eight miles per hour with a train of loaded coaches.

Of course if the French engine averages the speed expected she will be able to make "spurts" exceeding any thing on record.—Boston Advertiser

—The editor of the Cornwall (N. Y.) Register has a watch he has carried for sixty years, and his father before him carried it for ten years. He says it has been drowned twice and dashed against a wall, but is "just as good as new," except a little piece broken out of the edge of the face.

—Coroner—"Your brother, I hear, has drowned himself in the river." Uncle Jo—"Yes, I 'spec he has. Been mighty low-spirited lately." "Describe him so that the body may be identified if found." "Dat's easy 'nuff. He was deaf and dumb since he war bo'n."—Texas Siftings.

—Anxious Wife—"Doctor, what do you think is the matter with my husband?" Physician—"Oh, he has an attack of gastric fever." A. W.—"There! I knew that leak in the pipes would injure some of us before it was stopped."—Boston Budget.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—A three hundred and fifty dollar bridal dinner dress for an actress has been completed in New York City.

—It is so hard in New Mexico to induce citizens to accept the office of justice of the peace that a law has been passed disfranchising for two years any citizen who is elected justice of the peace and fails to qualify and act.

—There is a dog not far from Leesburg, Fla., that is very fond of hams (sugar-cured), but will take smoked rather than go without. Last week he succeeded in purloining three, the largest weighing fourteen pounds.

—A Northern visitor at New Smyrna, Fla., writes that he recently saw a snake so wound in a spider-web that it was powerless, while several spiders were busy bleeding it to death. The snake measured four feet in length.

—At Oakland, Cal., one day last week, a lad while fishing at one of the wharves managed to get his hook fast in the mouth of a drowned man at the bottom of the bay, and instead of a supposed mammoth fish pulled the hideous catch to the surface.

—The neighbors of a Boston family, who recently went out of the city on a vacation, saw a cat in the window and heard it mew so pitifully that they notified the Humane Society. An agent at once broke into the house and rescued the animal from starvation. It was only a plaster of Paris cat, however.

—Abe Simon, of Tallahassee, has two curiosities—one agricultural and the other mechanical. The former is a pumpkin that weighs 104 pounds, grown in this country, and the second is a mechanical monkey that plays a violin and furnishes excellent music. It was manufactured in Europe and given to Mr. Simon.

—A shorthorn bull and a valuable stallion got into a quarrel at Wellsville, O. The stallion which was a Clydesdale and a beautiful animal, displayed considerable pluck and for a few minutes the struggle was simply terrible, the earth being torn up for yards by the huge animals. All efforts to separate the brutes were futile and the battle continued unabated for ten minutes, when the bull gored his adversary in a vital spot, killing him instantly.

—A valuable kind of dry pocket glue is now made by combining twelve parts of good glue and five parts of sugar. The glue is boiled until it is entirely dissolved, the sugar is then put into the glue and the mass is evaporated until it is found to become hard on cooling. Lukewarm water melts it very readily, and the article proves excellent for use in causing paper to adhere firmly, cleanly and without producing the slightest disagreeable odor.—Boston Budget.

—An Ogdensburg newspaper says that some of the citizens of the Fourth Ward of that town have for some time been annoyed by their cows coming home at night without the usual amount of milk. They watched their cows in hopes of discovering the offender, and they were successful, for they saw a strange dog approach one of the cows and rub up against her legs. The cow put her foot back, when the dog sat upon his haunches and sucked her dry. He was as fat as a seal from the milk he had been taking.

—A farmer near Goschen, Conn., owns a cow that does not give milk, and, as he is economical, he has adopted, after considerable thought, a plan whereby the miserly milk-producer is made to suffer for her dryness, and in a manner earn her own living. He has attached to her head a contrivance which makes it impossible for her to get her head within six or eight inches of the ground. Therefore she has to eat thistles, weeds and tall swamp grass, thereby saving the white honeysuckle and low, sweet grass for the cows that give milk.

—There can be no doubt that the discoveries and inductions of the present age have thrown a new light on the physiology of food. It is a happy thought that some time in the future a man's cook will be his doctor—that he can prevent as well as cure his ailment, prolong his life, by securing a good cook. The cook and the physician have both killed their thousands in the past, and if they come to be the benefactors of humanity by uniting their best efforts, and pave the way to millennium, they will certainly atone for much of their old misconduct.—Atlanta Constitution.

—James Hughes, of Lancaster County, Pa., while eating a banana, on Saturday suddenly felt a sharp sting on his cheek, and discovered a large, strange-looking bug on the skin of the banana. His face began to swell immediately, and in a short time was swollen to twice its natural size. The swelling spread to his neck and breast, and the young man continued in the greatest agony until the following Wednesday, when he died. The bug is supposed to have been a poisonous insect of the tropics that was concealed in the bunch of bananas when it was shipped North.

—A twelve hundred dollar clerk in Surgeon General's Office at Washington has been dismissed for trying to gull office seekers throughout the country. The plan which the young man adopted was to rent a box at the post-office to receive his mail. Then advertise everywhere that for a fee of ten dollars he would furnish information how every body could obtain a Government position. Whenever a victim was found the young man replied by sending back a copy of the civil service rules. So many were taken in by the trick that had not the skillful swindler been detected by the postal officials he would have made himself rich in a short time.—Boston Globe.

BILL NYE ON HOTELS

He Tells a Story on Griswold, the Fat Contributor.

America has made many gigantic strides, aside from those made at the battle of Bull Run, and her people spend much of their time pointing with pride to her remarkable progress, but we are prone to dwell too much upon our advantages as a summer resort and our adroit methods of declining the presidency before we are asked, while we forget some of our more important improvements, like the elevated railway and the American hotel.

Let us, for a moment, look at the great changes that have been wrought in hotels during the past century. How marked has been the improvement and how wonderful the advancement! Everything has been changed. Even the towels have been changed!

Electric bells, consisting of a long and alert wire with an overcoat button at one end and a reticent boy at the other, have taken the place of the human voice and a low browed red elm club. Where once we were compelled to fall down a dark, narrow staircase, now we can go down the elevator or wander down the wrong stairway and find ourselves in the laundry.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN WAITER.

Where once we were mortified by being compelled to rise at table, reach nine feet and stab a porous pancake with our fork, meantime wiping the milk gravy out of a large yellow bowl with our coat tails, now we can hire a tall, lithe gentleman in a full dress suit to pass us the pancakes.

Even the barrooms of American hotels are changed. Once the bartender waited till his customer ran all his remarks into one long, hoarse word, with a hiccough on the end, and then he took him by the collar and threw him out into the cold and chaotic night. Now the bartender gradually rises on the price of drinks till his customer is frozen out, and while he is gone to the reading room to borrow some more money the chemist moves the bar somewhere else, and when the guest returns he finds a barber shop where he thought he left a barroom.

It is very rare now that we see a United States senator snaking a 2-year old Mambrino hair trunk up three flights of stairs to his room in order to secure the labor vote. Men, as well as hotels and hotel soap, have changed. Where once a cake of soap would only last a few weeks, science has come in and perfected a style of pink soap, flavored with vanilla, that will last for years, and a new slippery elm towel that is absolutely impervious to moisture. Hand in hand, this soap and towel go gayly down the corridors of time, welcoming the coming and speeding the parting guest, jumping deftly out of the hands of the aristocracy into the hands of a receiver, but always calm, smooth and latherless.

A great many droll characters and bright, shrewd men are met with among hotel proprietors wherever you go. "The Fat Contributor" was lecturing once in the state of Kentucky, and had occasion to take dinner at a six bit hotel. After the meal Mr. Griswold stepped up to the counter, took out a bale of bank notes, which he had received for his lecture the evening before, and asked what might be the damage.

"Three dollars," said the blue grass gentleman, who had buttoned his collar with a tenpenny nail, while he looked at "Gris" with a pained expression.

"Yes, but a man ought to be able to board here a week for $3. The whole house didn't cost more than $10 or $15. What's your idea in charging me $6 for a wad of hominy and a piece of parched pork?"

"Well, sir," said the urbane land'ord, as he put out the fire at a distance of twenty feet by emptying his salivary surplus on it, "I need the money!"

"I NEED THE MONEY!"

The frankness and open, candid manner of the man won Mr. Griswold, and he asked him if he thought $3 would be enough. The landlord said he could get along with that. Then Griswold opened his valise and took out a large brunette bottle of liniment marked "for external use." He passed it over to the landlord and told him that this stuff worked as well on the inside as it did on the outside. In a few moments the liniment of the "Fat Contributor" and the liniment of the landlord had merged into each other, and a friendly feeling sprang up between the two men which time has never effaced. I have often thought of this and wondered why it is that hotel men are not more open and cordial with their guests. Many a time I have paid a large bill grudingly when I would have done it cheerfully if the landlord had told me he was in need.—New York World.

Death Cuts Down All, Great and Small.

A party of hotel men in the Astor house rotunda on Monday were discussing the recent deaths of Messrs. Hunting and Smith, and hoping that the destroyer would not visit their ranks for some time to come, when one of the party said:

"There are several hotel keepers in town whose death, I am sorry to say, is only a question of time."

"Who are they?" eagerly inquired the others.

"They are not sick."

"What's the matter with them then?"

"Nothing."

"Well, I"——

"As I said, their death is only a question of time."

FRESH FASHION NOTES.

Hints and Suggestions Concerning the Latest Novelties in Feminine Dress.

New jackets are much braided.

Ribbons are much used for dress decorations.

We are to have another season of checkered wools.

New hats in felt and beaver or hatter's plush come in all the new dark and light colors.

Ashes of roses is revived among the new gray tints, and takes the name of Malmaison gray.

There are many shades of Gobelin blue, ranging from Sevres to gray blues of various gradations.

The hideous fashion of rasse terre skirts scraping the street pavements in the back threatens to return.

The new felt bonnets are so soft that the fabric is made up in plaits over a frame, just like plush or velvet.

Moire broche antique is a new silk with broche effects in velvet and plush, cut and uncut pile, watered grounds of dull finish and long, bold wave waterings.

Girdles of ropes, of beads, of passementerie, and of seal and plush are to replace those of metal saddle girth and leather that have been worn this summer.

Double-breasted, loose-front jackets or coats are shown for rough-weather wear. They are loose and comfortable, but set in well to the figure in the back.

A Gobelin gray dress, with parements and accessories of heliotrope and canary color and felt bonnet to match, is a much-admired Parisian toilet for country wear.

New woolen black novelties have bars, dots, corded, and plush and velvet effects on diagonal, rep, cashmere woven, chevron, herring bone and diagonal grounds.

Straight, ugright feathers, mostly the wing and tail quills of the domestic fowl, are considered the most stylish decoration for French and English round hats.

Crinoline, long demi-trained frocks, and all the discomfort and nastiness of that style of dress is threatened by French dressmakers, but deprecated by English women.

The high novelty in silks is peau de soie (silk skin), a fine, close, satin-woven silk, dull and lusterless, exquisitely soft and pliant, with a good body and firm texture.

The latest fancy in bonnets in Paris are of soft, fine, light felt, with moderately high crowns set up very straight, and peaked brims of rather large size projecting over the forehead.

The gradations in colors and the daring combinations of the same in mixtures, stripes, bars, checks and broche effects are the features in fall importations of woolen stuffs, silks and velvets.

Corsages are as long as ever, cut shorter on the hips, with longer points in front and narrower postilions in the back, narrower waistcoats and fuller draperies and trimmings on the bodice.

Old tapestry colors in unending variety appear in all the new broches and figured goods, silks, velvets, plushes, millinery stuffs and ribbons, whether for bonnets or dress accessories.

New green shades that come in blue tints take the name of Rhone, ocean and serpent. Then there are lovely shades of tapestry, Aubusson or foliage greens, and dark ivy and hunter's greens.

All skirts are double, both skirts are long and plain, the upper one slashed on one or both sides, showing panels, and the draping amounts to mere ripples, effecting just enough of looping to show a small part of the underskirt.

Most of the woolen mixtures for the incoming season are smooth finished, but there is no lack of rough and woolly surfaced, knotted, corded, tufted, bourette, velvet and plush effects, thrown in among the woolen high novelties intended for parts of costumes.

Fine whipcord diagonals of light weight, not heavier than cashmere or vailings, come in all the new shades of dark, sober, bright and pale colorings, and are intended for combination costumes for home wear and evening dress purposes, where silk can not be afforded or is not demanded.

The combinations of colors seen in the newest velvet importations are grays and heliotropes, old rose and Gobelin blues, olives and other greens, with sacjou or mahogany reds, tans and browns, and all these in delicate gradations of color are frequently seen in the same piece of velvet, or silk and velvet and plush goods, making a symphony of color as artistic as in a thousand-dollar shawl.—*N. HONEST CARL DUNDER.

How His Charity Was Insulted by a Number of Blind Men.

"Sergeant, may pe I like to haf a leedle talk mit you," observed Carl Dunder, as he entered the Woodbridge-street Station.

"Two or three, perhaps, but I haven't seen any lately."

"Shust like Shake said he vhas. Vhell, I doan' pelief I vhas arrested dis time, for I make him all shquare, und Shake vhas more to plame as me."

"Another mistake?"

"Vhell, he vhas like dis. Two days ago a feller comes in my place mit a cane. He walks wery slow, und he feels aroundt mit dot cane. He haf some blue glasses on his eyes, und in front vhas a sign of 'please help der blind.' Vhas I Carl Dunder? I vhas. All right. Mr. Dunder, I vhas blind for more ash twenty years, und I haf some large families to support. May pe you vhas kindt enough to help me. Vhell, Sergeant, it seems too badt, und I gif him half a dollar."

"Probably a fraud."

"In two hours a second man comes in shust dot same way. He feels aroundt mit his cane, reaches out mit his hands und shtands half way in und says: 'Vhas I in der place of dot wholesould shentleman named Carl Dunder, who runs for alderman next spring?' He vhas. All right. He vhas blind for feefteen year. A saw-mill falls on him und he doan' see daylight no more, but he like der loan of a dollar."

"And he got it?"

"Vhell, Sergeant, I feels tickled aboudt dot aldermans, und if a man vhas blind we should help him. Dot afternoon der third man came in, und in two days nine blind mans come around for money."

"And didn't you suspect the fraud?"

"I guess not. If a man shpeaks oop und says you vhas his candidate for der Legislature how shall you suspect him? It vhas Shake who suspects. He says I vhas shwindled again, und he laughs at me until I vhas awful madt. My mind vhas made oop dot der next blind man shall haf his eyes opened mit kicks. Sergeant, haf you got a boy?"

"No."

"It vhas a plessing. Shust see how Shake serves me. He goes oafer on der market und gets der only blind man in Detroit und leads him by der door und tells him vhat to say. I vhas in my place all alone, und somepody raps! raps! raps! mit a cane. Another blind man. Vhas I Carl Dunder? I vhas. Mr. Dunder, if you like to be der next President I'm sure your"—

"What did you do?"

"Took him by der neck und mop some floors mit him, und Shake und der boys vhas oudt doors laughing like dey must fall down. Dot blind man vhas pooty goodt, too. He kicks me seven times, und he makes my nose bleed."

"How did it end?"

"I pays him fife dollar to settle der case, und here he vhas. He reads: 'Of Carl Dunder I vhas received fife dollar for some lickings pecause I vhas a blind man und some frauds.' I vhas come down to see if he vhas all right."

"Yes, I guess so."

"Und he doan' sue me?"

"No."

"Vhell, dot vhas all right. I vhas going home to settle mit Shake. I shall laugh mit him und shmile und say: 'Shakey, please go down cellar und see if dot gas-meter vhas leaking some more.' Shake vhill go down, und I shall follow."

"And then?"

"Sergeant, I like to haf you tell dot patrolman who comes by my place dot haf some invention down celler. It kicks und screams und begs und hollers, und he should pay no attention. Der more I practice on dot invention, der better he vhas. Good day."—Detroit Free Press.

Look Out for Them.

It is getting near the time when the bogus agricultural papers begin to send out their circulars of lottery and other fraudulent schemes for deceiving the unsuspecting, and at the same time offering to throw in a year's subscription to the periodical for a nominal sum. Our postal authorities here in New York are so watchful that these swindlers can not use the mails. Hitherto the postal officials of other cities have seemingly not been able to successfully cope with them, and they have carried on their operations with impunity, notably in Chicago and Cincinnati. A few months since the postmaster of Chicago inaugurated a war upon these swindlers, which, let us hope, will be continued during the coming winter and autumn. These "publishers" of bogus agricultural papers, which generally are issued long enough to secure the victims money, have coined fortunes out of the unsuspecting by their various schemes, and it is time that they were all of them jailed.—American Agriculturist.

A BABY GIRL'S PRANKS.

How She Won the Hearts of the Occupants of a Railway Car.

There was a baby in the railway car the other day. It was not an unusual child, but it had a decidedly bright face and pretty ways. For the first few miles she was very quiet, and her blue eyes looked about in wonderment, for evidently it was the little one's first ride in the cars. Then, as she became used to the roar and rumble, the baby proclivities asserted themselves, and she began to play with her father's mustache. At first the father and mother were the only parties interested, but soon a young lady in an adjacent seat nudged her escort and directed his attention to the laughing child. He looked up, remarked that it was a pretty baby and tried to look unconcerned, but it was noticed that his eyes wandered back to the spot occupied by the happy family, and he commenced to smile. The baby pulled the hair of the old maid in front, who turned around savagely and glared at the father with a look that plainly said: "Nuisances should be left at home." But she caught sight of the laughing black eyes of the baby, and when she turned back her face had lost the angular, strained look of disappointment, and she seemed pleased about something. Several others had become interested in the child by this time, business men and young clerks, old ladies and girls, and when the baby hands grasped the large silk hat of her father and placed it on her own head, it made such a comical picture that an old gentleman across the way, unable to restrain himself, burst into a loud guffaw, and then looked sheepishly out of the window, as if ashamed to be caught doing such an unmanly thing. Before another five minutes he was playing peek-a-boo across the aisle with the baby, and every one was envying him.

The ubiquitous young man, ever on the move, passed through, but he was at a loss to account for the frowns of every body. He had failed to notice the baby, which every one was now interested in. The brakeman looked in from his post on the platform and smiled. The paper boy found no custom till he had spoken to the baby and jingled his pocket of change for her edification. The conductor caught the fever and chucked the little one under the chin, while the old gentleman across the aisle forgot to pass up his ticket, so interested was he in playing peek-a-boo. The old maid in front relaxed, and diving into her reticule unearthed a brilliant red pippin and presented it bashfully to the little one, who, in response, put her chubby arms around the donor's neck and pressed her rosy little mouth to the old maid's cheek.

It brought back a flood of remembrances to that withered heart, and a handkerchief was seen to brush first this way and then that, as if to catch a falling tear. The train sped on and pulled into the station where the baby, with her parents, was to leave the car. A look of regret came over every face. The old gentleman asked if he couldn't kiss it just once, the old maid returned the caress she had received, and the baby moved toward the door, shaking a by-by over the shoulder of her papa, to which every one responded, including the newsboy, who emphasized his farewell with a wave of his hat. The passengers rushed to the side where the baby got off, and watched till she turned out of sight at the other end of the station, shaking by-bys all the time. They lapsed into silence.

They missed that baby, and not one of them would be unwilling to acknowledge it. The little one's presence had let a rift of sunshine into every heart, warm or cold, in that car. Business men had forgotten for a while their schemes for the day, the girls had omitted to follow up their train of thoughts about that new dress and the fellows had left off thoughts of base ball, and looked into the future when they would call a sweet girl of their acquaintance "wife," and perhaps have just such a little piece of sunshine playing on their knee. Every body was better for the presence of that baby, and its happy face was pictured in many thoughts that day as men pored over columns of figures or talked abstractedly of stocks and securities.—Newburyport (Mass.) News.

Yankee Shrewdness.

A Northern shoe merchant set up a shop in Vicksburg several years ago, and buying his stock of the manufacturer he had always dealt with, without reference to any peculiarities among his new patrons, found himself loaded with an absolutely unsalable lot of shoes. At first he thought his case was hopeless, and then noticing that the few small numbers he had were too small really for the people that called for them, he tumbled to the real state of the case. The Vicksburg ladies were greatly gratified at his diplomatically loud avowals that he had bought his stock all wrong through ignorance of the tininess of the Southern foot, and when he at considerable expenditure of time and ingenuity, managed to mark a large part of his stock over again and invited them to come and see his goods bought for little feet, he drove a good trade, and he says saved himself from bankruptcy. As a fact, however, he did have a few boxes of advanced sizes for which he had no call whatever.—N. Y. Graphic.

—A woman who had recently married a rich man, and put on a good deal of style, meeting an old servant of her father's family, asked: "Do they miss me at home now?" To which the servant replied: "Law, no. They don't Miss you at all. You're only plain Maria, at home, just as you always was."—N. Y. Ledger.

Bond Election.

As was expected, nearly all the owners of patented land within the irrigation district voted against the bonds. At every voting place numerous challenges were made, on the ground that parties offering to vote did not live within the irrigation district as defined in the election proclamation. The challengers held that the mere holding of land within the district is not a qualification for voting, but that the voter must also have his residence within the lines of the district. Those who want the bonds issued contended that the holding of land and residence within the usual voting precinct was enough to qualify for voting. Most of those claiming this qualification were allowed to vote; but in every case such vote was challenged and the clerks were required to make record of the challenge and the reason for it. The opponents of the bonds would make this one of the points in the event that it would be necessarry to contest the bonds in the Courts. It is alleged that at precinct No. 3 the polls were not opened at six o'clock a. m as the law requires; but that it was three o'clock in the afternoon before the polls were opened. This would be another point urged to defeat the bonds in the event of a law contest. At precinct No. 3 the result of the vote was a complete surprise to every one. After the last vote had been cast it was confidently expected that there would be a majority of at least four, or even five, in favor of the bonds; but when the votes were counted it was found that there was a majority of one against the bonds. One voting place certainly, and perhaps two, were outside the limits of the districts. This will be another point used in contesting the validity of the election. It is tolerably certain that the district will now be involved in tedious and expensive law suits. Under such circumstances there is not a shadow of probability that the bonds, or of any part of them, could be sold if issued. But they may not be issued for some time. It is suggested that the opponents of the bonds may apply for a writ of prohibition to prevent the Directors from issuing the bonds, and if this should be granted then the case would at once be carried into court. In the meantime it will be a matter of much interest to those who have real property within the district, to know if their property is holding for all the expense that may be caused by these proceedings. At present the prospect is good for a large amount of money to be spent without turning one sod on the canal. This irrigation business promises to be the fattest thing the lawyers have ever struck in the county.

Money To Be Made.

It is said that dull times are not known by the agents for the publishing house of George Stinson & Co. of Portland, Maine. The reason of this exceptional success is found in the fact that they always give the public that which is keenly appreciated and at prices that all can afford. At present we understand, their agents are doing wonderfully well on several new lines. They need many more agents in all parts of the country. Those who need profitable work should apply at once. Women do as well as men. Experience is not necessary, for Messrs. Stinson & Co. undertake to show all who are willing to work, not hard but earnestly, the path to large success. It should be remembered that an agent can do a handsome business without being away from home over night. Another advantage—it costs nothing to give the business a trial, and an agent can devote all his time, or only his spare moments to it. Stinson & Co. guarantee grand success to all who engage and follow simple and plain directions that they give. We have not space to explain all here, but full particulars will be sent free to those who address the firm; their full address is given above.

Railroad Building.

There is remarkable activity in railroad building in the southern end of the State. The Los Angeles Express says the Southern Pacific is to at once build a line from Shorb's station to Pasadena and along the foothills to San Bernardino. The Santa Fe is just conpleting a short line to San Diego and is working on branches to Escondido, San Jacinto, Santa Ana and Santa Monica. A new line is to be constructed from this city to Long Beach and thence to Anahiem Landing. The Southern Pacific will before long build a line to San Diego. Work will begin at once on the new road to Salt Lake The railrood builders, who are generally among the shrewdest business men evidently have unlimited confidence in the future of the country.

New Railroad

A new railroad is about to be built from Stockton along the base of the Sieara Nevada mountains to Poso, in Kern county, where it will connect with the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad. Senator Stanford, C. F. Crocker and T. Hopkins are the paincipal stockholders. The new line will run through Stanislaus, Merced, Fresno, Tulare and Kern counties.

In Favor of Non-Intervention.

Judge Chewso, after rising from his seat with an effort which broke a suspender square in two, offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, Dat dis Lime-Kiln club sympathizes wid Greece in her attempt to throw of de yoke of oppreshun an' put 5-cent cigars before de nobility of de ole world."

"Yes, sah."

"Whar' am Greece?"

"Dunno, sah."

"Whar' am de yoke?"

"Dunno."

"What has we got to do wid bility of de ole world?"

"I—I dunno."

"Whar' did you git dat resolushun?"

"I dashed it off, sah."

"Well, now, you dash yerself down on your cheer, an' doan't let us heah no mo' of you fur six weeks! When dis club has got frew sympatnizin' wid de United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba an' South America we may reach out furder. Until dat time comes your resolushun will lie under the table."—Detroit Free Press.

A Faroe Dance in Thorshaven.

As a rare treat it is possible that a Faroe dance may be going on during these evenings of enforced durance at home, and then, if the Englishman be not shy, he may be well amused as a spectator and a participator. There is not much art in the local dance, but it is a survival of centuries, and as a sweating exercise it may be said to be an unrivaled form of pastime. One may see ounces of bulk rolling away down the reddened faces of the men and women and boys and girls, all linked together by arms and hands and spinning round and round to the accompaniment of their own merry voices. Every Sunday evening there is a Faroe dance in Thorshaven; for the Faroese are Lutherans, and by giving their morning to the church consider that they are entitled to enjoyment during the rest of the Sunday.—Cornhill Magazine.

Consequences of Killing a Monkey.

Since Sunday last a certain portion of Bhuleshwar has been the scence of great excitement in the Hindoo community. It is stated that a European police constable shot a monkey from a window of a Bania's house. The Hindoos are therefore very much incensed against this Bania, who, not daring to face the public indignation, is a close prisoner in his house. The Vaishnay Maharaj has stopped the unfortunate man's Darsan and threateas to stop the Darsan of the whole land caste should they not punish the monkey destroyer. A meeting of the caste was consequently held on Tuesday last, when it was resolved that the man Danodar should abide by whatever decision the Pandit Gatulaljee may give in the matter.—Bombay Gazetto.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.

The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.

No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.

Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, oromptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.

JOHN C. EVANS, SPOOTLAND, MO., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 500 acres in cultivation. If you will put up any instrument that will take as much labor off of men as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money in from and cost no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it."

JOHN R. DODGE, JR., jeweler, NORMAL, ILL., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. 1st. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just as good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If you run short, you can not buy ours for gold."

I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3 1887

MARRIED.

KING-McMULLEN—At Independence, Nov. 28, 1887, by Hon. John A. Hannah, Superior Judge, Albert King and Miss Annie McMullen, both of Big Pine.

Very cold weather is reported at Virginia City. Water pipes are frozen up.

Water in the Carson river is very low; therefore the mills along the stream are not doing much.

The Grand Jury of San Francisco remained in session seven months. It is said they were busy all the time.

William Corbet, who was hurt some time ago in the Lent shaft, at Bodie, died last Sunday at San Francisco.

Goldenson, the cowardly murderer of little Mamie Kelly, has been denied a new trial by the Supreme Court.

Last Saturday 118 transfers of real estate were filed for record at Los Angeles. The aggregate value was $211,558.

In the case of Turner against Turner, a suit for divorce, demurrer was argued last Mondly. No decision was given by the Court.

In boring for water at Carson a ledge of very fine quartz was struck at a depth of 256 feet. The ore is reported to be rich in silver.

The Bowers mansion and three thousand acres of land in Washoe valley have been bought by Theodore Winters for $27,000.

Beach, the Australian oarsman, has beaten the famous American oarsman, Hanlan, in a contest for the championship of the world.

Joseph D. Lynch, of Los Angeles, is at Washington prepared to make a contest for the seat in Congress now occupied by General Vandever.

An experiment was tried in town a few days ago to try if raw beef steak will remove a black stain from a damaged eye. Yank did the staining.

Last Monday the temperature at St. Paul Minnesota, was 22 degrees below zero. It is enough to make teeth chatter even to think of such cold.

Rev. T. E. Sisson will preach in the M. E. Church tomorrow [Sunday] evening at half past seven o'clock Sunday school at two o'clock afternoon.

Claus Spreckles has arranaged with farmers in Santa Cruz county to have a large amount of land planted with sugar beets and will manufacture sugar from them.

An election has been held in Colusa county on the formation of an irrigation district. The vote was in favor of the project by a majority of more than five to one.

Robert F. Morrow, the jury briber, has been granted a change of venue to Sonoma county. The application for change of venue in this case is almost an admission of guilt.

Charles Goslaw was hanged at San Jose last Friday for murdering an old man named Grant at Los Gator. Like most murderers, Goslaw declared he was certain of going to heaven.

Mr. F. W. Wilson, of Winters, Yolo county, and Doctor W. E. Briggs of Sacramento, arrived at Independence last Monday. They have been traveling through the valley since in search of land.

Mrs. Enos, mother of W. S. Enos, has returned on a visit to her relatives here, and is likely to spend the winter with them. She finds the weather here in the winter months pleasanter than in the Sacramento valley.

The Comstock people have lost none of their old time generosity. A fair was held recently at St. Mary's Church, Virginia City, for the benefit of the orphans Home and the Enterprise says the net amount realized was $4.321.60.

In Ireland men are sent to jail for merely selling newspapers. To make just proportion in punishment the men who print the papers out to be transported and the writers ought to be hanged. "Brittons never, never shall be slaves."

Mr. R. E. Barnes and Mr. W. E. LaMar were up from Cottonwood at the end of last week. Mr. Barnes says he has got one hundred acres of new ground ready for alfalfa. He bought a few spans of fine work horses from Mr. Sanger while up here.

The school teachers in Nevada have organized a State Educational Association. The California State Teachers Association will meet at Lake Tahoe some time next summer, and it is proposed that the Nevada Association meet at the same time and place.

An organization called the "Nevada-California Loan and Investment Company," has been formed at Reno. It is intended to loan money at easy interest on approved security, and to sell bonds as an investment for capital. The company expect to extend their operations to Inyo county.

At the Mechanics Fair at San Francisco both a gold and silver medal were awarded to an exhibit of Inyo marble. The report upon the marble gives a glowsng discription of its beauty. The value of the stone for statuary, monuments, ornamentation and building purposes is strongly advocated. The report is very favorable to this prodnct of Inyo county.

A grand rabbit hunt was organized over in Tulare county lately. A tight corral was built with wings flowing out in the shape of a "V." Between 200 and 300 people took part in the hunt spreading out over the country and driving the rabbits into the pen. It is said that fully two thousand rabbits were killed.

Snow all over the Sierras and Inyos.

Mr. R. Hessian was down from Big Pine last Wednesday.

Mrs. Sallie Bell, of Big Pine was in town during the week.

It is said that a gypsum mine at Lovelock, Nevada, has been sold for $150,000.

It is confidently expected that Mr. Carlisle will be elected speaker of the House of Representatives.

A Tamamy political club has been organized in San Francisco. The members are all friends of Chris. Buckley.

Mr. Israel Luce arrived at Independence last Wednesday from Sacramento. He went down to the marble quarry yesterday.

Rains have set in west of the mountains. After much threatening there was some storm and rainfall in Owens valley on Thursday night.

The town of Santa Ana, Los Angeles county, is building up rapidly. The building boom seems to be constantly on the increase, especially in dwelling houses.

Steve Terrel and John Thomas have just shipped a car load of ore from the Eclipse mine to San Francisco. Steve and Triggy are making good wages; success to them.

Scarcity of eggs, butter, chickens, cheese grain and hay; scarcity of nearly everything in the way of farm produce. And yet some old moss backs keep up the wail of "no market."

Yesterday mornnig the storm had cleared away and it was seen that much snow had fallen upon the mountains on both sides of the valley. Down in the valley it was like a morning in April.

Ten acres of land near Pasadena sold laet week for $1.600 per acre. Twenty acres a few miles from the business part of town sold for $1 000 per acre, Lots in the town sold for $2.500 each.

The county will not lose much through want of license ordinances. Nearly all licenses in the county are now paid up to about the time when the next regular meet- of the Board of Supervisors will be held.

The faro gamblers of Los Angeles have closed up their games. The Express says the gamblers have been so closely watched by the police and have been fined so often that there is no longer a living for them in the game.

It continues to be broadly hinted that Chinese are landed in San Francisco by bribery in the courts. In no other way can the decisions of the courts be accounted for in cases where the Chinese were permitted to land in violation of the restriction act.

Bills will be introduced in Congress to remedy the defects of the Chinese exclusion bill. Federal Judges in San Francisco, by strained interpretation of the present law, defeat its purpose. An effort will be made to put this beyond their power.

Joseph Nay passed through town last Thursday with eighty head of horses for Los Angeles. The animals were brought from Elko county, Nevada. Mr Nay said he had been a month on the way. The horses were in good condition.

A new baking powder, the "Banner" brand, is better than any other powder now in use; one pound cans cost only three bits. Get a can and try it. A large stock of toys for Christmas gifts; the finest candies of every variety. Call and examine at the store of L. Wood.

Last Saturday a Chinaman on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad slashed around him with a big knife. He wounded one passenger fatally and had to be shot to death to order to prevent him doing more mischief. The Chinaman appeared to be crazy.

Mr. J. C. Irvin returned home last Thursday from a two weeks visit at Darwin. She brought back some fine and curious specimens from the mines. One specimen in particular is quite curious. It is a lime formation and contains many figures of baby hands and feet; the little fingers and toes are as well formedas if done by a skillful modeler in clay.

With land selling in Los Angeles county at prices ranging from one thousand to sixteen hundred dollars per acre, some idea may be got of the rush there would be to Owens valley, and the rapid increase in the value of land if the C. & C. road were extended south, so as to enable the crowds of people at Los Angeles to reach the valley in a few hours.

In all countries there appears to be a rapid movement toward renewal or increase of silver coinage. Experience seems to prove that there is not gold enough to supply the amount of coin necessarry for the world's business. With increased demand for silver to coin the value of the metal will increase, and with this will come greater activity in silver mining and better profits to the miners.

It is reported that ex-governor Stoneman threatens to kill Harry Dam, his former private secretary, on sight. The cause of the governor's ire is that Dam said he was that kind of a fool and could be made to believe any kind of a story. Dam, it is said, got the Governor to grant pardons to criminals who had money to pay for them and made a nice income out of the business, All this the Governor has at last discovered.

Four citizens of San Luis Obispo county have been arrested by the United States Marshall for being concerned in a fraudulent land entry. They swore that an entry made by one of the parties was for his own exclusive use and benefit and had not been made with an intent to sell it to any body else. It is now alleged that this was false. Each of the defendants was placed under $5,000 bonds for his appearance to answer in the United States Circuit Court.

As a rule short legged fowls will fatter wore rapidly than those "well up on their pins." This is important to the broiler raiser, as his object is to get a nice plump chicken as soon as possible. If eggs are the main desideratum avoid short legged fowls of any breed. They rarely lay well after the second year on account of laying on too mbch fat, while a fowl with a good lenth of leg will ordinarily lay well until three years old.

Mr. Luce is informed by parties at Los Angeles, that if rail communication can be made from Owens valley to that City, large orders will at once be given for Inyo marble. It is said that thirty new buildings will be put up in which an average of ten thousand dollars worth of marble would be used in each, making a total of three hundred thousand dollars worth. When certain arrangements now in progress shall be completed a large addition will be made to the working force and machinery at the quarry.

Testing the Law.

In order to set at rest the question of the constitutionality of the Wright irrigation law a test case is now in the Supreme Court. It is entitled "The Turlock Irrigation District and the Directors thereof vs Williams, Secretary." The action is a friendly one and is brought to test the validity of the law. The people of the District voted to issue $60,000 of bonds for the purposes set forth in the bill and the Directors of the District ordered the bonds to issue accordingly, but the secretary refused to sign them as the law provides and the suit is brought to compel him. A preliminary hearing was had a few days ago and the Court ordered an alternative writ of mandate to issue, returnable before the Court sitting in banc, on Tuesday, December 6, 1887. There is very little doubt as to the constitutionality of the law, but as there is some controversy over the matter it is essential, in view of its great importance to the people of the entire State, that the question should be determined as soon as possible.

Birthday Party

A pleasant social event occured on Wednesday evening in the form of a birthday party in honor of Miss Maggie Conklin. At an early hour the guests met at the residence of A. R. Conklin. Progressive euchre was the leading amusement; the royal prize, a handsome tiolet mirror, was won by Mr. P. W. Forbes; the booby prize fell to the lot of Miss Gussie Stiller. At the conclusion of the euchre game a collation was partaken of; after which instrumental music, singing and dancing wiled the happy moments all too quickly away. The event was one that will often be alluded to with pleasant rememembrances. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Thurston, Mr. and Mrs. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Laird, Mr. and Mrs. Blair, Mrs. Church, Miss Maud Cook, Miss Katie Mulholland, Miss Gussie Stiller, Miss Barnes, Mrs. Brown, Hon. John A. Hannah, P. W. Eorbes, P. H. Mack, Bertrand Rhine, John A. Lank, W. A. Hampton and Irv. H. Mulholland.

Mono County Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury of Mono County in their report condemned the action of the Board of Supervisors for authorizing the Senator and Assemblyman to employ a lawyer to draft a bill to be presented to the Legislature at an expense not to exceed one hundred dollars, which was paid out of the county funds. The report says: "It has been brought to the knowledge of this Grand Jury that many persons of this county are making a livelihood by selling liquor to Indians. We reccommend that the officers of the law be more vigilant in discovering those guilty, and in bringing them to justice." The report is complimentary to the county officers, the Jury having found the affairs of each office conducted in a proper manner and all books neatly kept and accounts correct.

Unnatural Father.

George Westfall is in jail at Los Angeles, charged with an attempt to murder his own son, a child aged three years. Westfall was employed at the Missouri house; he is a widower: the child is rather delicate and caused the father some trouble. and the unnatural parent took his child to an old water tunnel near the city and beat the little creature over the head with a club, breaking his skull and leaving him for dead. Westfall had been seen going away with the child, and when he returned alone suspicion was excited, search was made and the little one was found in the tunnel, still alive but unconscious. The child was brought into town and put in charge of doctors and at last reports was yet alive, but with faint hope of recovery.

Good Progress.

Good progress continues to be made on the east side canal. During the week the ditching machine has been kept at work toward the head of the canal, about three miles above Independence Station. The machine continues to work as well, indeed better, than at the start, as the men and horses get more accustomed to the work. From where the machine was at work a day or two ago the distance to be made to the river is a little over a mile. The soil turned up is of the finest quality; it is mellow and rich as an ash heap and will be very fertile when irrigated It the work goes on as well as up to the bresent time water will be conveyed in the canal for a large amount of land early in the spring.

Profits In Fruit Growing.

Time and again we have called attention to the conditions that make Owens valley one of the best countries in the world for the production of raisins. The character of the soil and the dry atmosphere; the bright sunshine and total absence of fogs make it so. The Los Angeles Express says the average of the 1000 acres in raisin grapes about Riverside last year was $168 net profit per acre. Peaches, which quickly come to bearing, give a net return of $100 to $150 per acre. Apricots, pears, apples and the various small fruits give returns almost or quite as large, while English walnuts, which require several years to come to bearing, yield from $250 to $400 per acre. These are mainly averages. In many cases the yield is much higher than the figures named. All of these fruits can be produced in vast quantity and of far superior quality in Owens valley.

Mistaken Land Hunters.

There are men who appear to think that land can be got in Owens valley for almost nothing, and some come here with that expectation. This is a great mistake and to come here with such notions will be loss of time and money. Very little government land now remains open for location, and none within lines of canals now being made. Men who want to make homes here and have some money to invest in the purchase of partially improved places can find better bargains than anywhere else in the state. But those who want to find land they can have for nothing must search elsewhere.

No License Laws.

The Supervisors failed to meet last Tuesday pursuat to adjournment. This leaves the county without any license law. As matters now stand there is no provision for the collection of any license for carrying on business of any kind in the county. This includes the sale of liquors, wine, beer; the raising or grazing of sheep. In short, no license can be collected in the county till after the next regular meeting of the Supervisors; and this will be in next February. Then license ordinances will be passed under which payment for licenses can be enforced.

The Vote.

Our New School House.

The new school house at Independence was so far finished that it was occupied by teacher and pupils last Monday. The Directors have given us a good substantial and comfortable building. The builder, Mr. C. S. Swan, has carried out his contract very fully; having done even more than he was bound to do by the contract. The tax payers of the district have got full value for their money. Two rooms are partitioned off from the school room; one for the use of the girls, and the other for the boys, where caps, cloaks, etc. may be left during school hours. The school ground occupies an entire block, and is enclosed by a neat fence. This will make a fine play ground. No doubt shade trees will be planted on all sides of the ground as soon as possible. Water pipe is already laid inside the enclosure. A fine bell is placed in a tower on top of the school house. This new building is a most gratifying change from the tumble down old shanty it has supplanted. Independence now has by far the best public school building in the county.

Sailor Philosoppy.

All who have recently made land locations within the irrigction district will gain, if anybody gains, by the issuing and sale of bon Land not patented cannot be taxed for payment of the bonds, either principal or interest. If the bonds can be sold at all they will be sold and the canal built, within the next two years. By that time all land in the valley will have so increased in value that every locator will be more than willing to complete title to his land and bear his part of taxation. It may be rough on their snoots, but it is root hog or die with those whose land is already patented. Most men are willing to accept the sailors philosophy "damn Jack, I'm all right."

A False Report.

A report has been going the rounds of the sale of a gypsum mine at Mound House, Nevada. The price paid for the mine being $150,000. The only known gypsum mine near Mound House belongs to Mr. Israel Luce, Superintendent of the Inyo marble quarry. The mine is on railroad land, bought from the C. P. R. R. Company by Mr. Luce; he has not given authority to any one to sell his mine, and no such sale as that reported has been made by him.

Ichabod.

The Governor Stanford hoisting works at Bodie, have been torn down and the lumber hauled to Bridgeport. The Miner says: "By the way buildings have been going from here this month it would seem that when a Bodiette visits a neighboring town the houses will appear so familiar that he will imagine himself still at home."

A Tight Grip.

Section 23 of the irrigation law reads as follows: "The assessment upon real property is a lien against the property assessed, from and after the first Monday in March for any year; and such lien is not removed until the assessments are paid or the property sold for the payment thereof."

Chris. Crohn arrived at Independence a few days ago. Mr. Crohn was at Cerro Gordo in its flowery days; he still has mining interests there and his present trip here is to look after those interests. His home is in Sonoma county.

Ore is now being taken from the Defiance mine at Darwin that is said to carry $110 gold per ton in addition to a high percentage of silver and lead.

ORDINANCE NO. 20.

SEC. 1 Every person engaged in the business of raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep in the County of Inyo, State of California, must annually procure a license therefor from the Tax-Collector, and make therefor the following payment:

1. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 5,000 sheep or more shall constitute the first class and must pay $250 per annum for the first 5 000 sheep and for every additional 1,000 the sum of $50.

2. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 4,000 sheep and less than 5,000 constitute the second class and must pay $200 per annum.

3. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 3,000 sheep and less than 4,000 constitute the third class and must pay $150 per annum.

4. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 2,000 sheep and less than 3,000 constitute the fourth class and must pay $100 per annum.

5. Those owning or having in their possession and under their control 1,500 sheep and less than 2,000 constitute the fifth class and must pay $75 per annum.

6. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 1 000 sheep and less than 1,500 constitute the sixth class and must pay $50 per annum.

7. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control 500 sheep and less than 1,000 sheep constitute the seventh class and must pay $2 per annum.

8. Those owning or having in their possession or under their control less than 500 sheep constitute the eighth class and must pay $5 per annum.

SEC. 2. Every person who shall engage in the business of raising, grazing, herding or pasturing sheep, or who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo, State of California, any business, trade, profession, or calling, for the transaction of which a license is required by any Ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county, without taking out or procuring the license prescribed by such Ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250, and unless said fine be paid shall be imprisoned in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC 3 The Tax-Collector shall have the collection of he license provided for in this Ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same, and he may enforce the collection as provided by Sction 3 3 30 of the Political Code of the State of California.

SEC. 4. The County Auditor shall prepare and have printed suitable bank licenses for the Tax-Collector to carry out the provisions of this Ordinance with blank receipts for the Tax Collector when sold

SEC. 5. The Tax Collector shall collect a fee of one dollar for each license sold, which shall be paid into the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 6 All money collected for licenses under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be paid over to the County Treasurer as other moneys and placed to the credit of the Salary Fund of the county.

SEC. 7. This Ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after 20 days from its passage, and all Ordinances, or parts of Ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

SEC. 8. This Ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper published in said Inyo County, at least four weeks, said publication to be made for a period of twenty days after the adoption thereof, and said Ordinance to take effect in twenty days from its adoption.

The above Ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, at a regular meeting of said Board, October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes—Harger, Eldred and Robinson.

Noes—None. J. D. HARGER,

LINGUAL ACQUIREMENTS IN TRADE.

Knowledge of Foreign Languages Needed in Commerce—The German Merchant.

Every large town in the midland region of America—in truth, every large town throughout the entire country—has a greater or less percentage of German citizens, varying from 10 to 40 per cent., and in many cities the school commissioners have made a concession to the German element by including the German language among the branches taught in the public schools. By this course the fact has been established that not only the children of German parents have derived a benefit, but that the studious boys and girls of other nationalities have profited by this opportunity for acquiring German. Experience has shown that this twofold acquisition of language, by practical use, is of very decided utility to the children who embrace it, and the latter make much more rapid progress than such as are taught by means of one language exclusively. In many countries they would esteem themselves peculiarly fortunate in possessing such an advantage—that is to say, a majority of the pupils bringing with them into the school at least a superficial knowledge of two languages. Such an opportunity would be sedulously cultivated, just as the French has been cultivated in the French and Wallon provinces for fully 200 years.

Not so, however, in our own country. Here, the German tongue has had to contend constantly against prejudice or direct hostility. If one takes into consideration the fact that a considerable proportion of the boys instructed in the two tongues later in life enter commercial vocations, this aversion to German will be regarded as unwise and suicidal. The German language is the second most widely spoken on the face of the globe, and a man who understands it well, together with the English, can today engage in business as a commercial traveler in any country that is not European. The trade, for example, of Mexico and Central America is in the hands of German firms, whose members were educated from their boyhood for their future profession, by being compelled to acquire Spanish, at the same time with their mother tongue, and often English and French besides. If an American commercial traveler should enter into conversation with such a merchant, in Guatemala or San Salvador, in his mother tongue, a bond of fellowship is at once established, which is very likely to bear fruits.

A nation that in our day wishes to enjoy consideration in the markets of the world must possess polyglot acquirements. For this reason Germans succeed in all parts of the world, whilst Englishmen or Frenchmen are complaining of stagnation in business. The German imperial government encourages these efforts in all directions, and last winter the permanent establishment of an oriental department in the Berlin university was decided upon, not less as a measure for the promotion of commerce than as a facility for learned investigation. The German trade's organ, Export, thus expresses itself upon this subject: "Today it is no longer sufficient to understand English and French; the period in which the German merchant supposed he had acquired a knowledge sufficient of foreign languages, in possessing these two, is long past." At present a large and active commerce throughout the whole globe has been established. The long locked up countries of Africa have been thrown open to the world—Asia is everywhere accessible. Now, for the first time, our minds fully realize how numerous is mankind—how multiform are nations and how many tongued likewise. Even in India, whose sovereignty resides in the hands of Great Britain, there is only a very small minority that can speak more than a word or two of English.

The merchant of modern times must, to be successful, understand foreign tongues—the more the better, and the school authorities, instead of acting as the dog in the manger, should afford to the rising generation every opportunity to acquire them, especially where this can be done at the expenditure of so little time and cost as is attached to the acquisition of German in most of our cities, by the system indicated.—Translated for Public Opinion from the Baltimore Correspondent.

Poverty Abroad.

Senator Frye, of Maine, who has just returned from Europe, gives, in an interview, his impressions of the condition of the masses of the people abroad: "The people in Europe live on the poorest food, and mighty little of it. I found that laborers in Glasgow work for 2s. 6d. a day—sixty-two cents. I was charmed with Edinburgh, but when I saw women drunk, fighting in her beautiful streets, the modern Athens lost her charms. I cannot convey to you the picture of the degradation and want throughout Great Britain caused by drink.

"Speaking of wages, I found girls in factories in Venice working with great skill for from five to twelve cents a day, the most experienced getting twelve cents a day, out of which they have to live. But how they live is a wonder. Their chief diet is macaroni. Farm hands all over Europe, women, earn twenty cents a day. Women do most of the field work. I saw no improved machinery on the farms of the continent. I have seen twenty women in one field at work, not a single man in sight. The plain people have meat to eat but once a week on the continent. The condition of American wage earners is incomparably better than that of the working people in Europe. It is the difference between comfort and competence and discomfort and insufficient food and clothing."—Frank Leslie's.

Cable Roads Preparing for Frost.

The Cable Road company are already preparing for winter. When the road was built due allowance was made for the expansion and contraction of the ironwork itself caused by heat and cold, but the pressure on the rails caused by the same agencies seems to have been entirely forgotten. The first cold snap of winter brought any quantity of trouble to the company. It froze the rain and snow water which had been allowed to settle in the spaces between the paving stones lying between the rails and the iron forming the slot through which the grips pass.

The stones spread farther and farther apart, and, pressing against the ironwork, closed up the slot so effectually that the grips were gripped firmer than they ever grasped the cable, and the road was blocked completely until gangs of men tore up the pavement at various points and pried the slot open with crowbars.

The company are now busily engaged relaying the pavement between the tracks, leaving considerable space between the stones. These spaces are first filled with gravel and finally run as full of hot pitch as possible, in the hope that water will find no space to lodge and freeze in this winter.—New York Evening Sun.

Paris in the Sixteenth Century.

Some curious documents just found in the archives of the Paris prefecture of police throw an interesting and instructive light on the manner in which the streets of Paris were guarded during the night in the Sixteenth century. To begin with, there were stringent rules to the effect that each house should have only one door and should be regularly inhabited. This being the case, it was a comparatively easy task to order that the dwellers in the different houses should in turn keep an eye on what was going on in their respective streets. They were not compelled to tramp up and down the pavement like the modern policeman; the authorities were satisfied if they looked through their windows and watched all that was going on below. If the slightest cry were raised they opened their windows and rang their bells until their neighbors followed suit. The alarm spread from street to street, and soon all the bells in Paris were ringing, the windows were lit up, and the inhabitants, armed to the teeth, sallied forth, barring the road to the malefactors, who were almost always arrested.

I need hardly explain that the Paris of those days was liliputian in comparison with what it is now; but what an uncomfortable way they had of keeping the peace in the Sixteenth century! The remedy was positively worse than the disease, for it was hard that the inhabitants of one street should be awakened out of their first sleep because the dwellers in a remote avenue imagined that something wrong was going on. One would fancy that in some quarter or another some noise at least must have been made every night. The slumbers of the Parisians generally must often have been woefully curtailed, not to speak of the volunteer watchman for whom "all night sittings" were a stern reality.—Home Journal.

Poisons in Food.

We are hearing a good deal of late about poisons in food containing protein compounds, such as the casein of milk and the myosin of lean meat and fish. The protein compounds are prone to decay—that is, to be decomposed by the action of the ferments called bacteria or microbes. In certain forms of decomposition substances of a more or less poisonous nature, called ptomaines, are formed from protein. It appears to be in this way that poisonous compounds are formed in cheese, meats, etc. While the true digestive ferments, such as the ptyalin of saliva and pepsin of gastric juice, are very different from the ferments just spoken of, yet microbes exist in the digestive apparatus of even the healthiest people, and within a short time past it has been found that poisonous compounds, formed probably by the action of microbes, often occur within our bodies.

The natural inference—it is not positively proved, I think—is that there may be cases in which the protein of certain kinds of food is thus transformed into injurious substances while passing through the alimentary canal. Perhaps this is the reason why certain persons cannot endure milk without pain or nausea, and it is not impossible that many of the cases in which one kind of food or another causes sickness may, in the light of future research, be attributed to such fermentations within the body.—W. O. Atwater in The Century.

A Sleepy Headed Duke.

The Duke of Edinburgh is getting up a reputation as the champion sleeper and also as the champion boor among all the royal personages of Europe. Last spring this sleepy headed admiral laid such stress upon the enjoyment of his slumbers at Cannes, on the occasion of Queen Victoria's visit to that place, that he refused to allow the British fleet under his command to return the royal salute of the French squadron to his mother until he had slept all he wanted to, which did not come to pass until several hours after the time that official courtesy demanded an acknowledgment in kind of the noisy welcome of the French guns. Of course, the French admiral and the French people were furious over this marked discourtesy.

But the Duke of Edinburgh sleeps in spite of everything. For example, it is reported that recently the British Mediterranean fleet arrived at an Algerian port and the French officials went on board the flagship to pay their respects to the duke as the commander of the squadron. But Edinburgh was at his usual business. He was so fast asleep that his valet refused to arouse him, and the insulted Frenchmen hurried ashore without a chance to pay their respects. The mattress of this boorish duke must certainly be stuffed with poppies.—New York Graphic.

Signs of Wind.

Father Dominick Navarette in the Seventeenth century discovered certain infallible signs of wind. One never failing token "was the running and fluttering about of little insects aboard the ship, and the more restless they are the higher the wind, and by observing what place they came from mariners shall know if it will be fair." Another sign, according to his reverence, is when pigs begin to run and tumble about a ship in a calm. Baumgarten, in his "Travels," says he was with a pilot who, by putting his finger in the mouth and then holding it up, "prognosticated to us that we should have wind very speedily, which, indeed, proved accordingly." All that the modern sailor can do by wetting his finger and lifting it is to feel if there be any movement in the air. The digit has long ceased to be a sibyl. Formerly the Brittany fishermen raised the wind at will by procuring the dust swept out of a certain church and blowing it in the direction from which they desired the breeze to come. Sardinian sailors also possessed the same useful art. To procure a fair wind they had nothing to do but to sweep a chapel after mass and blow the dust of it after departing ships.—London Telegraph.

A Watch for a Blind Man.

"This is one of the cutest things in the watch line that has yet appeared," said Jeweler Charles S. Crossman, holding up one of the new Swiss watches designed for the use of the blind. "The old raised figure watches were clumsy, and the blind people were constantly bending or breaking the watch hands by touching them. In this watch a small peg is set in the center of each figure. When the hour hand is approaching a certain hour the peg for that hour drops when the quarter before it is passed. The person feels the peg is down, and then counts back to twelve. He can thus tell the time within a few minutes, and by practice he can become so expert as to tell the time almost exactly. They have been in use about six months, and there is a steady and growing demand for them."—New York Evening Sun.

IN A CAPUCHIN TOMB.

Ghastly Devices and Ornaments Constructed Out of Human Bones.

The Capuchin brother, attired in his long habit of coarse brown frieze, his waist encircled by a hempen rope, his stockingless feet bound in sandals, his untrimmed beard and head bare, except for a diminutive skull-cap, is a familiar sight on the streets in Rome, which he patiently traverses, carrying an earthen pitcher as a receptacle, while he begs alms from house to house.

The Church of the Fraternity is in the piazza of the same name in the immediate vicinity of the Piazza Barberini. It was founded by Cardinal Barberini brother of Pope Urban VIII., in 1624—the same Cardinal who was the friend of Milton when he visited the Eternal City in 1638. The church contains the tomb of the founder and many remarkable treasures of art, including the magnificent painting by Guido, representing "Michael the Archangel Trampling the Devil"—the latter a portrait of Pope Innocent X., for whom the painter seems to have had an inveterate hatred.

Passing through the church a few steps to the right will lead you to as ghastly and at the same time as grotesquely horrible a spectacle as the morbid searched-after flesh-creeping experiences can possibly desire. A series of four connected small apartments, the floors of which are made of earth said to have been carried from Jerusalem, contain the horrors I speak of. The walls and ceiling are liberally decorated with ornamented devices constructed by cunning workmen out of human bones. The bones of the vertebra, wrists and ankles are arranged so as to describe circles and curves. These figures are interspersed here and there with skulls, femurs and humerus, tibias, fibulas, ulnas and radius.

The same horrid ornaments are arranged around the person of a deceased brother, who appears suspended against the middle of a wall, incased in the coarse brown cloth, the garment he lived, died and was buried in. The dried skin clinging to the face of the skeleton grins in horrible mockery as the living brother, his former companion in flesh, conducts you around this decorated charnel house. He looks as though he chuckled over the fact of having been released from the grave below to give place to a brother more recently defunct, for it is the rule of the fraternity—who are compelled to make a small burial ground meet the requirements of the order—when a death takes place to dig up the longest interred to make room for his successor.

There is a quality in the earth employed that has the effect of preventing decay of the body, drying it up in mummy fashion, and preserving the hair, presenting a far more horrible effect than if bleached bones were presented to view.

There is a weird uncanniness about this strange mixture of the living and dead, and the latter divested of solemnity by environment of ornamental osteology, while the air of the survivor seems toned down to an unnatural sepulchralness—a sort of half-way condition between life and the tomb.—Rome Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

THE CONGO PIGMIES.

A Race of Cunning Liliputians Living in the Heart of Africa.

Ronzo de Leo, who traveled many years in Africa with Dr. Livingstone, was one who almost stood out alone in the assertion that a race of dwarfs lived in Central Africa. In his lectures in America he told of a little people who fled to the clefts of the rocks when the explorers approached. C. Eugene Wolff, who traveled many years with Stanley, and who is now in the city, gives some queer accounts of these dwarfs. "On the southern branches of the Congo," said he to a reporter, "I have seen whole villages of these Liliputians. They are a generous little people, who live in rude huts and clear ground, engaging in varied sorts of agriculture. They are also skilled hunters and they make palm wine. They are as lithe and supple in climbing trees as monkeys or baboons, although they are physically as perfect men as any of the giant tribes thereabout, and they know as much. The men are not over four feet and a half high, while the women are a good deal smaller. These tiny little men are both brave and cunning. They are experts with the bow and arrow and readily bring down the African bison, antelope and even elephants with them. As trappers of small animals they are unsurpassed. In a close pinch they use the lance with astonishing dexterity, and an ordinary sling in their hands is wielded with wonderful skill. The dwarfs collect the sap of the palm, with which they make soap. The men are smooth-faced and of a rich mahogany color, while the hair is short, kinky and as black as night. Tens of thousands of them live on the south branch of the Congo. They are an affable, kind-hearted people, of simple ways and devoid of vicious tendencies to a greater degree than most semi-barbaric races. The women are industrious and amiable. Very queer these people look alongside the great swarthy blacks further up the Congo. The latter are of prodigious size, uncouth, rude to the remotest degree and cannibalistically inclined. The dwarfs stand in awe of them, but are so brave and cunning that, with all the odds of physique against them, the pigmies are masters of the situation."—San Francisco Examiner.

—The object sought in burying butter is the comparative coolness, equable temperature of the earth and darkness, where no better means are at hand. It should be buried six feet deep, in well-drained soil, in some vessel that will be impervious to moisture. Pack the butter solid to within an inch of the top of the vessel, cover with strong brine and close the top. In this way butter put down sweet is said to keep perfectly until autumn, and, of course, will do so in winter.—Troy Times.

CONCERNING GOLD LEAF.

Methods of Manufacture Usually Employed in the United States.

The extreme malleability of gold has made it a prominent metal in the useful as well as the fine arts. It has been calculated that from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 worth of this precious metal is annually used on ornaments, in gilding, in lettering, edging of books, in signs, ornamental paintings and in dentistry. Of course, the greater proportion of this is for the first-named purpose, although there appears to be a great amount used in the other industries. A comparatively small amount, however, is necessary to cover a great deal of space. A cubic inch can be hammered so as to cover a space of thirty-five feet wide and one hundred feet long, and twenty of our twenty dollar gold pieces can be drawn into a wire that would reach around the globe.

The gold-leaf beaters' art is one of the most surprising when the result is considered. The minute films are so thin as hardly to retard the light, and yet possess all the brilliancy of color of the solid block of gold of about twenty-two carats. It is first cast into a bar eight inches long, one inch wide and one-half inch thick, the weight being about thirty-five ounces, and rolled out until it is about as thick as your finger nail; the "ribbons," as it is called, are now weighed into packages or "beatings" of 2½ ounces each. The beatings are what the men first start to work on. A man will cut one of them (of 2½ ounces) into 180 pieces, making the pieces about an inch square. He next puts them into a "kutch," which is made of prepared paper, the size being 2½ inches square. He lays these 180 pieces of gold between these papers, first a paper, then a piece of gold, and beats on the "kutch" with an iron hammer weighing about eighteen pounds, until the gold is the size of the "kutch." These pieces are cut into quarters and filled into a "shoder," which is made of gold-beater's skin, the size being four inches square, and holding all the pieces, numbering 740. The gold-beater's skin is made from a preparation of a large portion of the large intestines of an ox, and the prepared paper is, or may be, parchment made from calf skin, rendered clear and white by a peculiar operation that gives it the appearance of writing paper, for which purpose it is used to some extent. The pieces are then beaten out in the "shoder," with a hammer weighing about thirteen pounds, making them all four inches square. These pieces, or "shoder leaves" (as they are now called), are cut into quarters, making them two inches square, and in all 2,880 pieces or quarters of "shoder-leaves." These are filled into three molds. Each mold is made of the same material as the "shoder." The molds are five inches square and hold nine hundred pieces or quarters of "shoder" each.

The molds are then beaten out separately with a hammer weighing about eight pounds until the gold is very nearly square with the edge of the molds. They are then sent to girls for booking. Each girl will take a mold full of gold, taking each leaf out separately and trimming the edges of the leaf off, making them 3¼ inches square, and as the leaves are cut they are put into a paper book holding twenty-five leaves. The gold is now ready for sale.—American Wood Worker.

HE WON A COOL $5,000.

Great Good Luck of Samuel W. Barrett.

Melbourne Avenue, North Toronto, has for the past few days been a scene of intense excitement. It was whispered that one of the residents held a lucky ticket in The Louisiana State Lottery drawing on the 9th ult. The News found the fortunate man to be Samuel Ward Barrett, 105 Melbourne avenue, forman bookbinder at Gage & Co.'s, Wellington street.

Mr. Barrett was found at his place of business, and in answer to the reporter's inquiries said, while a broad smile lighted up his whole countenance, "I had no faith in the lottery business; but four months ago one of the men induced me to invest a dollar in it. I sent to the New Orleans National Bank in New Orleans to find out how I could get tickets. The bank sent me blanks, and I enclosed a dollar for a tenth ticket in the May drawing. I got nothing then. Still in June I again sent a dollar for a tenth ticket, also in July, and also in August. I got the report of the August drawing last Thursday week on my way home, and carelessly jammed it into my pocket, with the remark: 'Well, there's another dollar gone.' In my bedroom, however, I thought I would look at the report, and the first that met my eyes was the number 29,146, entitling me to one tenth of the fifty thousand dollar prize. I immediately broke the news to my wife, and joy reigned in the family. I tell you," said Mr. Barrett with a wink "one does not fall into a small fortune so slick every day."

"How did you collect your money?" asked The News, when sufficiently recovered. "I received notice from the New Orleans National Bank that a draft for $5,000 in gold coin had been forwarded to the Central Bank in this city, payable to my order."

"Did you call at the Central Bank and draw the money?" "No. I allowed it to remain there on deposit to my credit."

"Had you other tickets in the same drawing?" "No, I only had one. The whole business since I commenced cost me for tickets, postage, etc., $4 32, and I now stand in five thousand dollars ahead."

"I suppose you will go more extensively into lottery business hereafter?" "No, I will continue to send my dollar every month. But I tell you they are going to do a pile of business here now. No less than one hundred tickets have been sent for since I got the prize." He turned around, and pointing to the numerous employees, said: "Why all these have sent for tickets, and they intend to continue as monthly subscribers."—Toronto (Ont.) News, Sept. 12.

Only a Brief Interruption.

It was in one of the stately mansions of Beacon street, Boston, that our story opens.

He was declaring his love in language that only a Boston youth can use, and even he must be sober.

"Dearest Penelope," he said, "if I had loved you less I could have told you that I loved you long ago. If——"

But he stopped. A far-away whither-am-I-drifting look had come over the girl's face, and his heart sank within him.

"If my words are displeasing to you, Miss Penelope," he went on in his broken tones, "if I have said what I ought not to say, or you ought not to hear; if I——"

"Not at all," interrupted Penelope, looking wildly about her, "but I have certainly lost my spectacles. Oh, there they are. Thanks. As you were saying, Mr. Waldo——"—N. Y. Sun.

—A young man who was about to enter a drinking saloon suddenly stopped, and with a set look upon his face walked rapidly away. "Sir," said an old gentleman who had observed his movements, "you fill my heart with joy. You have resolved never to enter that accursed place again." "I won't at present, at least, sir," responded the youth; "you see it suddenly occurred to me that I owe the proprietor seventy-five cents."—Tid-Bits.

WRETCHED, INDEED,

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint. Nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of the blood and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most distressing, as it is one of the most common, of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grand specific for fever and ague.

"Water as a Medicine," read a Kentucky politician in a sanitary journal. "Next, some blame fool will be advocating water as a beverage," he added in a tone of deep disgust.

THE SPLENDOR OF DRESS

And the artificial effects of cosmetics, no matter how deftly applied, can never make beautiful or attractive one who is subject to emaciation, nervous debility, or any form of female weakness. These must be reached by inward application, and not by outward attempts at concealment, and the ladies may take hope from the fact that thousands of their sisters have made themselves more radiant and beautiful by the use of Dr. Pierce' "Favorite Prescription" than they could ever hope to do by the aid of the appliances of the toilet.

There are few more disagreeable people in this world than the people who are always doing wrong and then telling you how bad they feel about it. They ought either to do right or else get a tougher conscience.

CRAMPS OF THE MUSCLES CURED.

John I Wood, of Stratford, Ont., was cured of cramps in the legs by wearing ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. Mr. Wood says:

Some three months ago I was taken very sick with severe pain in the small of my back over the kidneys. The pain was excruciating. I applied an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER over the affected region, and had relief almost within an hour. At the same time, in conjunction with this trouble, I had very great nervous disturbance, affecting my legs with cramps so I could scarcely sleep. Meeting with such success with my back I applied a plaster under the knee on each leg, and in three days was completely cured, and have never been troubled in either way since.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

CURES ALL HUMORS, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, White Swellings, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and vital strength, will be established.

which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its marvelous power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills, alternating with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and coated tongue, you are suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is unsurpassed.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS, at $1.00, or SIX BOTTLES for $5.00.

IN A GERMAN CAFE.

An Institution of the Fatherland That Has Found Its Way to New York.

I was walking up Second avenue from Hudson street the other day when I noticed a number of men seated at open windows in one of the old-time aristocratic houses near Tenth street. Some were reading, some were playing chess and a few were dreamily puffing at cigars and watching the rings of blue smoke as they floated over their heads.

From their appearance they were all Germans, which was not at all strange, this being now a German neighborhood. Over the main entrance to the house was a small, neat sign, bearing the single word: "Cafe." I entered.

The place was a peculiar one. It was divided into three rooms, and also had a large veranda in the rear. The front room, which was also the largest, contained many small, round, hardwood tables, at which sat the persons I had seen from the street and many others. Nearly all were drinking strong coffee. On shelves extending around the walls were all sorts and kinds of German illustrated papers, newspapers, funny journals, standard German books and some rare and curious German volumes. Perhaps thirty men were in the room, although it was early in the afternoon, when most people are at work.

Generally Germans are very voluble when they are together, but here not a sound was to be heard except the rustling of the papers and an occasional ejaculation from one of the chess players. The latter were deeply immersed in their games and entirely oblivious to aught else but their cigars. Their brows were knit into severe frowns and their bodies were bent forward. An air of extreme restfulness pervaded the place and made one feel at home, despite the foreign characteristics of the men. All seemed to know each other, but, as if by agreement, all conversation was confined to a few words of recognition.

In the spacious hall a similar scene was to be found. In one of the inner rooms were two billiard tables, which were covered and looked neglected. In the third room was a counter with two showcases, one containing cigars and cigarettes, and the other filled with samples of German pastry. There were large cakes, soft and delicious in appearance, but not at all sweet; peculiar apple, peach, cheese and prune cakes, without any upper crust, all very good, but different from American or French pastry.

On the veranda sat several persons engaged in conversation, apparently appertaining to business. It was a queer scene in the middle of a busy day in busy New York and outside of similar resorts could probably not be found anywhere else in the city.

In no place, probably, can the everyday life of the male part of our large German population be studied to better advantage than in the numerous German cafes which range from the cheap resort on East Houston street to the swell and luxurious brownstone affair on Fifty-seventh street. The characteristics of the one differ but little from the other. The difference lies mainly in the surroundings and the quality of the furniture, decorations and so forth.

The one is an exact copy of its Berlin and Viennese prototype. It is so entirely different from any thing American or French or English that it seems out of place in our streets. To a student desirous of making himself acquainted with real German customs and character no place this side of the Fatherland will prove so useful as this cafe. It is also the only place where can be obtained those examples of real German cooking which are so satisfying and at the same time so delicious.

The cafe is a great deal more to the German than merely a restaurant. It is his club where he find things as he remembers them in the old country; where he can throw aside his acquired American customs and can forget every thing except that he is a German.

Not that he always does this, for at night, when the quiet scene I have described is changed to one of mirth and enjoyment of a more noisy kind, scraps of loud conversation can be heard, in which English words are frequently jumbled in with a strong flow of German in an extremely ludicrous manner.

When two German business men have some particularly important transaction to discuss they will, if anywhere near a cafe, adjourn there to talk it over. Under the influence of coffee and cigars they soon come to an amicable arrangement. From early morning, when the bachelors come there for their breakfasts, until late at night, when, dinner having been disposed of, chess, billiards and merry talk are in order, the cafe is continually filled. To some it is more familiar than their homes.—N. Y. Cor. Philadelphia Press.

A Hopeless Case.

Anxious Chicago Father (to friend)—I fear that my son will never amount to any thing.

"I heard," the friend consolingly replied, "that he had written a magnificent criticism on the school of American realism."

"Oh, yes, he did that, but he sold a cow for ten dollars when he might just as well have got ten and a quarter.—Arkansaw Traveler.

—A friend who has been at the seaside estimates that it costs about a dollar a pound to catch bluefish. And, he adds, it is awfully irritating when you don't catch any and the skipper claims them all.

FACTS ABOUT CANDY.

Interesting Information Picked Up by a New York Reporter.

There is more money in molasses candy at the ordinary selling prices than in any other kind.

Close to molasses candy come chocolate drops, caramels and other candies in which sugar and chocolate or plain flavors are the ingredients. The candies on which there is the least profit in proportion to the selling price are those which sell high. The best confectioners' sugar costs but little over six cents a pound, and the best grades of molasses are not dear. They add a little flavoring make molasses candy, and that is why there is so much profit in it.

There is another particular besides good grades of molasses or sugar and flavoring that makes a big difference in the quality of candy and would account for the superiority of some candy over others. That is the quality of the butter. Cheap confectioners do not use butter at all. There are plenty of substitutes for it, but none answers entirely. One of the best known candy men in New York, who has built up a large business, starting from a small taffy shop, thinks that his use of fifty-cent butter in his molasses candy has done more to build up his trade reputation than any thing else. He gives as the keynote of candy success: "Pure materials, fruit sirups and fine butter."

As much candy of the best grades is sold in summer as in winter, if not more. The candy stores down town do a big summer business, as business men buy candy there for their wives out of town, and young clerks send a box every little while to their girl who is off at some summer resort. In the winter the bulk of the trade is by the women themselves, who cause more trouble than the men, and do not buy so much of the highest price. When a man is buying candy he asks for the best, while a woman prices the candies as she does every thing else.

A woman's candy store can always be told from a man's candy store by noticing whether there is a soda-water fountain and some tables to sit down at. A man does not go to a candy store but to a drug store for whatever soda-water he may want, while a woman prefers a candy store to have a soda-water and ice cream attachment. Some of the candy stores are accused of running liquor attachments in the back room reserved for ice cream tables, but as men do not go there a male reporter has no way of finding out except by hearsay whether there is a secret for men in the guise of an ice cream parlor.

The best paid man in a candy establishment is the designer of new candies. His pay is $50 or $60 a week, while the foreman of the factory receives only $30 or $40. There is always a demand for new candies with new names. Each new thing invented has its run of popularity for a little while, and then is succeeded by something else. The candy man who puts the most taking novelties on the market at the right time is the one who makes money. There is a constant demand not only for new candies but for new flavors and designs in old standbys. Molasses candy is as old as any form of confectionery, yet there are new flavors and forms of it appearing every little while, and caramels and chocolates continually turn up with some French name prefixed to them. A man who can invent such things is worth money, and is rare.—N. Y. Evening Sun.

IN GAY BARCELONA.

With some exceptions the ladies still wear the poetic Andalusian headgear, their glossy tresses piled high, the black lace covering them drooping in front in a point. The Barcelona shop girl or seamstress, however, instead of the mantilla, prefers a crimson or deep yellow silk kerchief, that suits to perfection her dark skin, jetty locks, and glorious orbs. Probably their eyes become trained by the constant contemplation of vivid colors in mountain and sky, for even in such slight matters as the selection of a flower to place in the hair, or the choice of a stocking to match the petticoat, the Spanish lass never errs on the score of harmony. The peasant, too, is no less romantic than artistic. In dress, deportment and physiognomy, in fact from head to foot, his appearance is characteristic. His woolen cap is in reality shaped like the leg of a stocking—happily he does not stiffen or distend it to its full length capacity, the effect would be too grotesque for even his inborn gravity; the lavish superfluity he draws forward, and, folding it in a scroll over the forehead, it not only shades the eyes, but is most becoming. It is generally red, and thus not altogether unlike the Phrygian cap; old men, however, often choose a dark brown, purple or gray color. His short jacket is of black or blue velveteen, with clusters of tiny silver filigree buttons; he wears knee breeches, knitted hose, and round his waist a red sash no less than five yards in length. To put this on he lets it trail on the ground, and winds himself into it by turning round and round. In the folds of this scarf he carries a clasp-knife of singular shape, presumably of Moorish origin, and peculiar to Catalonia. The blade is from five to seven inches in length, and, laying it flat in the right hand palm, with the point touching the tip of the two forefingers, the "muchacho" knows how to throw it with deadly accuracy. A pair of sandals, light and suitable for the climate, complete his equipment, and no doubt contribute greatly to the marvelous feats of speed and endurance for which he is remarkable. On many a day's journey in the mountains the young man who acted as my guide was able with ease to keep pace with the horse, and where the path became rocky he would stride in advance springing like a goat from boulder to boulder.—Gentleman's Magazine.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—Henry Ward Beecher's old home on Hicks street, Brooklyn, has been leased to a Mrs. White, a member of Plymouth Church, who will use the premises for letting out furnished rooms.

—George Meredith, the famous English novelist, is a handsome man between fifty and sixty years of age. His hair is gray, his features well cut and expressive, and his manner vigorous, unaffected and pleasing.

—A former public school teacher in England is the scrub woman of the hotel on the top of Mount Washington. She is a good musician and an excellent scholar in the languages. When off duty she devotes her time to reading French and Latin books.

—An old negro woman living near Sunny Side, Ga., has two children—a boy and a girl. The girl she has named "I will arise and go to my Father," but calls her "I willer" for short. The boy's name is "Only begotten son, in whom I am well pleased," but he is called "Only" for short.

—Captain A. H. Whetstone, of Robinson Springs, Ala., has in his possession a trowel that his father, Rev. Jacob Whetstone, owned and used in the year 1795. He has also a chair which was one among the first his father used after his marriage in 1799. This chair, Mr. Whetstone says, was made in South Carolina out of hickory-wood.

—A gentleman who has taken a house at the seaside for the summer advertised for a housekeeper, and entertaining enough were some of the answers he received. In one case a woman wrote that she must have two rooms, artistically furnished, and a comfortable stall in the stable for her saddlehorse. The gentleman says he is much impressed by her forbearance in not insisting that he should also provide her with a groom in livery.

—A gentleman in London thoughtlessly omitted to remove his cork legs before bathing. The laws of nature are seldom suspended in behalf of individuals, and they were not in this case. The gentleman was suspended instead. In the water the legs at once assumed a superior position, and maintained the upper hand of the gentleman, so to speak, in spite of his most violent struggles. He would have been drowned had it not been for timely assistance.

—At Emperor William's recent visit to Gastein he found on his table a letter addressed in very large characters, which proved to be from the hand of his five-year-old great-grandson William. An inclosure by his mother assured the Emperor that no one had dictated or even looked at the letter, the first production of the writer. "I fully believe it," the Emperor smilingly said, "for if she had seen it she would not have allowed it to be sent. In six lines my great-grandson makes nine demands."—Christian Visitor.

—It has been noticed that a girl who has graduated from Vassar and had twenty-five thousand dollars spent on her education will, after marriage, hold clothes-pins in her mouth and gossip over the back fence while hanging out the washing, just like other women. You can't change a woman's nature.—Dakota Bell.

—As an absent-minded professor was sitting at his desk writing one evening, one of his children entered, and he exclaimed: "What do you want? I can't be disturbed now." "I only want to say good-night," answered the child. "Never mind now; to-morrow morning will do as well," said the professor.—N. Y. Ledger.

—A New York young man who arrays himself for his slumbers in the imported Indian style recently visited a quiet summer resort, and while there sent two sets of pajamas to the local washer woman. In making out her bill, the proper names of these garments evidently gave her much trouble, but after one or two false starts she entered them as two prs. overalls and two jumpers.—Harper's Bazar.

COLONEL MACBRIDE.

A Prominent Texan's Adventures in New York City.

Colonel Sumpter McBride, who is one of the cattle king of Austin, Texas, is once more in New York on a brief visit. He visited our sanctum last week. He seemed to be puzzled about something. Finally he remarked:

"This is the dog-gondest town ever I was in."

"Yes, New York is considerable of a town."

"Well I should say so. Do you know what bothers me more than any thing else?"

"Quien sabe?"

"Well, it's seeing the duplicate of every man I ever met in my life."

"Yes, I've noticed that."

"Do you know Dan McGary, of Houston?"

"I should smile; but as far as that goes nobody could know Dan and not smile, if there was a saloon in the neighborhood. But what about Dan McGary?"

"I saw a policeman taking Dan to jail. I pushed through the crowd and was trying to tell the policeman that I'd go on Dan's bail bond, when he reached out and hit me a whack on the head that made me see stars. I wonder if it was Dan?"

"That was merely somebody who looked like him. Dan is in Houston."

"I guess you are right, for I've seen four Ben Thompsons since I got here, and you know Ben was killed in San Antonio more than three years ago. I was one of his pall-bearers. And yet I saw one of him driving a street car and another of him bathing at Coney Island, and two more of them on the police force."

"I have undergone the same experience."

"Besides, I met a man who looked so much like ex-Governor Ireland that I called him Governor; and what's more, he was walking with a man who was a perfect fac simile of ex-Senator Terrill. If it hadn't been for that I'd have sworn it was Ireland."

"Yes, you meet all kinds of people in New York. There are lots of Texans, here, too."

"I should say so. I made the acquaintance of one yesterday on Broadway. He is a nice, clever fellow, knows everybody in Austin, and is a nephew of Major Brackenridge, of the First National Bank."

"He is, eh?"

"Yes, he had just won a picture worth five thousand dollars, one of the old masters, you know."

"Did you lend him any money?"

"Yes. You see there was one hundred and fifty dollars due on it. He didn't have any money with him, but fortunately I had just drawn two hundred dollars from the bank, so I let him have it."

"Let him have it, did you?"

"Yes. He didn't want to take it at first, but I persuaded him."

"O, you persuaded him?"

"Yes, he seems to be a gentleman from the ground up. Well, I must be going."

We have not seen Colonel Sumpter McBride since, but he is still in New York, for there was an item in a morning paper to the effect that he had called at police headquarters to obtain the arrest of an unknown man who had played the confidence game on him.—Texas Siflings.

LEARNING A TRADE.

A Sound Argument in Favor of Boys Acquiring Knowledge in Shops.

When a boy has once gained the practical knowledge which every boy of the least ability will naturally acquire in a shop he is fitted to convert the knowledge which a college or a university offers him into useful wisdom.

The greatest fallacy of modern educationists is that a boy can better be taught to do something by theory than he can learn to do something by practice. This has never proved true, and there is no reason to believe that it ever will. There are thousands of college graduates in this country to-day whose prospects of getting a living are extremely precarious, because they know nothing except what they were taught at college. On the other hand, there are a great many who have had their ideas broadened by a college course, and correspondingly benefited thereby. Simple as the whole matter is, there are many who can not be made to see it, and they are helped along sometimes, in their blindness, by those who ought to know better. The idea that a college course alone will fit a man to get a decent living is as fallacious as the idea that such a course can not help him in getting along in the world. The best advice, in our opinion, that can be given boys in this respect is: Do not depend upon what you may acquire at some institution of learning to get you comfortably through the world. The failures will be a hundred to one. On the contrary do not despise what you may learn at schools and colleges. This will be a mistake, though not so fatal as the one first named.—American Machinist.

—The three-year-old son of Michael Curron, of Susquehanna, N. Y., was seized with convulsions and a doctor was called. Suspecting that the boy had been overeating, the doctor gave him an emetic and soon after the child ejected a live lizard two and a half inches long. The boy is now all right.

—A man in Westville, Conn., had a grudge against a neighbor, and therefore hunted up an old law enacted in 1650 with which to get even. The law provides that one rescuing cattle from a pound shall be fined. The neighbor, a poor woman, allowed her cow to feed near the house while her son watched her closely. The animal chanced to step on to her neighbor's ground, and before the boy could reach her she had been captured. The cow was on its way to the pound, but was rescued by the old woman. A few days afterward she was fined seven dollars—as the law fixed the sum—and the man can pocket half the amount.

The Widow's Might.

She was a widow and perhaps a little sensitive on that account. When she answered a summons the other day she found a good-looking ministerial chap standing at the door.

TO COUNTY FAIR ORATORS.

He started for the county fair, the ambitious candidate,
While his rival went a fishing with a flask he labeled "bait!"
"Upon the sun tanned sons of toil my heart with pleasure dotes,
I love their simple ways," said he, "and venerate their votes."

He arose before the people, but their eyes were all agog,
In strained expectancy to see the thousand dollar hog:
"My fellow countrymen," he said, in accents loud and full—
A deep, stentorian, mighty roar came from the Durham bull.

"Good men from Geebuck county, and brothers, one and all"—
At this the champion donkey brayed from out his neighboring stall;
Just then the horse race was announced; the people scattered wide,

A cow began to taste his coat and masticate its tail.
He seized his tailless covering and from the stage he ran,
And squandered all his money on a three card monte man.

Such fate the luckless candidate had on that direful day,
And next his rival at the polls bore all his votes away.
"We want no man to govern us," each farmer said, "I swow, Who'll let himself be all et up by any durned old cow!" —S. W. Foss in Detroit Free Press

Song of the Money King.

And I rule men with a scepter made of gold.
I would not exchange my state for a kingdom small or great,
If I lived to be a jubilee year old.

How I pity Kalakaua, once a royal rogue, but now a
Poor old penniless repenter just deposed,
And the czar, who eats by proxy, and considers all men foxy,
With a tendency to make him indisposed.

No one has to sample what I eat;
For I cannot lose my rocks while I keep my eye on stocks,
And pretend to be a stranger to the street.

So I wish to have it known that no shaky foreign throne
Can allure me till the bank is wholly burst;
And while blest with failing health (and accumulating wealth)
I'll sign myself, Yours,
Makesamillion First.

A Foolish Queen.

Omaha Man (in England)—That's a pretty fair sort of a house. I believe I'll take that for the season.

Englishman—'Ouse! 'ouse! that's no 'ouse, sir.

"No house, eh? What is it then, a stable?"

"That's one of the queen's palaces."

"Oh! I see it's empty."

"Yes, it stands h'empty most of the time."

"I wonder what rent she wants for it?"

Well, Can You Pronounce It?

I stopped yesterday to price some very beautiful pears which were exposed for sale upon a fruit stand.

"What sort are they?" I asked, "and how much do you charge for them?"

"Fifteen cents apiece," replied the vender briefly. "They're the real duchy dangle 'em."

It took me till morning to make out that he meant the "Duchesse d'Angouleme."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Omaha Dame—Johnny, what did you do with that quarter?

Johnny—Spent it for education.

"Education?"

"Yes'm; went to see the 'Battle of Gettysburg.'"

"I told you I'd take you there myself next week."

The Camisole.

Her dainty waist, her pretty form,
Were hidden from my view
Beneath a blessed garment true
Was beautifully blue.

The lace upon it clung about
The curvings of her mouth,
It ravished all my senses and
It put my wits about.

"What call you this seraphic thing—
This girl of Beauty's goal?"
I murmured, and she laughing said:
"It is my camisole."

A camisole—Oh, idly named—
My pulses wildly roll
At sight of it—how can it then
E'er hope to calm my soul?

VENETIAN GLASS.

The Modern Methods of Producing the Lovely Article.

The blending of the colors in Venetian ware is almost infinite in variety. The colors, however, never offend the eye; they are so toned and softened as to produce a combination rarely attained. They certainly manifest great art in this respect, although they effect so little by the excessive application of adornment. Amidst all their mistakes there is, as it were, a desire to show how their method can be applied to articles of domestic use. This, no doubt, has been the aim of Dr. Salviati and Signor Castagliani, and here and there can be seen some real gems in the form of small cream jugs and finger basins, with the simple green leaves and roses so adjusted that they are not only very beautiful, but at the same time well suited to the chief requirements of domestic economy, easy to clean and convenient for use.

What is wonderful in these Venetian productions is the extraordinarily skillful arrangement of the colors. In this these artists are unapproachable. One feels humbled in their presence. The facility with which they handle their threads and the way in which they imitate the natural colors and forms of flowers is as near to perfection as may be. They revel in this power. In the adjustment of different metals, also, they are wonderful. Their continuations of metallic substances, such as the golden threads, known as avanturine, with ruby enamel are astonishing. The exactness, the regularity and the consecutive order displayed in these combinations indicate skill in the manipulating process not yet attained by any other glass workers in the world. Some of these things appear as if they were done with a lady's knitting needle, and belonged to embroidery rather than glass. It is almost impossible, in several instances, to trace out the maze by discovering how they had placed these threads at starting. The more closely they are examined, the more there is to wonder at the executive powers of the workmen. One thing to be greatly commended is the way in which they prevent their long fancy glasses from cracking in the feet. All their elaborate goblets and dishes are made in different sections and joined at the finish. For instance, there was first the dish (the body only), then the stem distinct as a piece, then the foot, all made separate, then the punty stuck inside the dish, and after this fashion all the separate parts are joined, and so the risk considerably lessened by letting the foot and stem be the last part of the work, and not the body as in sometimes the case. The chief thing required is great care that the punty inside the dish should be so regulated as that no mark can be seen of it after the article is finished.

One great drawback to some Venetian glass is liability to injure from use. It is so fragile in structure that the greatest possible care can scarcely prevent its being broken. One great principle of domestic economy is that all articles for domestic use should be made capable of a reasonable amount of durability. In this particular Venetian glass is certainly deficient, for the outer surface is so ornamented with prunts and pinchings and breakable pieces, that even the merest touch of the hem of a lady's garment is sufficient to break it, and when it is considered that every time these glasses are used they require to be thoroughly cleaned in order that their surfaces may be bright, this fault becomes a very grave one. It has indeed been a question with some whether Venetian glass can be properly considered as applicable to domestic purposes at all, they contending that it is only an art production. This consideration militates greatly against this kind of glass work. In examining the pinchings at the top of handles and stems sharp projections are discovered which would make it it impossible for them to be cleaned otherwise than by a most elaborate exercise of care; where servants have to be employed this becomes a serious source of expenditure.

Another notable feature in the Venetian productions is the want of accuracy and precision in their shape. Of all things a broken outline shape is one of the most distressing characteristics that can be conceived. Some critics have affirmed that perfection of outline and proportion interferes with the freedom of design. This is, however, refuted by an appeal to the art productions of Greece, which are mathematically correct in outline, and capable of construction by the application of a few geometrical principles. Surely truth is as much required in the art of glass blowing as it is in logic and other sciences. There remains, notwithstanding its flights, in this Venetian glass much to admire. In the graceful interlacing of soft and chaste colors and delicate threading there is love of true art, with all the wonderful subtlety and grace, and leads one to hope for the time when other workmen will rise above narrow local prejudices and seek to add to their resources the hints which may be drawn from this difficult yet capable art industry.—N. Y. Herald.

SATURDAY DECEMBER 10 1887

The session of the Grand Jury was very brief as will be inferred from the report published elsewhere. As intimated in the report itself the examination of books of county officers by a committee of Grand Jurors is mere form and amounts to nothing. A thorough examination could only be made by an expert in such work, and with all the time necessary. There is no reason to think that any such examination is necessary. A matter was proposed for consideration from Bishop Creek; but a majority of the jury held that if there is any infringement of law in the case a remedy can be had much cheaper, quicker and easier by lodging complaint and proceeding according to the usual forms of law than by any action that the Grand Jury could take. They decided that if there is not grievance enough to induce any one to make such complaint there would be nothing to warrant interference by the Grand jury. The foreman and jurors deserve commendation for wasting no time over their work or in idle talk when no good could be accomplished. The county has reason to be satisfied by the fact that the jail is empty and no criminal charges pending. Several jurors expressed the opinion privately that it would be well for the county to own a hospital building at the county seat.

Congress was opened last Monday. In the House of Representatives Mr. Carlisle was elected Speaker on the first ballot. This is his third term in the office. In his speech on taking office Mr. Carlisle urged the need of legislation for the reduction of the revenue. Money is pouring into the National Treasury much faster than the government can use it, and the accumulations are so great as to be an injury to the business of the country. He said that the numerous and valuable industries which have grown up under our system of taxation ought not to be rudely disturbed by sudden and violent changes; but taxation ought to be reduced by a moderate and reasonable reduction of duties. In the Senate objection was made to the admission of Faulkner of West Virginia and the case was referred to the Committee on elections. Objection was also made to Turpie of Indiadna, but the oath of office was administered to him and he was allowed to take his seat.

Ruling Passion Strong in Death.

Dr. Swan relates a very sad case of the ruling passion strong in death. I always believe a doctor's story, except in a case of cure. If the patient dies, you never hear anything but the truth. If he lives, the doctor has to find some explanation of the phenomenon. Doctors, of course, see a vast variety of human nature, and especially its weak sides. This is a touching story of a young and fair girl, leaving the bright world while the dew of life was still laying on its morning glories. You can imagine the sadness of the scene. The growing certainty of the end, the passing beauty of the world, the bright vision of all the happiness and the joy, the heavy shadow hanging over all.

"It is hopeless," said the gentle doctor. "You can not live."

"And must I die?" she asked.

"You can not live."

"Tell me, doctor, one thing before I go."

"What is it?"

"Does the hair change color after death?"

"No."

"Then I die happy. I'll look as well as those Smith girls on the day of judgment, anyway."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Paris Dangerous for Pedestrians.

Paris is the most dangerous city in the world for the foot passengers. There is no rule of the road and no policemen to guard the crossings. The pavements are mostly smooth, silent asphalt and all, the cabs are insured in a company for that purpose, so the drivers are reckless, and so if a man gets in the way of a cab he is arrested for obstructing the traffic. If he has been run over it is all the worse, for he has more effectually obstructed the traffic and besides collected a crowd. In the principal streets of London this sort of thing is better regulated that any where else in the world. In the middle of the street there is a guarded safety spot. All traffic must keep to the left of the direction in which it is going. A person crossing has only to look for vehicles one way. A policeman stands in the center to see that foot passengers have a fair show for their lives. A little of that kind of tyranny would not be a bad importation to introduce in some of our American cities.—Detroit Free Press.

A Cautious Chap is John Chinaman.

Among the passengers on a north side car was a disciple of Confucius, who earns a living by washing shirts and stockings in a Clark street basement. Suddenly the Chinaman held up his hand, focused his oblique eye on the conductor and calmly waited for the car to come to a full stop before he ventured to step off.

"That's just the way with these chaps," said the conductor, giving the bell two vicious jabs. "A Chinaman will never get on or off a car unless it is standing perfectly still. We always have to stop for them. They are more particular than an old woman with the rhumatiz. I have been a conductor six years, and in all that time I never saw a Chinaman get on or off a moving car. I have talked with the other boys, and they say it is a full stop every time for a Chinaman. Way is this so? I give it up. You ought to be as good at guessing as I am."—Chicago Herald.

Farewell of Rear Admiral Leroy.

A recent visitor at Old Point Comfort was Rear Admiral Leroy—"the Chesterfield of the navy"—who went on the retired list a few years ago. That event occurred while he was at Nice, and he signalized it with a farewell banquet on his old ship, the Trenton. The festivities over, he ordered his gig to be made ready to take him ashore, but when he went to take his place in it he found it manned entirely by officers, headed by his successor, the new rear admiral, all in full uniform.—New York Tribune.

Curious Fact Regarding "Rich" Mortar.

In conversing recently with one of the oldest and most successful contractors and builders of Chicago, I learned a very curious fact in relation to mortar. He says that mortar in the interior of walls, especially if it be what is called "rich" mortar, is liable never to harden, but to retain its soft consistency even for centuries. This can only happen where the interior of the wall is hermetically sealed against the external air. This both arrests evaporation and shuts off the chemical operation of the atmosphere.

My informant said that in England, not long ago, an architect dug into a thick stone wall 300 years old, and took from between the interior stones some mortar as soft as it was the day the wall was built; and he himself has made some discoveries of the same character. Any one, he says, who doubts the possibility of such a thing, can easily satisfy himself of it by putting some rich mortar into a glass bottle and hermetically sealing it. He will find that it will never get any harder than when it was put into it. This curious fact about mortar may be the explanation of some of the hitherto inexplicable and horrible casualties that have taken place by the sudden collapse of great buildings.—Cor. Chicago Journal.

By order of the Board of Directors.

JOHN L. HUNT, Secretary.

Office—808 Montgomery street, San Francisco, California.

ORDINANCE NO. 19.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, state of California, do ordain as follows:

All persons doing business within the county of Inyo shall obtain licenses from the Tax Collector of said county as follows:

SEC. 1. Auctioneers are divided into two classes and must obtain licenses from the Tax Collector as follows:

First Class. Those whose average monthly sales amount to $2,500 and upward constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those whose average monthly sales are less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 2. Persons engaged in banking, loaning money at interest, or in buying or selling notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of private persons, or in buying or sell of State County or City stocks, or other evidences of State, County or City indebtedness, or stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness of incorporated companies, or in buying or selling gold dust, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver coin, are divided into two classes and must pay licenses as follows:

First Class. Those doing business in the aggregate to the amount of $10,000 per quarter, or over, constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those doing business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $5 per and for each bowling alley, $10 per quarter for each alley; but no license must be granted for a term of less than three months.

SEC. 4. For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a caravan or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $7. And for each show for pay of any figures, jugglers necromancers, magic class, wire or rope dancing, and slight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable entertainments, by any authorized association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 7. Every person who sells spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and make the following payment:

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,000 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter.

SEC. 8. Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, (except Agricultural or Horticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale under license) and all persons who keep houses or carriages for hire (except such as are used in the transportation of goods) must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, license, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector; such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates:

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $5,000 per month or more constitute the first class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 and less than $5,000 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $2,500 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $5 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon at a license.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines.

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $5 per month, and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares, or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $10 per month.

SEC. 2. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or bull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for hire must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and pay therefor as follows:

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $75.

Second. At $75 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $50.

Third. At $50 and less than $75 constitute the third and require a license of $40.

Fourth. At $25 and less than $50 constitute the fourth class and require a license of $25.

Fifth. At $15 and less than $25 constitute the fifth class and require a license of $15.

Sixth. At less than $15 constitute the sixth class and require a license of $10.

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A license for propagation obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 11. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said license fee paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 13. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 540 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 15. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR
For all Diseases of the
Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.
This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.
The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.
No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.
Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.
If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack.
A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.
I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer
Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.
JOHN C. EVANS, Stockton, Mo., writes: "I stand up and claim that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get up any instrument that will take as much labor off of mom as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it."
JOHN E. DODGE, JR., Jeweler, Normal, Ill., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. Ist. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If you run short, you can not buy ours for $100."
I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

IRRIGATION DIRECTORS MEETING.

Last Monday the Directors of Irrigation District No. 1 met to canvass the vote on the bond election. Messrs. George Gill and P. W. Forbes appeared as counsel for parties opposed to issuing the bonds. A recount of votes cast at each precinct was demanded. The Directors opened the ballots and counted. As the poll list for each precinct was read challenges were made as had been done when the votes were cast on the ground of non-residence and want of qualification on the part of the voter. The Board decided in each case that the votes were all regular, and therefore the result of the election was in favor of issuing the bonds. All of these challenges were duly recorded and will be used as part of the ground for contesting the legality of the bonds when issued. The following was presented to the Board:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF INYO,
LONE PINE, Dec. 3, 1887.

To the Board of Directors of Irrigation District No. 1, in the State and county aforesaid.

Gentlemen:—We, the undersigned, qualified electors of Inyo county, respectfully submit the following, to wit:

First. At the election held on the 29th day of November, 1887, as it was ordered by your Honorable Board, to vote for or against the issuance of the bonds in said Irrigation District No. 1, there was in the division District No. 5 [according to the returns] 18 votes cast, and out of those eighteen votes there were only seven qualified electors, who are residents of said Division No. 5, to wit, David Wells, A. C. Harvey, T. Richards, W. K. Miller, John Anton, John R. Turner and R. C. Spear.

Second. Each member of the Board of Election in said Division District No. 5, knowing positively that there were in the aforesaid election eleven votes cast of persons residing outside of the boundary line of said Irrigation District, we, the undersigned protest against the action of said Board, as conflicting with section 2 of an Act of the Legislature to provide for the organization and government of Irrigation Districts, approved March 7, 1887.

Third. The following named persons were challenged by W. K. Miller on the ground that they were residents of said Division District No. 5, or precinct, to wit: M. Montana, M. C. Lasky, R. Carrasco, John H. Dodge, George H. Palmer, R. Van Dyke, James Moffet and J. C. Dodge, and the Board of Election rejected the challenge and accepted all the above stated votes, which we consider as illegal.

Fourth. The vote of C. Meysan was challenged and rejected by the Board of Flection on the ground that he was not owner of land in the Irrigation District; and for the above stated reasons we pray your Honorable Board of Canvassers to reject the returns of said Division District No. 5, as illegal.

J. H. DODGE,
JOHN LUCAS,
MANUEL SILVA,
G. H. PALMER,
CHARLES MEYSAN,
W. K. MILLER.

On Tuesday, the appointed day, the regular meeting of the Board was held. Nothing was done beyond reading and approving minutes of previous meetings and the Board adjourned till Saturday of next week.

School Entertainment,

Last Friday evening Miss Barnes and her pupils gave an entertainment in the new school house. Many recitations, readings and songs were given by the pupils and all did most creditably. A noticeable and most gratifying feature of the occasion was the complete control Miss Barnes has acquired over her pupils; and yet her methods are so gentle that the young people are evidently unconscious of being controlled. At a wave of the hand, or even the motion of a finger, all the pupils moved or acted together with nice precision, and appeared to take delight in the exercise. Miss Maggie Conklin and Mrs. Eibeshutz gave valuable help to the entertainment by playing on the organ. George Wood, one of the pupils, played a good selection on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Eibeshutz on the organ. The entertainment was creditable to teacher and pupils and gratifying to the parents of the children.

Delinquent Taxes.

Tax-payers will do well to note Section 3756 of the Political Code. The section reads as follows: On the last Monday of December of each year, at 6 o'clock p. m., all unpaid taxes are delinquent and thereafter the Tax-Collector must collect thereon for the use of the county an addition of 5 per cent.

Mr. William Charles has bonded for an English company the Dark Horse and another mine in Cold Water Canyon. At the beginning of the week eleven men were put to work in the two mines and prospecting will be pushed with vigor. The bond is for three months.

Mr. P. J. Fields has again been appointed agent at Independence Station. For some months past he had been acting as general agent at the Stations on the line of the C & C road and traveled with the trains. Now there is an agent at each station, parties who were already employed at the various stations being appointed agents

Senator Stanford is heartily in favor of a tarrif for the protection of American labor. He gives millions for the education of American youth, and wants to protect American workmen from competition with men in other lands whose compensation hardly allows them the bare necessaries of life. Evidently Mr. Standford wants to have all his fellow countrymen well educated and able to live in comfort.

Mrs. Clara Belle McDonald has sued her father-in-law, R. H. McDonald, for half a million dollars for maliciously enticing her husband, his son, to desert her and live apart from her. The Court has decided that the complaint is a good ground for action. Now if on trial the allegation shall be proved the profit on many a case of vinegar bitters is likely to go to young Mrs. McDonald.

Last Monday morning Henry Morrison foreman of the Sierra Nevada mine, Virginia City, was found in a dying condition in one of the levels of the mine. The Enterpsise says he was taken to his home as quickly as possible, but he never recovered consciousness and died at 11 o'clock the same day. A congestive chill was the cause of death. Morrison was a man of great personal strength and the day before his death he appeared to be in sound health.

There are signs of reviving interest in mines north of Bishop Station. Mr. J. J. La Grange, former Superintendent of the Casey mines, and three friends in Illinois, have bought the Husband mine. Seven men were put to work last week running a tunnel and sinking a shaft. The mine is near the Casey mines and Mr. La Grange is thoroughly familiar with the ground. The prospect in the Husband mine is reported to be very good.

PANAMINT.

Its Present Condition and Prospects.

At the beginning of the week John T. Erwin returned to town from a trip to Panamint. This was the first time he had ever been there and he reports the prospect as being much better than he expected to find. Contrary to what he had looked for Panamint, he says, has a pleasant climate and plenty of good water; winter and summer he is confident the climate would be very agreeable in the neighborhood of the mines though down in the valley it is very hot in summer. He visited some of the mines belonging to the Surprise Mining and Milling Company and brought samples of ore from several of them. In the Stewart's Wonder he saw a great deal of ore already uncovered. The mine is opened by two tunnels, each already well into the ore body. The vein is from two to six feet wide. A good deal of ore was formerly shipped from this mine to San Francisco; it was all selected and was worth $200 per ton. About sixty-five tons now lie on the dump; this is second class, worth sixty to seventy dollars per ton. The mine is in good condition for putting men to work as soon as ore shall be wanted for the mill.

The Wyoming mine is better opened up than the Stewart's Wonder. A great deal of tunneling and other work has been done. Mr. Erwin says there are several fine ore bodies in sight in the mine. Much of the ore is high grade and will go from $200 to $500 per ton. A tramway is built from the mine to the mill and with slight repair to the track the ore cars can be run right to the mill and dumped over the battery.

At present the only miners employed by the company are at work in the Ida mine; here six men are taking out ore. Mr. Erwin says there is ore enough in the Ida alone to supply the mill for an indefinite time. The vein is large, and though the quartz is hard and all has to be blasted, yet it is not very expensive to mine.

All of these mines are distant from the mill about one and a half miles. The company owns a dozen or more mines, all in the same locality and all held under patent from the United States. The new mill built by the company is completed and is well equipped and furnished with the latest improvements. Charley Mates has contracted to pack three hundred cords of wood to the mill and two hundred tons of ore.

There are many mines in the locality belonging to other parties. The Jacobs Wonder is a fine mine and will produce plenty of good ore. A good deal of development has already been done on this mine and much ore taken out. The Hemlock is another good mine and sure to be a big producer. H. G. Chickering owns a fine mine from which, working alone, he has taken fifty tons of good ore. All the mines in the district will be sources of ore supply to the new mill should the company want more beyond what their oww mines supply, of which there is very little probability. Supplies of all kinds are at present costly at Panamint. The distance from the station at Keeler is seventy-four miles, and freight costs forty dollars per ton for hauling. Hay now costs when delivered fifty-eight dollars per ton, and grain eighty dollars per ton. Wood is found on the mountains and costs at the mill six dollars a cord.

Mr. Erwin is confident that Panamint will be a busy camp within a few months. The projected Salt Lake and Los Angeles railroad would afford much easier access to Panamint and would very greatly increase mining operations there.

The Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury met last Tuesday, the following members being present: T. J. Goodale, Foreman; Thomas W. Carrll, T. E. Jones, William H. Powers, J. S. Brown, William McLaren, James B. Chamberlain, J. N. Newlon, J. W. Clark, P. P. Keough, George M. Clark, Barna Peeler, Robert Love, John Dugan, Thomas Ferguson, C. B. Rawson, Henry Fehrman, A. C. Harvey, I. P. Rittgers. The jury was in session only two days and would have adjourned at the end of the first day had not a committee been sent to Lone Pine to examine the hospital. Following is the report made by the jury:

To the Honorable Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California.

We, the Grand Jury impaneled by your Honor, for the November term, 1887, of said Court, respectfully submit the following report.

In compliance with the law we have examined and inquired into the public affairs of the county. We find the county buildings in good order and well kept. The books of the Treasurer, Auditor, Sheriff and Assessor we find neatly and correctly kept so far as our limited time would permit of examination.

Having visited the County Hospital we find the same commodious, clean, well furnished and in good order. At present there are six patients under medical treatment, who express themselves as being well satisfied with their treatment and accommodations.

We respectfully make the following recommendations to the Honorable Board of Supervisors: 1st. That they cause to be erected a suitable fireproof Hall of Records outside of the Court House, which will effectually preserve the county records. 2d. That the Court House hall be properly lighted 3d. That the barbed wire fence which at present encloses the Court House yard be removed and a substantial picket fence be erected in its stead. 4th. That the various offices of the Court House be designated by lettering of the same.

We have diligently inquired into all public offenses triable in this county which have been brought to our notice and upon investigation we have found no true bills, and after due deliberation on a certain charge the same is ignored.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS J. GOODALE,

Stealing Water.

Last week an important suit about water was tried at Dayton, Nevada. The case was that of E. W. Bennet, J. M. Houston, et. als., to recover $2,000 for maliciously blowing out a dam filling a ditch in Mason Valley and ruining crops of plaintiffs. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant on the ground that he had a right to abate a nuisance, the evidence showing that while Bennett owned one-eight of the water he had practically turned most of it and divided it with other parties. The law will no more support a water thief in what he has stolen than it will a horse thief.

Paul Shirley has resigned as Warden of the State Prison at San Quentin and John McComb has been appointed to succeed him.

TRICKS ON THE STAGE.

A Thrilling Life and Death Struggle.

Some time ago there was on exhibition, in New York, what was called the "wonderful electrical man!"

That "wonder" now says that he was always secretly connected with a battery so arranged as to defeat discovery!

Many "freaks of nature" are only freaks of clever deceptive skill.

Bishop, the mind-reader, so-called, was shown to be only a shrewd student of human nature, whose reading of thought was not phenomenal.

Even so intelligent a man as Robert Dale Owen was for many years fully persuaded that certain alleged spiritual manifestations were genuine, but, in the Katie King case, he eventually found that he had been remorselessly deceived.

When to natural credulity is added a somewhat easily-fired imagination, spectres become facts, and clever tricks realities.

"That man," remarked a prominent physician the other day to our reporter, "thinks he is sick. He is a 'hypo.' He comes here regularly three times a week for treatment. There is absolutely nothing the matter with him, but of course every time he comes I fix him up something."

"And he pays for it?"

"Yes, $3.00 a visit. But what I give him has no remedial power whatever. I have to cater to his imaginary ills. He is one of my best friends, and I dare not disappoint his fears."

An even more striking case of professional delusion is related by W. H. Winton, business manager of the Kingston (N. Y.) Freeman:

"In 1883, Mr. R. R. of New York, (a relative of a late vice-president of the United States) was seriously ill of a very fatal disorder. The best physicians attended him, but until the last one was tried, he constantly grew worse. This doctor gave him some medicine in a two-ounce bottle. Improving, he got another bottle, paying $2 for each. He was getting relief after having used several of these mysterious small bottles.

One day he laid one on his desk in his New York office. In the same office a friend was using a remedy put up in a large bottle. By pure accident it was found out that these two bottles contained exactly the same medicine, the two ounce vial costing the doctor's patient $2, while his friend paid but $1.25 for a bottle holding over sixteen ounces of Warner's safe cure. The doctor's services were stopped at once, the man continued treating himself with what his doctor had secretly prescribed—Warner's safe cure, which finally restored him to health from an attack of what his doctors called bright's disease."

If the leading physicians in the land, through fear of the code, will secretly prescribe Warner's safe cure in all cases of kidney, liver and general disorder, do they not thereby confess their own inability to cure it, and, by the strongest sort of endorsement, commend that preparation to the public?

We hear it warmly spoken of in every direction, and we have no doubt whatever that it is, all things considered, the very best article of the kind ever known.

VALUABLE LANDS.

Where Cockle-Burrs, Sand-Burrs and Tumble-Weeds Grow in Profusion.

He was sitting in front of a sod house in Nebraska, near the Niobrara river, smoking a cob pipe and occasionally pausing to whistle a few bars of "Dixie" as he gazed lazily but admiringly at a semi-circle of dogs stretched on the ground around him. We drove up and inquired how far it was to Valentine.

"Dunno, stranger," he replied.

"Haven't you ever been there?"

"Yes, I 'low I've been there."

"How far do you think it is, then?"

"It might be 'bout seven mile, then she might be nearder ten—makes a heap o' dif'rence what you do down where the road forks. Say, don' want 'o buy a good farm, I reckon?"

"Don't believe we do."

"No, I 'lowed not. Seems's if I can't never sell out."

"Where you going when you sell out here?"

"Gen'l'men, I shal pull back to Missoory!"

"Can't you raise good crops here?"

"Can't raise nothin' on this farm 'cept cuckleburrs. That's what I call it, gen'l'men, Chuckle-Burr Home! I got 'nother farm out on the flat furder."

"That must be poorer soil than this."

"Doggoned sight wus. Can't raise nothin' but sand-burrs there. I call it Sand-Burrs Place. I got one other farm down nearder the river."

"That seems like a better location."

"O, yes, some—you can raise red tumble-weeds on that land—it's Tumble-Weed Retreat; that's the name of it."

"All for sale, are they?"

"Every one of 'em. Buyers can take their choice between Tumble-Weed Retreat, Sand-Burr Place or Cuckle-Burr Home—they all got their good p'ints. Tumble-Weed Retreat commands a good view of the river an' more muskeeters; Sand-burr Place is level and nice, but is exposed to the wind; Cuckle-Burr Home is sheltered from the wind, an' there's fourteen badger holes on the back forty, an' a feller can take a dog an' have piles o' sport with 'em. I'll take the Home for nine every time—I'm powerful on sport. Goin' to shack along, air you? Well, if you see any body that wants to buy some land of 'bout this d'scription jes' send 'em out. I'm gettin' mighty anxious to be moseyin' down round old Pike ag'n."—F. " Carruth, in Chicago Tribune.

Proud Philadelphian—It was a glorious celebration, wasn't it?

Wife—Indeed it was. And how thankful we should be that our ancestors were members of the first constitutional convention.

"More than that! More than that, my dear. They fought for liberty on the field of battle. They laid all they had on the altar of freedom—yea, life itself—that we might enjoy the blessings of human liberty; but I must hurry down town."

"Why, what's going on to-night?"

"I want to find out what candidates Boss McManes has set up for me to vote for."—Omaha World.

How Music Boxes Are Made.

The principle of manufacture is simple. The different parts comprise a brass roller studded with fine points of the hardest steel, a steel comb, the teeth of which give the sounds, a spring to give the revolving motion to the cyclinder and a fly wheel or fan to regulate the revolving motion. The music has first to be arranged by a thorough artist. The cylinder which comes from the machine shop is then placed in the hands of a woman, who, with the aid of the music and a very ingenious machine, marks the places on the cylinder where the points are to be inserted. Another person drills all the little holes, and another inserts the points. The cylinder is then filled with molten cement and then placed on a lathe and revolved quickly. The cement adheres to the inside surface and thus holds the points. A hole is left in the center of the cylinder for the axis. The points are then filed down so as to be of equal length. The comb is tuned by a tuner, who first files the teeth, without excessive care, to give them the proper flexibility, and then files them near the base to lower the tones and near the point to sharpen the tones. The operation of fastening the cylinder and comb to the bed plate requires much accuracy, so that the points of the cylinder and the comb will exactly meet. A woman following the music then bends the points on the cylinder slightly forward in order to secure more strength, but more especially to make the cords drop simultaneously and cause the runs or roulades to play evenly.

Size in music boxes increases both their volumes and their richness in tone. A cylinder ten inches long can be made to play six, eight, ten or twelve airs well, but it will play six or eight airs better and with more sweetness and harmony of sound than it can be made to play a greater number. The reason of this is that more points on the cylinder and more teeth in the comb can be used for each air if there are fewer airs. The space between the teeth decreases with the number of airs. If the cylinder is increased in diameter the airs may be prolonged. A music box is like a watch. It will last a lifetime if it is good to begin with, and is treated well and with care. Most owners of music boxes object to using them except for company. The fact is, a music box should be used every day, just as a watch should be wound up every day.—Jewelry News.

Zachary Taylor's Simplicity.

President Taylor was probably the only president to whom the presidency was an uncoveted and unsought for boon. Mrs. Taylor was so averse to public life that it was said she prayed every night during his candidacy for his defeat, and when told of his election said: "Why could they not let us alone? we are so happy here. Why do they want to drag us to Washington?" Who that ever saw Gen. Taylor at a levee could forget him? He grasped every new comer cordially by the hand and saluted all, high and low, old maids, brides, young girls, all with the words: "Glad to see you! Glad to see you! How's your family? Hope the children are all well." His greeting was almost equal to Rip's toast: "Here's to you and your family. May you live long and prosper!" He hardly ever opened his mouth without making a mistake, and people laughed heartily. Still they loved him, trusted his judgment, and knew his heart and hand were true as steel; and when he died the whole nation was a mourner at his grave.—Ben: Perley Poore.

The Baby Beaver's Dam.

"I know of a naturalist down in eastern Maine," said a well known Maine college professor, "who wouldn't be convinced that beavers could build dams till he saw it done with his own eyes. He is an awful incredulous fellow, any way. I bought a baby beaver of a hunter who traps them, one day, and sent him to my skeptical friend. He grew greatly attached to the little fellow and kept him in the house, but he often wrote me that his beaver didn't show any propensity at all for dam building. One Monday, washing day, his wife sat a leaky pail full of water on the kitchen floor. The beaver was in the kitchen, he was only a baby then, too, and he saw the water oozing out of a crack in the pail. He scampered out into the yard, brought in a chip, and began building his dam. The naturalist was summoned. He watched the little fellow, thunderstruck. Said he, 'Leave that pail there, wife, till doomsday, if need be, and let's see what the little fellow will do.' The beaver kept at it four weeks, until he had built a solid dam clean around the pail. My naturalist friend is quite a beaver man today. They say, you know, that way down east there is a beaver dam that $200,000 couldn't build the like of. Oh! men don't know everything. The wasp knew how to make paper before we did."—Lewiston Journal.

Bogus Epileptic Fits.

Epileptic fits are often stimulated by beggars to excite sympathy, and by prisoners to avoid work. A few years ago a combination of a peculiar kind was discovered. This consisted of one man who imitated an epileptic attack while his confederates picked the pockets of the spectators, whose attention was directed toward the man in apparent convulsions. Some of these imitations are artistically done; the cry at the outset of the fit, the fall and violent convulsions, together with frothing at the mouth and the unconsciousness which should follow a real attack are well simulated. The absolute insensibility to pain can hardly be imitated. The French police generally detect the simulators by forcing the point of the thumb nail under that of the suspected dissimulator. This is actually painful to one who has his senses, while it can do no harm if the case is one of genuine epilepsy. In the real disease, the pupils of the eyes become widely dilated when the attack begins; the upper half of the face is very pale; and there is a short period (a few seconds) when all the muscles of the body are rigid before they are alternately contracted and relaxed in the fully developed fit. These symptoms cannot be feigned, no matter how well the simulator has studied the disease.—Globe-Democrat.

MUSICAL CULTURE.

One Art in Which America Has Made Most Wonderful Progress.

In respect to one art at least—the art of music—America has certainly made great progress. The war song of the savage has been very quietly succeeded here in this Western continent by the songs of the masters. There was first the church music in the earlier days, then the singing-schools, and after that a gradual growth following the first introduction of the simplest forms of melody. Too much can not be said of the influence of the church in this musical progress. The solemn chant and the inspiring hymn have from the first had their influence. The simple hymns are still loved, though as a result of the upward tendency they are superseded to a great degree by classical music. But "classical" is a term that may be applied to song-wrought prayers which Father Junipero and his followers voiced in the California missions, so that we have had it with us for a longer time than we give ourselves credit for. "Blessed be the old singers forever!" The old songs are loved best now and always will be. The term inspiration must have been coined for application to music. There is an indescribable something in it which inspires and uplifts. When Moody and Sankey first traveled together over the country conducting revival meetings, it was said that the singer did as much as the preacher to stir the great congregations. It is noted that when a band begins playing on the street, all within hearing immediately step in time. And, as to war songs and martial strains, what would patriotic peoples and warriors have done without them "when armies charged and battle flags unrolled?"

Keeps battle glorious still and soldiers brave,

while John Brown's body is sent marching on from the throats of soldiers at every reminiscent camp-fire. Whether breathed over a cradle, voiced in a cathedral, or sung in grander forms on the operatic stage, songs need little interpretation. And, accepting this, may not the Indians, who heard the blue birds in the New England forest before the white man's advent, have felt something stirring within them which they did not exactly comprehend? The force and effect of harmony has never been better expressed than in these words of Sidney Lanier: "Late explorers say they have found nations that had no God, but I have not heard of any that had no music. Music means harmony; harmony means love; love means God." It is apparent that America is wide awake in the matter of musical education of all kinds. An impetus is given vocal culture in the public schools, and rare indeed is the home that does not contain an instrument of some kind. The late convention of teachers of music showed that the instructors form a small army. And we have our composers, too. The musical success and financial failure of the National Opera Company shows clearly enough what can be done, and give no cause for discouragement. We have the singers, the song-writers and the musicians, and American opera will yet become something of which Americans may be proud. With the general awakening now evident, societies, conservatories and promising compositions, the musical progress of the new continent is to be watched with a great deal of interest. The music is everywhere around us, and over the broad plains and high peaks hang great symphonies.—Indianapolis News.

A Drink from Father's Well.

The dying man, who was so poor at this moment that he could not purchase one hour of time, was rich in the worldly possessions he was about to leave forever.

He had houses and lands and bank stock. He had rich viands to tempt his failing appetite. It was his pleasure to drink of many different wines at his grand dinners. Yet his restless spirit craved one luxury—a simple, homely thing—that all his wealth could not buy.

Listen!

He is speaking and they bend eagerly to hear. He is asking for a drink.

He refuses it.

Then his loving child pours out a glass of his favorite wine and tenderly begs him to take it.

"No! no! not that!"

He speaks wildly, and they bend low and try to distinguish his broken and faltering words.

"Bring—me—the—gourd!"

"What does he mean?" asks his wife in despair.

"It—is—hanging—just—inside—the—curb!"

"Papa, dear, what is it?" asks his sweet faced child.

That was all. He closed his weary eyes to open them in his heavenly home, where, when life's little dream is over, we shall all one day slake our thirst from our Father's well.—Mrs. M. L. Rayne in Detroit Free Press.

How Savages Fight Sharks.

The greatest danger to be feared in the presence of a shark is the paralysis of fear. Sharks unless very hungry will not attack a man while in motion. They swim around with longing eyes waiting for one moment when their victims shall remain quiet, and then make their onslaught. On the coast of Africa the natives fight sharks fearlessly. They enter the ocean naked, having first oiled their bodies in order that they may slide through the water easily. Their only weapon is a stout stick about two feet in length sharpened at both ends. The water is so clear that they can see for hundreds of feet around them. When a shark swims toward them they wait until the moment he turns on his back, and as he opens his jaws to seize them they thrust the stick crosswise into his mouth and swim off. The shark's mouth being held open by the stick, he is soon drowned, when the natives tow him ashore and feast upon his flesh.—New York Mail and Express.

A Coquette in the Bud.

Flossie is a dear, little golden haired creature, with large blue eyes, dainty red lips and the roundest, pinkest cheeks in the world. She loves her papa and mamma dearly. Her pretty ways and sunny smiles endear her to a host of playmates, and her gentle thoughtfulness of others makes her the pet of an indulgent, doting household.

"Mamma," said the little one softly one day as she nestled lovingly in her mother's arms, "I love to walk with Mamie Brown."

Tears sprang to the mother's eyes at this proof of her darling's unselfish nature. Mamie was a poor little crippled girl, whose plain, pinched features were in pitiful contrast to Flossie's bright beauty, and her attire, though always neat, was very plain and inexpensive.

"And why does my little Flossie love to walk with Mamie?" asked the mother.

"Because she is so plain and her dresses are so shabby," artlessly lisped the little one, "that when we are together everybody notices only just me."—Binghamton Republican.

The Luck of Some Men and How They Accepted It.

In the Grand monthly drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery October 11th, two-tenths of the capital prize of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars were sold in this city, the remaining fractions in New York and Chicago.

Mr. Laurent Faget, a well-known broker doing business at 181 Common street, was the first comer at the lottery office Wednesday morning, and, on behalf of a friend, presented for redemption one-tenth of ticket 13,646, entitled to fifteen thousand dollars.

Having received a bank check for that amount, Mr. Faget bowed his acknowledgment, signed a certificate and departed.

Scarcely had he withdrawn when in stepped two gentlemen, Mr. Victor Tujague and friend. Tujague had drawn a prize and he desired to claim it in person. His ticket, 58,480, represented two-tenths of the third capital prize of twenty thousand dollars, and was entitled to four thousand dollars.

Mr. Tujague is a handsome young fellow, native of New Orleans, apparently 21 years of age, and with his father keeps a saloon at 213 Decatur street. He bought his ticket from a peddler in his neighborhood, and is thoroughly convinced that fortune is kind in the distribution of favors.

He received a check for four thousand dollars on the New Orleans National Bank like a little man, smiled and wanted everybody to smile with him, and signed for the biggest sum of money he ever received for his individual account, for although his father has usually joined in his lottery ventures, on this particular occasion the old gentleman "guessed he wouldn't go in," for which unrighteous guess the o. g. is doubtless investigating his horoscope with a view of obliterating from the firmament his zodical sign.

Victor expects to add "& Son" to the sign which swings over the door of the house of spiritual refreshments, 213 Decatur street, and to invest in such choice properties as he may consider bargains. He will not loan money at usurious or even doubtful interest.

The other one-tenth of the one hundred and fifty thousand dollar prize was drawn yesterday by the Union National Bank for account of a depositor.—New Orleans Picayune, Oct. 15th.

At the convict inquiry in Georgia, one witness said that it would be impossible to have discipline in camps or get work from convicts without whipping them. "If you whip in time it is not necessary to whip them much."

THE WESTERN SETTLER'S CHOSEN SPECIFIC.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly-peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently-cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

President Laws of the Missouri State University has been expelled from the Prohibition party, in which he was an active worker, because he allowed a bar in a hotel owned by him.

A LIBERAL GIFT.

In our advertising columns will be found the most liberal offer in real estate ever yet submitted. Messrs. H. Newman & Co., the Real Estate Agents of 411 Kearny street, San Francisco, offer to deed, free and unconditionally, to every one applying, personally or by letter, one lot, 25x100, in the tow of Border City, in the famous County of Los Angeles. As they send, along with the deed to the lot maps of the State and town, they no doubt expect that the grantees will return to buy more lots, but there is nothing obligatory in this respect. Of course the purchaser pays for the deed, but the land is an absolutely free and unencumbered gift, and the offer will doubtless be largely taken advantage of. Border City is well located, on the proposed line of the A. and P. R. R., and is about forty miles northeast from the city of Los Angeles, and those who believe in the great future of this State, when town lots will be worth hundreds of dollars per front foot, should at once avail themselves of this chance, by accepting the lot presented, and then, having ascertained all particulars from the information afforded, wade right in, and buy, at the very liberal prices at which the lots are offered, as many more as their means will permit.

OUR LITTLE WORRIES AND ILLS.

It is the little things of life, the worries of to-day and to-morrow, that make the crow's-feet around our eyes. So the little pains of an hour or a minute break down the constitution. Look after the little ills. BRANDRETH'S PILLS cure dyspepsia, or indigestion, headache, pain in the shoulders, coughs, tightness of the chest, dizziness, sour stomach, bad taste in the mouth, bilious attacks, palpitation of the heart, inflammation of the lungs. Pain in the region of the kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offspring of dyspepsia. One or two Pills every night is sufficient.

All advice about how to spend money and how to keep it is thrown away on the person who does not know how to get it.

OVER-WORKED WOMEN.

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price, $1.00 a bottle, or six bottles for $5.00.

DAYLIGHT.

If a gentleman by the name of Day volunteers to throw the light of his experience into the darkened places of misery, so that others may go and do as he has done and enjoy life, may it not be reasonably called daylight? As for instance, take the case of Captain Sargent S. Day, Gloucester, Mass., who writes April 16, 1881: "Some time ago I was suffering with rheumatism. I used a small portion of St. Jacobs Oil and was cured at once. I have used it for sprains and never once have known it to fail. I will never be without a bottle." Captain Day also received a circular letter, and in reply under date of July 1, 1887, he says: "I used the Oil as stated and was permanently cured of rheumatism by its use." During the intervening six years there had been no recurrence of the pain. Also a letter from Mr. H. M. Converse, of the Warren (Mass.) Herald, dated July 9, 1887, as follows: "In response to yours of June 22, would say that in 1880 my wife had a severe attack of rheumatism in shoulder and arm, so that she could not raise her hand to her head. A few applications of St. Jacobs Oil cured her permanently, and she has had no return of it." Another case is that of Mr. R. B. Kyle, Tower Hill, Appomattox county, Va., who writes, November, 1886: "Was afflicted for several years with rheumatism and grew worse all the time. Eminent physicians gave no relief; had spasms, and was not expected to live; was rubbed all over with St. Jacobs Oil. The first application relieved, the second removed the pain, continued use cured me; no relapse in five years, and do as much work as ever." These are proofs of the perfection of the remedy, and, taken in connection with the miracles performed in other cases, it has no equal.

THE DYING JUGGERNAUT.

Coolies Hired to Draw the Car Once Drawn by Fanatic Devotees.

The announcement that the once-famous festival of Juggernaut has so declined in popularity as to render it necessary for the priests to hire coolies to drag the car is a measure of the extent to which the destructive solvent of Western thought is being applied to Western creeds. The car of the great god of Pooree was one of the most sacred of Brahmanic "properties" and the rath jattra, a festival which, in importance, yielded to that of no other duty in the Hindoo Pan hoen. From every part of the vast empire of Hindostan pilgrims flocked to share in it, and when the car of Juggernaut was dragged once a year from the temple in order to bathe the gods in the cool water of the tank a mile and a half distant the wildest enthusiasm seized the vast multitude of devotees. Thousands rushed to seize the cables, and so eager were the volunteers for this holy service that the best and greatest men of Orissa struggled with each other to obtain a hold upon the ropes. To use the language of an old writer who witnessed the rath jattra in its palmy days, "they are so greedy and eager to draw it that whosoever, by shouldering, crowding, shoving, heaving, thrusting, or in any insolent way, can but lay a hand upon the rope, they think themselves blessed and happy. And when it is going along the city there are many that will offer themselves as a sacrifice to the idol, and desperately lie down on the ground that the chariot wheels may run over them, whereby they are killed outright. Some get broken arms, some broken legs, so that many are destroyed, and think to merit Heaven."

At even a later date martyrs to Juggernaut, or Jagganna'th, as he is more correctly termed, were not infrequent. When Francis Buchanan was in Pooree early in this century, he describes the harsh grating of the gigantic car as it moved along, the obscene songs of the priests in honor of the god, and the fierce glances which the fanatics bestowed on the beef-eating Englishmen, as a pilgrim announced himself ready to become a sacrifice to the idol. No one daring or caring to prevent the self-immolation, the man prostrated himself in the road before the tower as it moved along, lying on his face with his arms stretched forward. The multitude passed around him, leaving the space clear, until he was crushed to death by the wheels of the ponderous structure. Then a wild cry of praise was raised, and as the god was seen to "smile" at the libation of spouting blood, the devotees threw cowries and pieces of money on the body of the victim in approbation of the holy deed.

It is, therefore, suggestive of a strange revolution in Hindoo opinion to hear that not only are victims lacking, but that instead of thousands struggling for the honor of a place at the dragropes, laboring men, at so many annas per diem, have to be hired to perform the sacred function. The awe of the Indian people for "the Lord of the world" has been declining. For many years past the fame of the great god of Orissa has been on the wane, and the time when a human sacrifice was deliberately offered up to the hideous idol is fast getting beyond the power of the very oldest of old Indians to recall. Admitting that the number of devotees this year is smaller, owning to the loss of two pilgrim ships—and the prophecy that a third will be wrecked before the year is out—it is undeniable that Jagganna'th is doomed, and the wealth which it brought to the priests and the townspeople of Pooree is likely to vanish before many years elapse. Sometimes a poor decrepit wretch, weary of life, or drugged by the priests with Indian hemp or opium, will wildly throw himself in front of the wheels, though he is usually dragged out by the police, who have orders to prevent any attempts at suicide. Saddest abasement of all, from the standpoint of Brahmanism, it happened a few years ago, for the first time in history, that to the horror and chargin of the priests, the car of Jagganna'th stood still in the streets of Pooree, while the pilgrims looked on in impious apathy. Yet no harm befell them, although a subsequent famine has been attributed to their sacrilegious carelessness. However, the result has been, that though worshipers still come to Pooree, they just as frequently prefer to save themselves the trouble of hauling the gods, and, as happened on the present occasion, the priests afraid of the idols never reaching the tank, have contracts with irreverential coolies to perform the job for a stipulated number of rupees. Mortality there is, of course, still. The poor die for want of food, of disease, and of lack of proper accommodations. But there is no longer any need for interfering, for the wrong will soon right itself by Jagganna'th ceasing to "draw." The East, we fear, is already grown lax in its religious observances. The pilgrim takes a third-class circular ticket to the holy places. Infidel ship-owners issue passages to Djeddah, and a tourist contractor escorts the faithful over the forty miles between Mecca and the sea. The Egyptain dervishes are becoming extremely chary about making a payment of their persons for the Saadeeyeh Sheik to ride over, and now that the Indian exchequer is bemoaning the reduced returns from the "Jagganna'th trade," and coolies have to be hired to drag the car, we seem a long way from the time when Job Charnock, factor at Fort William, was converted to Hindooism, or when General Stewart engaged a Brahman to perform daily worship among the idols in his bungalow.—London Standard.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

The House in Which the First American Ensign Was Made.

On Arch street, below Third, stands a little old building, two stories and a half high, bearing a sign which informs the passer-by that within the house was made the first American flag and that in these days he can buy beer or liquor there.

Early in 1777 a committee appointed by the Continental Congress to select a design for a National flag went with General Washington to the little shop of Mrs. Elizabeth Ross, at 239 Arch street, to have their ideas embodied in bunting. Mrs. Ross was a milliner whose principal business was among the Quaker ladies, and in the projecting window were hung the correct forms of the brown and drab bonnets about whose make up the women of the Friends' society were and are as particular as the lady who now stops one's view at the theater. General Washington sketched on a scrap of paper the design agreed upon. There were thirteen stripes of alternate white and red, and in the blue union were to be thirteen white stars ranged in a circle. There is a tradition that General Washington ordered that the stars have six points. She won the day by showing her visitors how a star with five points could be made with one clip of her scissors. The flag was made in her little back room, and on July 14 of the same year Congress adopted the design as the national banner.

The building has changed but little since then. A large tree which stood in front of it during the revolution survived until 1876, when it became dangerous and was cut down. But the house stands as it did then. Even Mrs. Ross' show-window is preserved and the wooden shutters on the second-story windows and the dormer-window in the sharply sloping roof are the same that looked down on Arch street a hundred years ago.

The bar-room would even now be recognized as Mr. Ross' shop if one of that committee could now revisit it. Passing from this room through a narrow entry and up two steps, one enters Mrs. Ross' work-room, where, without doubt, the flag was cut out and sewed together. It is even now a queer old room. On its furthest end is the old fireplace now covered with wall-paper, but showing at the top a row of the blue and white tiles which once surrounded it. Built into one corner is a three-cornered wooden cupboard. The very locks and knobs on the doors are of the pattern of the last century. The stairways of this house are all winding and very narrow. That leading to the cellar is very steep. The attic is still floored with the puncheon boards which once were the only flooring in the house—an inch thick and eighteen inches wide. The only new thing about the whole structure is a back kitchen, built within the last few years.

Mrs. Amelia Mund, a comely German widow, who keeps the tavern and owns the property, told what she knew of the history of the building since the time of Mrs. Ross. "It was occupied as a tailor's shop for many years, and my husband bought it over forty-five years ago. Neither he nor I would allow any thing to be changed unless an absolute necessity to keep the building from going to pieces. It is strong and well built, and has needed very little repairing. When the floor of what was the shop was taken up some years ago the original floor was taken away, as it could not be kept from falling into the cellar. People came from long distances to get pieces of it as relics, and one gentleman had a board made into a table and draped it with the American flag. The house until two or three weeks ago never had a sign to tell people that the first American flag was made here, but I thought people ought to know. Any way, I've had no end of visitors to inquire about the old house. Not many of them were Philadelphians, for they don't seem to care much about the relics of the Revolution nowadays, but a great many Western people and visitors to the city have come to this house and taken as much interest in it as they did in Independence Hall."

On either side of No. 239 are tall buildings used for manufacturing purposes, and the space this relic of history occupies is becoming too valuable for it to stay there much longer. Mrs. Mund says she wishes the Historical Society would buy the building and move it out to the park beside William Penn's Letitia street house. Several ladies have already become interested in this project, and the Historical society is said to have it under consideration.—Philadelphia Press.

The Clown's Day is Over.

Colonel W. C. Crum, advance agent, says: "The day of the clowns is nearly over. Formerly they were half the show, but now they attract little attention. The enlargement of the shows is the chief cause. The big shows now have two or three rings, and the circle of seats is so far off that the people can not hear the jokes of the clowns. In the old days an average clown received from $100 to $200 a week. Dan Rice, who was considered the greatest of them all, was paid $1,000 a week, which was the highest salary a clown ever received. He was a bright, ambitious young fellow, possessed of much originality, and he reached the top notch of his profession. Once an educated young Englishman, a graduate of Oxford University, who possessed excellent comic talents, was brought over to this country and he was paid $500 a week. At the present day the pay of the clowns ranges from $20 to $50 a week.—Louisville Courter-Journal.

MOTHER'S PICTURE.

I was waiting, not a great while ago, in a picture gallery, and after amusing myself with looking 'round on the many faces, old and young, handsome and ugly, that decorated the walls, and resting in my quiet corner, I was aroused by a heavy footfall on the stair. The door opened and a young man entered. He had an honest, sunburnt face, on which a smile of quiet satisfaction beamed, and he was leading by the hand a small, quaint looking old lady, neatly but plainly dressed. He led her tenderly, almost reverently, to a chair and seated her. She seemed quite fatigued and trembled from weakness. The son looked upon her with such genuine affection and honest delight that it brought the tears to my eyes. Nothing could be more touching or striking than the contrast. He, just on the threshold of life, full of hope and freshness, every thing wearing the rose-colored tint of early morning, fearing nothing, hoping all things; she, with her snow-white locks and trembling age, leaning on his strong arm with faultless trust, the time of her departure near at hand, life's toils and labors over, its honors, its strife nothing to her.

"Can you take a picture, mister? I hope that she is not too old or that her not seeing good will make any difference. She didn't want to come for fear her being so old and blind you couldn't make a picture of her. Please try your best, sir, for you see she is my mother, and I have plenty of money to pay for a big one, and she wants you to take mine for me to leave with her—you see I have to leave her, sir; I have the living to make now. No more hard days for her old eyes. I am all that's left, sir, of seven. Though she says she may not be able to see my picture, she can hold it in her old hands and kiss it and know that it is me. Say, mister, if you have to stint either of us, don't stint mother. I feel like I don't want to lose none of her; don't make it too little."

The son was requested to lead his mother into the ante-room. As they returned he was loud in his praises to the artist at the success, and the humble little mother, clinging to the strong manly arm of her boy as she passed out, had a calm, holy expression, as if she already discerned the golden gates of the New Jerusalem which she must shortly enter. How gayly he chatted and laughed as they descended the stairs! I listened until the last sound of that manly voice died away. I could but say: "God be with him; such a tender, loving son." Have you a feeble old mother, boys? If so, don't hide your love, but, like this bonnie boy, let it be seen in every glance of the eye; heard in every tone; felt in every action. This little scene in the picture gallery inspired pure and lovely thoughts and enriched my heart with precious memories.—Mrs. A. E. Henton, in Courier-Journal.

PERFUME MANUFACTURE.

Methods Employed to Extract the Delicate Odor of Flowers.

Pomades are the commercial vehicle for absorbing and transporting the perfumes of the jonquil, tuberose, jasmine and a few other species of flowers.

A square frame, or chassis of white wood, and about twenty by thirty inches in size, is set with a pane of strong plate glass. On each side of the glass is spread a thin, even layer of grease, which has been purified and refined. Thus prepared, the frames are piled up in ranks six or seven feet high to await the season of each special flower.

When the blossoms arrive, the petals are picked from the stem—the pistils and stamens being discarded—and laid so as to cover the grease in each frame. These being again piled so as to rest upon their wooden edges, which fit closely together, there is formed a series of tight chambers, the floors and ceilings of which are of grease, exposed to the perfume of the flower-leaves within.

The grease absorbs the perfume, the spent flowers are removed daily and fresh ones supplied, and this process goes on from two to four or five months, according to the desired strength of the pomade, which, when sufficiently charged with perfume, is taken from the glass with a wide, thin spatula, and packed in tin cans for export.

By these methods, the delicate odors of flowers are extracted and retained for transport to distant markets, where, being treated with alcohol, they yield their perfume to that stronger vehicle, and produce the floral waters and extracts of commerce.

Coarser pomades are made by boiling the flowers in the grease, and subjecting the residue to pressure. The spent pomades are used for toilet-purposes and in the manufacture of fine soaps.

The process of preparing perfumed oils involves the same principle except that, instead of solid grease, superfine olive oil is used. With this oil, pieces of coarse cotton fabric are saturated, which are then spread upon wire netting stretched in wooden frames about three by four feet in size. The flowers are spread upon the saturated cloths, and the frames are piled one above the other, so that the perfume of the flowers is absorbed as in the previous process.

Essences and "flower waters" are produced by ordinary distillation, in which the flowers are boiled in water in large alembics. The vapor carries off the perfume, and is condensed in adjoining copper tanks, like ordinary spirits. Some of the retorts used for this purpose are of sufficient size to receive at once half a ton of fresh flowers, with the requisite water for their distillation.

When "flower waters" are to be produced, alcohol is used in the distilling tank to receive the perfumes.—Golden Days.

He lived there six months in 1885, in the disguise of a Mohammedan, and says that the surface of the city is gradually rising, in consequence of the action of the rains which wash the soil down from neighboring heights.

—A College of State Medicine has been founded in London. The council includes a number of distinguished medical men. The main purpose of the institution is the advancement of sanitary science in its public aspects. The teaching will be carried on by means of lectures and laboratory instruction, and students will be qualified to become public analists or health officers.

—It is not generally known that pearl-fishing is carried on in rivers of Saxony. A family by the name of Schmerler has for generations had the monopoly of following this pursuit for the benefit of the State. The Weiss Elster and its tributaries furnished last year one hundred pearls. Formerly the yield was much greater, and in the [illegible] century pearl-fishing was carried on in Saxony of rather more importance than the mining industries.

—Berlin has gradually become the headquarters of the carved-wood industry, supplanting Switzerland. Six hundred artists in wood-carving, the same number of turners, and 700 carpenters are engaged in manufacturing such articles as cigar-cases, newspaper and picture-frames, napkin-rings, etc. The value of the annual export of these articles is 5,000,000 marks, and this is exclusive of the costly carved wood furniture, the manufacture and export of which is likewise assuming large proportions.

—Recent explorations by Italian travelers in the region of the Lower Congo, and of the Ogowai river in Western Africa, leave no doubt that some of the native tribes, and notably the people known as the Fans, are cannibals. They not only eat men, but they manifest a decided preference for this kind of food. The Cavaliere A. Pecile, who was a member of the Brazza expedition, says that three of their boatmen, who happened to be left behind near a Fan village on the banks of the Ogowai, were killed by the inhabitants, and so completely devoured that their skeletons were subsequently found picked clean.—*N. HONOR IN INDUSTRY.

Wealth Gained by Personal Superiority and Riches Acquired by Trickery.

Undoubtedly there is much wealth which is worthy of honor, as symbolizing the energy, industry, wisdom and far-seeing judgment of its possessor. He who acquires it with honor, and employs it with wise generosity, stands worthily in the list of public benefactors, and richly deserves the respect and admiration that is accorded to him. But it is the indiscriminate adulation that exhausts itself on mere riches, no matter how they have been gained or how they are used, that is largely responsible for the dishonorable transactions which we all lament. Few, indeed, are without blame in this matter. But few give their approval so heartily to character and intelligence, when clad in homespun, as when attired in broadcloth. But few pause to discriminate between the wealth gained by personal superiority and that acquired by tricks and deception before they do it reverence. Every one, by purifying himself and showing honor only where honor is due, can do something toward purifying the morals of trade. If the expression of social respect and consideration be so strong an incentive to action as to lead men to make almost any sacrifice to obtain it, a great and solemn responsibility rests upon every individual as to his share of such expression. If he honors what is not really honorable, he contributes to commercial immorality as surely as does the manufacturer who adulterates his goods or the merchant who deceives his customers.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IMPATIENT CREDITORS.

The problem of collecting "bad debts" is one of ever-increasing perplexity; and numerous are the devices suggested and tried to that end. Associations in almost every branch of trade and business have been formed for the purpose of circumventing the "beat" who buys without intending to pay, and of reaching him when by any chance he has succeeded in his design. But the "beat" still flourishes at the cost of the butcher, the baker and candlestick-maker, to say nothing of the grocer, the tailor and the hotel-keeper. "Black list" and "confidential circular" are alike futile; and when the army of "beats" is supplemented by the army of unfortunates who would pay if they could, but can not, the array of bad debts reaches colossal proportions.

One of the newest devices of forcing collections is the attacking of the delinquent through the post-office. The patience of creditors and collector having failed, the debtor receives some morning through the mail his bill inclosed in an envelop whereon is inscribed in large letters the legend; "Bad Debts." At the same time he is apprised that unless his particular bad debt is liquidated his bill will continue to seek him out with just such an envelope until it is paid.

In certain cases, no doubt, this method is as effective as its inventors and users claim. Some bad debtors can unquestionably be shamed by such a proceeding into paying a debt which they would otherwise permit to outlaw. We doubt very much, however, if the method if efficacious enough in the long run or with the mass of bad debtors to justify the resort to it. The true "beat" can not be shamed in any such fashion. On the contrary he will regard himself upon the reception of a "Bad Debt" missive as a martyr, and hold himself justified thereafter in refusing payment if he has never before attempted justification. With the "slow" man or the unfortunate the process will be equally barren of results. The former, if in passable credit, will be angered and abandon, if he ever entertained it, the intent to pay. The latter will be hurt, perhaps, but he will not be made any more capable of payment.

There is risk, too, in the resort to this method of attempting to collect "bad debts." The sending of such an envelope as we have described is a direct attack on the credit of the person to whom it is addressed, and unquestionably libelous. If the recipient has any credit at all and is injured therein, he can secure damages from the sender if not from the creditor who authorizes collection in such fashion. There would be no risk, of course, if all bad debtors were "beats;" but such, as we have already pointed out, is not the fact. It very often happens that the non-payment of a bill is due to a dispute as to the amount or as to the fact of indebtedness. A "bad-debt" envelope, out of which it is intimated a law-suit may grow, was brought in yesterday in which there is a difference of two dollars between creditor and debtor. The former claims there is four dollars due. The latter admits that there is two which he honestly means to pay—or did mean to pay before his credit was attacked in the manner described. The sum is too small for litigation, but it is easy to see that in such a case—and there are many of them—the creditor or his collector could not well do a more unwise thing than to inclose his bill in a libelous envelope.

Creditors will, nevertheless, run the risk of this scheme or any other which gives the faintest promise of securing bad debts. But by and by, perhaps, they will learn that the true method of dealing with bad debts is not to have any. If our credit system were not grossly abused in the frantic rush to do business and make sales, there would be no bad debts worth scheming to collect.—Detroit Free Press.

A Clear Definition.

Omaha Boy (in New York)—What are all these men rushing into that place for?

New York Boy—That's a bucket-shop.

"What's that?"

"They buy and sell stocks there on margins, same as they do in the exchange."

"Oh! It's another exchange, eh?"

"No, it's a bucket-shop."

"Well, how do they tell the difference?"

"Why, one is in a great big building and the other in a little bit of a one."—Omaha World.

No Cause for Worry.

"How is my boy getting on?" inquired an anxious father of the principal of a boarding-school.

"Wonderfully, wonderfully," replied the pompous pedagogue. "He is making rapid strides in every thing but penmanship. I'm sorry to say he's the worst writer in the school."

"Pshaw!" returned the father, "don't trouble yourself on that account. I intend to make a doctor of him."—Judge.

THE CHEWING-GUM FAD.

Men, Women and Children Habitual Users of Tolu and Paraffine.

Few people have any realization of the large interests involved in the manufacture of chewing-gum, or of the extent to which it is habitually used. They know that children love the sticky morsel that keeps their jaws in motion, but the extent to which their elders indulge a similar fondness is generally unsuspected. Women are not proof against the seductions of the penny package, and hosts of men, who hide the little wad when threatened with discovery, are wont to slip their small change in the hands of boyish venders of tolu and paraffine delights.

Such is the testimony of dealers, whose assertion finds occasional proof in the observations of every one. Chewing women may be seen in stores, on street cars, and even on the promenade. They are so addicted to the habit that even in public they can not forsake its exercise. But these are exceptional devotees. Many more indulge the taste in private, secretly enjoying what they blushingly confess or hide from every eye. The masculine chewer must have something in his mouth; perhaps because he is trying to escape from the thralldom of tobacco, or because he finds it a soothing aid to reflection. It would be amusing to find on under sides of somber desks the evidences of such a childish taste, but the discovery might easily be made by any curious investigator.

To meet this want vast amounts of gum are annually manufactured. One large firm in Elgin, with a branch in the city, averages 1,600 boxes a day, and requires the services of more than one hundred girls to wrap the little packages. They keep in stock $20,000 worth of tiny pictures to adorn their wares and catch the color-loving eyes of little customers. Another firm in New York City does a business estimated at $500,000 yearly. Though this is the largest manufactory in the country, there are numerous others that do a good business and that swell the sum received to millions annually.

Though there are innumerable varieties of gum, differing chiefly in flavoring and appearance, there are several kinds that are wholly distinct. Of these, the white or paraffine gums and the darker-colored tolu gums are made in largest quantities. All white varieties are made of paraffine, an article requiring no description. Tolu gums are the product of balsam tolu and the chicle tree. The latter is found in Mexico. It yields a rubber-like gum, called chicle, that can be easily chewed, and is of creamy-brown color. Tolu is yielded by the balsam tree that bears its name. It is of dark color, and serves the purpose of adding elasticity to the compound. Sugar is used to sweeten gum, and various ingredients are added to furnish different flavors.

Manufacturers report a steadily increasing demand for their wares throughout the country. This is especially noticeable in the South, where gum-chewing is supplanting the old snuff habit, to which women were almost universally addicted. Whatever may be thought of the new custom, it is certainty better than the old, if only on account of cleanliness. The chief objection to it seems to be its lack of taste if not its positive vulgarity, but so long as human nature takes delight in doing things not quite commendable, it probable could find few less harmful diversions. Beauty with a cud is not a pleasing sight, however, and the social laws that forbid her to eat upon the promenade should relegate the enjoyment of her gum to hours of privacy.—Chicago Herald.

SKULLS AND SNAKES

Uncomfortable Ornaments for Gentlemen's Canes and Umbrellas.

The extent to which idiotic cane heads and umbrella handles will be carried is capable of astonishing if not horrifying the beholders. There have been plenty of the grotesque monstrosities on exhibition among silly young men ever since oxidized silver came into fashion. A favorite thing has a handle of carved wood, elaborately painted, representing an uncanny head, half human and half beast. A college graduate sat in an orchestra chair at a theater with a cane in his mouth most of the time. The device was an oxidized silver skull as big as a hen's egg, and on top of the skull there crawled an enameled lizard. The well educated young man sat and chewed this lizard in a way to madden any delicate woman in his vicinity. In a New York store window were lately shown a stand of fifty of the most villainous inventions ever put on the tops of canes or umbrellas. Inside, and from a handsome case, the polite attendant produced a cane and umbrella, to which the same knob could be attached, and in fair weather or foul the happy possessor could make himself a terror to society. The knob was a large skull of oxidized silver, with a flexible jaw that wriggled at you as you moved it, while from the eyeless sockets on the slightest agitation there protruded the heads of two snakes. It was a thing to make one shudder, but the proprietor spoke with pride of being the only importer of this infernal design.

Robert Heller used to wear an enameled skull as a scarf pin. An eyeglass made of an emerald occupied one socket, and by a connecting battery in his pocket he made the dreadful little thing chatter its teeth in a truly hair-standing fashion. But Robert was a disciple of the black art, and it was his business to surround himself with the attributes of diabolism. The usual young monkey who buys such toys hasn't the brains to become a prestidigitator, and is only a social nuisance.—Detroit Free Press.

GREAT TELESCOPES.

Why They Are of More Service to Science Than Small Instruments.

It is frankly to be admitted that for ordinary work enormous instruments are not advantageous; those of moderate dimensions will do far more easily and rapidly the work for which they are capable. It would be poor economy to shoot squirrels with fifteen-inch cannon. Observers with smaller instrument, if they have sharp eyes and use them faithfully, can always find enough to do and do it well. But the great telescope has two advantages which are decisive. In the first place, it collects more light, and so makes it possible to use higher magnifying powers, and thus virtually to draw nearer to the object studied than we can with the smaller one; and, in the next place, in consequence of what is known as "diffraction," the image of a luminous point made by a large lens is smaller and sharper than that made by a small one. The smaller the telescope the larger are the so-called "spurious disks" of a star, so that in the case of a close double star, for instance, where our nine-inch telescope shows only an oval disk, the twenty-three inch shows two fine distinctly separated points. It is true that the atmospheric disturbances, which always prevail to a greater or less extent, very seriously affect the "seeing" with large instruments. The "power of the prince of the air," which is to an astronomer the very type of the "total depravity of an inanimate things," on nine clear nights out of ten deprives a great telescope of much of its just superiority, so that on an ordinary night a good observer with an aperture of twelve or fifteen inches can make out all that can be fairly seen with twenty-four or thirty inches at the same time. And yet the writer has continually verified in his experience the observation of Mr. Clark, who said: "You can always see with a large telescope every thing shown by a smaller one—a little better if the seeing is bad; immensely better if it is good." But when a really good night comes, as once in a while it does, then to a great telescope heaven opens, new worlds appear, old illusions are dissipated, and observations and measurements before beyond the reach of human skill become possible, easy and accurate. In fact, the reasonabless of wanting still larger telescopes is identically the same as that of wanting a telescope at all. Of course, it is impossible to predict what discoveries will be made with the great Lick telescope when it is erected on its mountain of privilege—very likely none. It is not possible now to go out at night, as some seem to think, and pick up "discoveries" as one would gather flowers in a forest. But we may be sure of this, that it will collect data, with micrometer, camera and spectroscope, which will remove many old difficulties, will clear up doubts, will actually advance our knowledge, and, what is still more important, will prepare the way and hew the steps for still higher climbing toward the stars.—Prof. Young, in Forum.

APPROPRIATED HUMOR.

Bob Burdette Tells How Conscience May Make Cowherds of Us All.

If there is any thing that disgusts the tall corn and silo editor more than another, it is newspaper humor. Every time he reads a pun, he loses his cud, and once when he clipped a funny poem and printed it in his department thinking it was a "Song of the Farmer," he kicked down his manger and was off his feed for a week. One day, he came into the office in high good humor. He had an egg in his pocket as big as a turnip, a stock of millet thirteen feet long—the boys had worked over two hours splicing it—and a bottle of sorghum that killed all the cockroaches in the office. "I'll give you something for your funny column," said the old man, graciously, "something that you won't be ashamed to have people read."

"You needn't credit it," he went on, as he scratched across the paper with a quill pen that sounded like a creaking wagon going down hill, and that flowed ink like an artesian. "Just put it right in with your own; thank heaven my reputation doesn't depend on these things. There she is, and she's a corker." And the ever gloomy humorist read: "No," said Mr. Fussbudget, savagely, "Matilda can't have a new dress. Times are hard, and I'm going to have a tariff for revenue, dress or no dress." "Well," said his wife, "so we think Matilda is going to have a tear if her have a new dress, too." There was a moment of embarrassing silence, which was broken by the silo editor: "See? Tear if her have a new; put it in; that'll catch 'em." The old man's salary was to be raised the next week and he was assigned to the humorous department, but alas for the vanity of human schemes. That very night he was taken deathly sick, and the doctor said he could not live till morning. Appalled at the prospect of sudden death, he sent for the managing editor and confessed that he had stolen that revenue joke out of an English paper. Thus conscience doth make cowherds of us all, and thus the native few of evolution are sicklied o'er with the high caste of some one else's thought.—Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

—The Atlanta Constitution in pursuing its crusade against the pistol-toting coward, arrives at the remarkable conclusion that more pistols are carried by northeners than by southrons, and even makes this startling allegation: "One peculiar feature of the hip-pocket nuisance of the north is the great number of girls and women who always appear to have a pistol handy whenever an emergency arises.

SATURDAY DECEMBER 17.....1887

Several bills of special interest to the Pacific Coast will be introduced at the present session of Congress. Mr. Morrow will introduce in the House a bill to increase the appropriation for the purchase of a site for a public building in San Francisco to $850,000. It has been found impossible to purchase a site for the amount appropriated at the last session of Congress. Senator Stanfofd will introduce bills for the following purposes: To encourage co-operation; to enable California to take lands in lieu of the 16th and 36th sections found to be mineral lands; granting California 5 per cent. of the net proceeds of the sales of land in the State; to credit and pay to the several States and Territories money collected under the General Tax Act levied in 1861; to provide mortars and heavy guns and armaments for vessels and coast defence; to extend the time of naturalization from five to twenty-one years. Senator Stewart has introduced a bill to provide for the issuance of coin certificates to serve as money. It provides that any person may deposit at any mint or assay office of the United States both gold and silver bullion in quantities not less than five ounces of gold or eighty ounces of silver and demand and receie vtherefor coin certificates representing one dollar for twenty-five and eight-tenths grains of gold, and one dollar for each four hundred and twelve and a half grains of silver, provided that the gold and silver bullion so deposited shall contain by weight in one thousand parts nine hundred of pure metal. Other conditions for issuing the certificates are provided in the bill. These certificates would be issued of not less value than two dollars nor greater than one thousand dollars; they would be money for all intents and purposes. Mr. Stewart will also introduce a bill to encourage irrigation; it contains many important provisions that will have influence upon irrigation if it shall become a law.

The French Republic appears to be firmly established at last. The Monarchists, Bonapartists and Bourbonists, enemies of free government on the one hand; and the Anarchists and Communists, enemies of all governments on the other hand, have been beaten in their attempt to overthrow the Republic. A President has been elected lawfully and has taken office and is discharging his duties in peace. The mob of Paris no longer dominates over France. A treacherous adventurer and a lot of beggarly conspirators are no longer able to destroy free government, as was done by Napoleon the little and his tools. The new President of France, Marie Francois Sadi Carnot, is fifty years of age and is familiar with affairs of state. He is said to be an honest and capable man. But whatever may be the capacity or character of the new President, it is of far more importance that there is a republican party strong enough to elect him and to sustain him in maintaining his authority and discharging the duties of his office. While this continues free government is safe and quite independent of individuals, and beyond the power of enemies of freedom and enemies of order to destroy it.

The five states of Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois have as many electoral votes as New York and Pennsylvania combined. In all of these states the former immense republican majorities have in late elections been reduced to insignificant pruportions. The change is said to be caused by the desire of farming communities for changes in the tariff laws. The changes in these states may more than equal any gains that the republican party might make in states where there is a growing desire for continued protection.

English newspapers are full of triumph over the free trade views urged in the President's message. If such views should be embodied in laws tens of thousands of American workmen would at once be left without the means of earning bread. With the ruin of great manufacturing establishments that would follow a free trade policy, American farmers would find a woeful falling off in their best markets.

Some Answers.

In reply to eastern inquiry: Inyo county is nearly as big as Massachusetts and New Jersy combined. Owens valley contains over three hundred thousand acres of arable land; equal to eighteen hundred tracts of 160 acres each; average number of persons in a family, five; total for said number of tracts, 9375. Total population of county at present, 3000. Room enough for new comers. Soil, sandy loam. Fruits grown, everything from cherries to figs. All the grains, grasses, roots and vegetables known to the state. Springs of pure water abound. Wells ten to thirty feet deep. Snow rarely falls in Owens valley, and never lies longer than a few hours. Carson and Colorado railroad runs lengthwise through Owens valley 75 miles. Independence, county seat, 251 miles from Los Angeles. Good schools at convenient distances. Churches not far enough away for some and too far for others. Strangers cannot get any more government land; two years ago the old settlers would not take the public land as a gift; now they are quarreling about it. Partly improved land can be bought from fifteen to twenty-five dollars per acre. Fuel in plenty found on the mountains both sides of Owens valley. Farm produce of all kinds brings higher prices than anywhere else in the State. Mines make good local market. Products of the mines, gold, silver, lead marble and disappointments. Sources of water for irragation, mountain streams and Owens river. Healthiest county in the world; young wives with old husbands, and some whose husbonds might as well be old, find fault with the climate; ditto, the doctors. Wages of farm hands, thirty to forty dollars per month; carpenters, four to five dollars per day.

ORDINANCE NO. 19.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, do ordain as follows:

All persons doing business within the county of Inyo shall obtain licenses from the Tax Collector of said county as follows:

SEC. 1. Auctioneers are divided into two classes and must obtain licenses from the Tax Collector as follows: First class. Those whose average monthly sales amount to $2,500 and upward constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those whose average monthly sales are less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 2. Persons engaged in banking, loaning money at interest, or in buying or selling notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of private persons, or in buying or selling State County or City stocks, or other evidences of State, County or City indebtedness, or stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness of incorporated companies, or in buying or selling gold dust, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver coin, are divided into two classes and must pay licenses as follows:

First class. Those doing business in the aggregate to the amount of $10,000 per quarter, or over, constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those dying business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $5 per and for each bowling alley, $15 per quarter for each alley; but no license must be granted for a term of less than three months.

SEC. 4. For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a caravan or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $7. And for each show for pay of any figures, jugglers necromancers, magicians, wire or rope dancing, and sleight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this Section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable entertainments, by any amateur dramatic association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 7. Every person who sells spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and make the following payment.

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,000 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter.

SEC. 8. Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, (except Agricultural or viticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale under license) and all persons who keep horses or carriages for hire (except such as are used in the transportation of goods) must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, licence, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector; such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates:

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 per month or more constitute the first class and must pay a licen e of $9 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $1,250 and less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $4.50 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $1,250 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $3 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon measure.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines.

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $8 per month; and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares, or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $15 per month.

SEC. 11. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or bull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for hire must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and pay therefor as follows:

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $75.

Second. At $75 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $50.

Third. At $50 and less than $75 constitute the third and require a license of $40.

Fourth. At $25 and less than $50 constitute the fourth class and require a license of $25.

Fifth. At $10 and less than $25 constitute the fifth class and require a licence of $15.

Sixth. At less than $10 constiture the sixth class and require a license of $10.

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A license for propagation obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 12. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said fine be paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 13. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is his duty made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3759 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 15. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks.

The above ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county at a regular meeting of said board October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes: Harger, Robinson and Elwell.
Noes: None. J. D. HARGER, Chairman.
Attest: F. H. MACK, Clerk.

TAKE SIMMONS
LIVER REGULATOR
For all Diseases of the
Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.

The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.

No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.

Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.

If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.
JOHN C. EVANS, SHORTSANS, Mo., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get up any instrument that will take as much labor off of men as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it."
JOHN R. DODGE, JR., jeweler, Norway, Iowa, writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. 1st. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just as good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If you run short, you can not buy ours for gold."
I will ship a sample to thos. desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

Last week, it is reported, a rich strike of horn silver ore was made by Frank Fitzgerald at Lookout. This ore is alwnys exceedingly rich; we hope Fitz has found a big lot of it.

A few weeks ago Max Cohn, Paul Myrtengreen and Sam Gruber began prospecting near Independence Station. It is reported that a few days ago they struck a vein of ore that will pay them good wages.

Mr. Louis Munzinger, of Bishop Creek, spent some days in town this week. An effort was made to get from him his great secret of stuffing and roasting a turkey but it was no go; Louis is determined that his famous roast turkey shall remain an attraction found out only at the Bavaria Brewery.

The average raisin vineyard in Fresno, Los Angeles or San Bernardino counties are not more than twenty acres in size. From this area with the vines from four years old and upward a single person can make from $175 to $250 an acre.

Hon. P. Reddy is in Sonora, engaged in defending two men named Powers and Meyers, on trial for robbing the Yosemite stage two years ago. The men were tried once before for the offense and both were sentenced to San Quentin for long terms. An appeal to the Supreme Court resulted in an order for a new trial.

A PRIZE.—Every ticket to the Grand Concert will be numbered and will entitle the holdto a chance in the drawing for an elegant prize.

The Austin Reville says a cattle man in that part of Nevada is taking a new method of protecting his cattle from cold. He makes a mixture of tar, red clay and linseed oil, and claims that it forms a glue on the hide of the animal which will keep out water and be like a blanket to keep the stock warm. Austin must have very cold weather or an editor not over scrupulous about truth.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate for the allowance of a bounty of $8,50 per month to all men who served in the army during the war. There is no probability that this bill can become a law at present, nor while there are so many survivors of the war who are able to earn a living for themselves. A much better bill has been introduced by Senator Monderson; this provides for granting a pension to every soldier and sailor of the war who is unable to do manual labor. The old soldiers and sailors who are no longer able to earn a living should be cared for.

Gustav Eisen, an extensive raisin grower of Fresno county, says the conditions essential to the successful production of raisins are; uninterrupted sunshine and the absence of rain and fog during the ripening and curing season; a rich alluvial soil, with moisture suffient to keep the vines growing until the grapes begin to ripen; absence of spring frosts. All of these conditions are found in the lower end of Owens valley.

Again and again it has been broadly intimated that there was corruption in the courts in San Francisco in connection with the landing of Chinese. Now the charges have taken more specific form, and the names of Judge Sawyer and Judge Hoffman are mentioned in connection with the disgraceful matter. Congress may be asked to order an investigation. The profits made in landing Chinese women are something like the profits made by successful slave smugglers in old times.

A land contest occupied the time of Register Laird a good portion of the week. The parties to the contest were A. A. Cashbaugh and R. W. Scott of Bishop Creek. The former had made a location; the latter alleged that Cashbaugh had not complied with the law in residing upon the land and he also filed a location upon the same tract. About a dozen witnesses were examined, some for one party and some for the other. George M. Gill and P. W. Forbes attorneys for Scott; W. P. George attorney for Cashbaugh.

People in Europe who have money to lend appear to think it will be safer in American securities than anywhere else. I is stated that within seven months one hundred and forty five millions of dollars of foreign capital has been brought into this country in exchange for railway bonds. The respect for law which distinguishes the American people above all others, and the rapid and general prosperity of the whole country are the grounds for the confidence in the securities offered to investors of capital.

Up in Lassen county recently a man named Foley was arrested and tried for practicing medicine without a license. Many witnesses testified that Foley had prescribed medicine for sick persons. Counsel for defendant, E. V. Spencer Esq. read a section of the Code which provides that a physician must procure a diploma from some Medical Board, but it did not compel the physician to file it, not subjecting him to a fine if he did not. Counsel said a physician might have a pocket full of diplomas and not see fit to file them. The Judge instructed the jury to acquit the accused and they did so.

The Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report is forced to admit that there is now ten million dollars more silver money in circulation than there was one year ago. The money lenders and their servants in office cannot prevent the use of silver as money. The merchant, the manufacturer, the farmer, the mechanic; all who live by labor are quite satisfied with silver money; none are opposed to it but bankers, usurers; those who draw interest from others, who use money to make it produce something else of value. Silver is the poor man's money, and those who depreciate its value are the enemies of the poor.

Olives.

When at Independence lately, Mr. Trenmore Coffin said he would set out a lot of olive trees at the new settlement on the east side of Owens river, and make an experiment in olive culture. Some weeks ago Mr. Coffin was on the other side of the mountains and visited some olive groves; from fwhat he then saw he is strongly of opinion that the olive will thrive in Owens valley.

The Comstock.

The Carson Appeal, whose editor was on the Comstock in the early part of the week, makes the following sensible remarks on the situation there:

A visit to Virginia City will convince anybody that the Comstock is regaining its old power. It has not come as a big boom with a shout and a roar, but the change has been brought about by a better management, a more careful economy of labor and material and approved appliances for working ores. In the old days things were quite different; no one cared how much was paid out for useless work, figure-heads or incompetent office help. It was not a question of how cheaply, but how expensively ore could be worked. The idea was to "help the mill along."

The ore was rich—they only took out the richest—there was an inexhaustible quantity, and it was just banged and slammed into the mill and scattered over the dump with the utmost recklessness. They never bothered with details, but only looked at the grand result. On pay-day they stacked up loaded trays of gold on their counters and after paying off a long string of men and giving fancy salaries to the Superintendents and clerks had more money than they knew what to do with. Under the circumstances it is not strange that there was no economy in extracting and working ores.

Then came a period of depression, and the public were told that the mines were worked out, but the managers looked over the situation and found that there was enough ore of lower grade to run the Comstock for ten or twenty years more. It was simply necessary to work this ore more economically and with better appliances. The ore was everywhere. It lay in the dumps, filled old stopes and drifts, and lay neglected in a thousand forgotten places which were passed by in the rush and excitement of early times. This ore is now being handled at a good profit, and there is plenty of it. The process of reduction has been carefully studied, and since electricity and the Pelton water wheels have been introduced the cost of extracting and reducing has been so lessened that a million tons of ore which could not have been profitably worked under the old process, have now been brought where they can be worked at a good profit and keep thousands of men employed who would otherwise be idle.

Two years ago houses were being sold in Virginia City for firewood, and it began to look as if the place was to be given over to tramps and owls. Now there is not a single vacant house in Virginia City, and rents have more than doubled. The hotels are full—something unusal; business is good; everybody is satisfied; money is plenty; the gambling tables—a sure index of flush times—are flourishing once more. Electric lights are spreading all over the place, and the leisure men about town are drinking and gambling in the Washoe Club just as they used to in the bonanza days. All this prosperity on the Comstock means prosperity for the State.

Worth Attention.

There is a part of the Wright irrigation law of which no mention has yet been made in public discussion, but which is worth attention. Section 39 reads as follows: "The Board shall fix the compensation to be paid to the other officers named in the Act, to be paid out of the Treasury of the district; provided, that said Board shall, upon the petition of at least fifty, or a majority of the freeholders within such district therefor, submit to the electors at any general election a schedule of salaries and fees to be paid hereunder. Such petition to be presented to the Board twenty days prior to a general election, and the result of such election shall be determined and declared in all respects as other elections are determined and declared under this act."

The "other officers" named in the Act are an Assessor, Collector and Treasurer. From the section quoted it would appear that unless "fifty, or a majority of the freeholders within such district" petition the Board of Directors to submit a schedule of salaries and fees to be paid to said officers, and unless also there should be a majority of votes cast in favor of said schedule, then there would be no authority anywhere for fixing the salaries of said officials; therefore they could not collect any salaries, and it might be that no assessment would be made and no taxes collected. This portion of the Act may be of great importance; it deserves close consideration.

Artesian Wells In Kern County.

In a communication to the Kern county Californian, Gustav Eisen says the aggregate of all the artesian wells now flowing in the Lake Basin of Kern amounts to more than all the water available for irrigation during the summer months in either San Diego, San Bernardino or Los Angeles county. These wells are now capped when not in use, else they would flood the whole country. About two and a half years ago Mr. Chapin, who had bored many wells for the Central Pacific railroad Company, was at Independence. He said that Owens valley was about the most promising region he had ever seen for finding water by boring, and expressed great confidence in getting good wells. About a year and a half ago McLaughlin and Hawkins, who have bored many wells near Carson, were here, and were equally confident of the success of artesian wells. Several parties who have made desert land locations in the valley have repeatedly offered to give half a section of land to any one who would find artesion water on any part of their locations but nothing has ever come of it.

All The Conditions In Perfection.

The Fresno Expositor says the owner of seven acres of six-year old vines near Fresno this season realized $3124 for the raisins produced on the tract. This is an average of more than four hundred and fifty eight and a half dollars per acre. Such a result must be unusual in any country; but if half, or even one third of the above can be realized per acre, then the production of raisins would be vastly more profitable than ordinary farming. According to the statements made by experienced raisin growers, of the conditions of soil and climate most favorable for the production of raisins, Owens valley must be one of the best countries in the world for the purpose. The chief conditions necessary are; alluvial soil, plenty of sunshine, soil moist enough to keep the vines growing and freedom from fogs. All these conditions are found here in perfection.

Concert and Ball.

Extensive preparations are being made for the concert and ball to be given on the 2d of January. A number of excellent selections, vocal and instrumental, have been made, and will be well rendered. A new departure will be attempted by giving a potpourri from the Mikado, which is sure to prove an attractive feature. Everything that can be suggested is being done to make the ball which follows the concert a pleasurable occasion. The best hall in the county is secured, as good music will be had as can be obtained anywhere and the floor arrangement will be all that can be desired.

"A THREE-TIME WINNER."

Has Hanlan Lost His Grip?—Philosophical Training Demanded.

The defeat of "Ned" Hanlan by Teemer at Toronto in August indicates the "end of the glory" of the doughty champion.

He has sustained his record with admirable pluck and success, but the tremendous strain of years of training must certainly some day find its limit.

Apropos of this we recall the following interesting reminiscence of aquatic annals:

On a fine, bright day in August, 1871, an excited multitude of 15,000 to 20,000 persons lined the shores of the beautiful Kenebecassis, near St. John N. B., attracted by a four-oared race between the famous Paris crew of that city and a picked English crew for $5,000 and the championship of the world. Wallace Ross, the present renowned oarsman, pulled stroke for the Blue Nose crew, and "Jim" Renforth, champion sculler and swimmer of England and of the world, was stroke in the English shell.

Excitement was at fever heat.

But three hundred yards of the course had been covered when the Englishmen noticed that their rivals were creeping away.

"Give us a dozen, Jim," said the veteran Harry Kelly, ex-champion of England, who was pulling No. 3. oar.

"I can't, boys, I'm done," said Renforth, and with these words he fell forward, an inanimate heap in the boat.

"He has been poisoned by bookmakers," was the cry, and belief.

Everything that science and skill could suggest for his restoration was tried; but after terrible struggles of agony, the strong man, the flower of the athletes and pride of his countrymen, passed away.

The stomach was analyzed but no sign or trace of poison could be found therein, though general examination showed a very strange condition of the blood and the life-giving and health-preserving organs caused by years of unwise training. While the muscular development was perfect the heart and kidneys were badly congested.

The whole system was, therefore, in just that state when the most simple departure from ordinary living and exertion was of momentous consequence. His wonderful strength only made his dying paroxysms more dreadful and the fatality more certain.

Hanlan is now in Australia. Beach, champion of that country, is a powerful fellow, who probably understands the liability of athletes to death from overtraining, the effect thereof being very serious on the heart, blood and kidneys, as shown by poor Renforth's sudden death.

Within the past three years he has taken particular care of himself, and when training, always reinforces the kidneys and prevents blood congestion in them and the consequent ill-effect on the heart by using Warner's safe cure, the sportsman's universal favorite, and says he "is astonished at the great benefit."

Harry Wyatt, the celebrated English trainer of athletes, who continues himself to be one of the finest of specimens of manhood and one of the most successful of trainers, writes over his own signature to the English Sporting Life, September 5th, saying: "I consider Warner's safe cure invaluable for all training purposes and outdoor exercise. I have been in the habit of using it for a long time. I am satisfied that it pulled me through when nothing else would, and it is always a three-time winner!"

Beach's and Wyatt's method of training is sound and should be followed by all.

CATTLE AND DOGS.

How Many Good Farm Animals are Hopelessly Wrecked.

The majority of farmers think it very necessary to keep a dog to help them drive the stock. A well-trained dog may be of some help, but the largest per cent. of the dogs kept for this purpose do considerable more harm than good. Not being under your control to any considerable extent, and, well started after stock, it is more trouble to stop them and get them to let the stock alone than it would have been to have driven the stock yourself, and this, too, without taking into consideration the damage done to the stock.

On many farms the cows are allowed the run of the pasture, and at night it very often devolves upon the boy of the farm to drive them to be milked. Mounted upon a horse, and accompanied by the necessary dog, the cows are hurried home on the run as rapidly as possible, the boy alternately urging the dog, his horse and the cattle by whooping and yelling, often aided in his work with a good stick which he has learned to use "not wisely but too well." Leaving out the other many risks of injuring the stock from various causes, this one injury to the cows and their milk ought to be sufficient to induce a change. It is surely bad enough to worry the other stock with, in many cases, a useless dog, but to drive the cows, with their well-filled udders of milk, home on a run with a barking, biting dog at their heels to add to their excitement and worry, is certainly cruel as well as injurious, and it is not only the animal but also the product that is affected. Not only the quality but the quantity is affected, so much so that often it is not fit to use or to be manufactured into butter or cheese. Such milk is not good for the calves or to be used in the family, and when we consider that this is wholly uncalled for and could easily be avoided it would certainly seem advisable to discontinue it.

Then in addition we must consider the loss of flesh that must be occasioned from unnecessary running and beating up. Since cows of an easy excitable nature will gradually get into such a condition that the sight of a dog will needlessly excite them, the boy and the horse are bad enough without the dog. In fact, stock ought not to be driven faster than a walk at any time, and the milch cows more especially so than any thing else. Treat them kind and when driving be careful not to hurry them out of a walk.—Planter and Stockman.

—The following items were included in the bill of a Melbourne lawyer: "To fifteen days' study of the works of Charles Dickens, W. M. Thackeray and Mark Twain, hunting for paragraphs reflecting on unnamed individuals, in view of the probability that libel action might have been brought against the authors, fifty guineas."

—A young Cuban about to be married, being jokingly told by an American friend: "Well, kiss her for me," remarked, as he started to see his senorita: "That is something I have never been able to do for myself, though we have been sweethearts for six years and engaged for three, and I have never seen her alone yet."

—The Appalachian club, of Bangor, Me., has placed on the summit of Mount Katahdin a cone of burnished tin twenty inches in height and twelve in diameter, in order to note the distance from which the peak can be seen. It is expected that the cone will reflect the sun rays far over Maine and enable observers to determine the question.

—A negro living near Lexington, Ga., gave an account the other day of a remarkable rainfall. He said that it "rained hard 'nough on half of the top of my house to run off, but t'other side wasn't hardly wet. 'Twas a good shower, enough to run in my front yard and for some distance in front of the house, but it didn't lay the dust in de back yard."

—Dave Autrey, of Americus, Ga., says that he found a live chicken on his place last week that had a foot on each side near the wing. It had no thigh, no leg, but a foot. When the little fellow would try to walk it would get on one foot, paw the air on the top with the other foot, and "peep, peep," in a note that was doleful to hear. It lived two days and a half and died for want of exercise.

—A curious fact in natural history is noted in the fisheries report for England and Wales. A pike was captured last year on the "run" at Christchurch which had audaciously attempted to stuff itself with a salmon weighing ten and a half pounds. There must have been a severe struggle to overpower the victim, and the pike had succeeded to a certain extent, but had choked itself in the effort.—Boston Transcript.

—An unusually intelligent Newfoundland dog is owned by Mr. Balterham, of Asheville, N. C. Mr. Balterham says that after her four pups had become large enough to wean he gave one away, and a few days afterward, pointing to another pup, said, with some emphasis: "To-morrow I am going to give that one to Mr. Blank." The mother seemed to listen with attention, and the next morning she was missing with the doomed brat, leaving the other two puppies to take care of themselves. After nightfall she slunk back very slily with the pup in her mouth, and seemed happy in having saved it from separation from its family.

—A man at Fort McDowell, A. T., found a hollow stone three and one-half inches in diameter. On breaking it he found a frog's skeleton. Shortly afterward he found some birds carrying mud to a cliff and depositing it in holes that they had dug in the side of the cliff. He went to the top of the cliff and climbed down to one of the holes, expecting to find the nest of the peculiar bird, but instead he found a globular stone containing a decayed lizard. He found thousands of insects entombed alive in the banks. Why they put the animals in the balls is a mystery, for after the mud dries it is so hard that it requires considerable force to break them.

There was a difficulty among the singers; and, it being rumored as a settled fact that the choir would not sing a note on the next Sabbath, the minister commenced morning worship by giving out the hymn of Watts', "Come ye who love the Lord." —The Galveston News pays this tribute to the late Bishop R. W. B. Elliott: "He came to a wilderness with scarcely a consecrated church in his jurisdiction. He is about to enter upon a four years' course of theological study at Mount Hermon School, Northfield, Mass. He is a young man of quick intellect and high ambitions. At the end of his course at Mount Hermon he will begin missionary work among his countrymen either in this country or China.

—The proper method of dealing with the Bible is to accept it in the aggregate as of Divine authority, to attach this authority to each portion of the Bible, to read and study the book under this impression, and then devotedly regulate our lives by the rules which it supplies. The man who does this will feel the power of the book as an authority to govern his faith and practice, and will rejoice in the comforts and hopes which it affords, as he otherwise can not do.—Independent.

—The board of directors of the University of Southern California have under consideration a plan for the establishment of banks in connection with each of the branches of the university, these institutions to do business upon capital furnished by the several endowment funds, and thus to provide for the colleges a constant and never-failing source of revenue and form, at the same time a perfectly safe and legitimate source for the investment of those funds. In this way it is proposed to eventually establish a university bank of San Diego, a university bank of Ontario, of Escondido, of Ramona, of Tulare, of San Fernando, and of every town wherein a branch of the great and growing university is located.

OUR COAL FIELDS.

Why They May Be Termed Immense Cellars of Bottled Sunshine.

A remarkable peculiarity of the life of these modern days is the discovery of immense cellars of bottled sunshine. For, speaking unconventionally, how can we better describe our coal fields? From these we obtain heat, light and force, by fires, gas and steam engines, to a wonderful extent. At present we use this in a very wasteful fashion. And as a rule we do not get five per cent. of the energy stored in the coal we use. At a recent trial of steam-engines one was able to use twelve per cent. of the energy stored in the coal it burned, and that was thought a remarkable result. The great problem evermore is, at which shop can we get our sunshine most cheaply? Direct solar power can only be had very occasionally, and the cost of bottling is high. Water power can only be had at certain places and hence often leads to expenses which prevent it being economical. Similar is it with wind power. Horse power is dear, the growth of the food of the animal, his stable, and attendants run into money. At present coal power is the cheapest. Electric machinery is not a source, it is only a medium, not a bottle, but a glass, from which energy is consumed. It needs power to produce an electric current. Its value in the conveyance of energy is very great. So that in time it may prove a cheap way of getting sunshine to work. It is not always least costly to buy at the cheapest market, the conveyance of goods home may cost more than the extra price of purchasing nearer home. For a particular work at a particular place it is an open question whether sunshine can be cheapest gained from the winds, from a swift stream, from coal mines, or from the sun direct. So also whether it can be best applied direct, or through the agency of steam or of electricity. Mr. John Stuart Mill, an acute though not over-wise thinker, signalized a brief political career by starting a scare about the exhaustion of our coal mines. This will not take place for centuries, so we can leave posterity to take care of itself. Recently a new cellar of immense extent has been found in mineral oil springs. By the time these enormous stores are exhausted it is highly probable that some method of getting at and using the mighty central heat of the earth may be discovered. We have no need of anxiety as to the supply of energy running short.—Christian at Work.

Hotel Swells.

See the city hotel swells,
Howling swells,
What asinine assurance each attitude now tells!
How they ogle, ogle, ogle
All the girls who pass the door,
And each reckless, rakish rogue'll
Keep it up till he's fourscore!
Dashing swells,
"Mashing" belles
From early morn till late at night in front of the hotels!
Donkey swells,
Monkey swells!
Oh, why don't the proprietor come out and mash these swells? —Hotel Mail.

The Very Worst of All.

Social crazes are nothing if not silly, and the latest is certainly one of the most foolish in a long list of follies. It is nothing less than the keeping of a "hair album" in which young ladies thoughtfully store up locks from the pates of their gentlemen friends. Each contribution is tied with a blue ribbon, and accompanied by a general description of the appearance of the individual donors. The girl with any regard for good sense and propriety would never accept a lock of hair from any one but her betrothed lover. The craze referred to is simply an exaggerated manifestation of the leaning to indiscriminate flirtation so observable in the overgrown boys and unbalanced girls of the present period.—Baltimoer Herald.

Ice-Making at Home.

Take a cylindrical earthen vessel and pour 3¼ ounces of commercial sulphuric acid and 1¾ ounces of water into it and then add 1 ounce of powdered sulphate of soda. In the center of this mixture, place a smaller vessel containing the water to be frozen; then cover the vessel, and, if possible, revolve the whole with a gentle motion. In a few minutes, the water in the small vessel will be converted into ice. The same mixture can be used a second or third time for making a block of ice. The operation should, if possible, be performed in a cool place, in a cellar, for example.—La Science en Famille.

Horse of Another Color.

"Can you help me to a trifle, sir?" he said to a Chicago citizen on State street; "I'm a poor man with a wife and 'leven children, and—"

"Nothing—nothing," responded the citizen, brusquely, hurrying on—

"An' I'm trying to raise money enough to obtain a divorce."

"Oh," said the citizen, stopping short, "there's a dollar for you."

Boston in Luck.

At the drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery in New Orleans, October 11th, three of the big prizes were captured by Boston men. Mr. Israel Ginsburg, who held one-tenth of ticket numbered 13,646, drew one-tenth of the capital prize of $150,000. Mr. Ginsburg is a young man, nineteen years of age, and lives with his father at 57 Salem street, in quarters that betray a life of hardship and moderate if not extreme poverty. He is a Russian Jew, a peddler by trade, and has only been in this country a few years. To few men therefore, could the smile of fortune have been more welcome. The morning the lucky numbers were published Mr. Ginsburg looked them, as he thought, carefully over, but failed to discover that his ticket bore the luckiest number of all. When his friend Mr. Finberg congratulated him later in the day he naturally thought he was joking and it was no easy matter to convince him of his good luck. However, the pleasant truth sooner or later dawned upon him and if he should ever doubt it again all he will have to do will be to visit the Blackstone and Fourth National Banks where he will find that last week he deposited in them $7,000 and $6,000 respectively. The remaining $2,000 the grateful son presented his father. Little else than Mr. Ginsburg's good fortune has been talked of in the neighborhood of Salem street since the drawing. Mr. John F. Sullivan and another Bostonian each held a tenth of ticket 58,480 which also drew a capital prize, the amount in cold cash received by each being $2,000. Mr. Sullivan is a poor man, perhaps, thirty-five years old, who during the past few years has been without any permanent employment, though during the most of his life he was a more or less successful junk dealer. He has been a staunch believer in the lottery and has found it a profitable investment before. The other gentleman, whose name we are not at liberty to publish, is the cashier of one of the largest and wealthiest companies in the United States. He has drawn prizes before though none were so large as the last. He expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with his experience and considered the Louisiana State Lottery Company as one of the fairest and most honest financial organizations in the country.—Boston (Mass) Courier, Oct. 30th.

THE WESTERN SETTLER'S CHOSEN SPECIFIC.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly-peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older-settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently-cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promotor of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

The Whistler.

H for a gun
That would carry a ton,
Or a saber keen
That would cut shingles clean,
To smite for once and forever more that terrible, concienceless midnight bore who ruthlessly breaks on a placid snore with airs that were popular years before—the man
who is always whistling.
He starts at morn
With his tune forlorn,
And he'll never stop,
Though his hearers drop.

His neighbors for mercy vainly sue; he'll merrily whistle "Mikado" clear through, will turn back to "Patience" and "Pinafore" too, avoiding with care all the music sheets new—the man who is always whistling.—Merchant Traveler.

LITTLE FOLKS' BRIGHT SAYINGS.

Mary to Alice—Your doll looks very poorly. What ails it?

Alice—It frets a great deal. Alfred knocked out one of its eyes last week, and it lost a great deal of sawdust, and hasn't been the same doll since.

MAKING SURE OF HIS IDENTITY.

Not many weeks since a little girl received a visit from an uncle she had never before seen, but had heard much about. He was known to her as "Uncle Benny." At the close of her customary evening prayer she said, "Dod bless mamma, papa and Tommy and Uncle Benny," then, after a pause, she added: "Dod, his other name is Hopkins!"

A QUESTION OF EXPERIENCE.

Sunday School Teacher—Now, children, we have all been bitten, haven't we?

Children (in chorus)—Yes, marm.

Teacher—And our first parents were bitten, too, were they not?

Children (in chorus)—Yes, marm.

Bright Little Boy from Avenue A—Skeeters, marm.

SHE KNEW HER BIRTHPLACE.

Plantation Philosophy.

SERE AUTUMN.

And skies, erst blue, become austere,
And fields are brown, we then surmise
That autumn's here.

When shorter daily grows the day
And harvested are summer's fruits,
Then gentle maidens put away
Their bathing suits.

GET READY FOR A CHILL.

When twittering swallows leave the eaves,
And songsters leave the rural grove,
And harvested are all the sheaves,
Put up the stove.

To prophesy with all their soul
A winter mild and warm, put in Ten tons of coal. —Boston Courier.

To Even Up.

Editor of a Western Literary Weekly (to young man)—Your article is excellent, sir, and we shall be glad to publish it.

Young Man—Thanks, about how much is it worth to you?

Editor—Oh, we don't pay for contributions.

Young Man—Oh! (after a moment's thought) Well, I will see my landlord to-night, and the butcher and grocer, and if I can make an arrangement with these gentlemen by which I can procure rent, meat and provisions without the unpleasant formality of paying for them, I think you and I can establish literary relations, sir, that will prove mutually agreeable. Which is the nearest way out?—Epoch.

An Artful Shopper.

A woman entered a dry goods store, and approached one of the clerks. "Please do these up," she said, handing him two old newspapers.

He looked surprised, and she explained.

"I ain't out on a reglar shopping tower, and ain't agoin' to buy anything, but there's that Mrs. Simpson, that has half of our pew at church, just loaded down with bundles. She'll never know the difference."

As the clerk was tying up the newspapers she said in a low voice:

"Make it look as much like a silk dress pattern as you can, mister; it'll worry her more."—Detroit Free Press.

A California View.

Omaha Man (on railroad train)—There is a very interesting article in this paper about the coal mines of Pennsylvania.

Los Angeles Lady—I am tired reading about strikes, thank you.

"This is about their homes. It says the average miner's home is a story and a half high, with three rooms."

"Story and a half high and with three rooms! Dear me! How rich they must be."—Omaha World.

He Was Discharged.

Reporter—I've a good item here this morning. I found a person who had been confined to one room his entire life.

City Editor—Good! Send it right up. Who is it?

Reporter—Why, a three days' old baby down at our house.—Judge.

A COSTLY UMBRELLA.

The Ten-Thousand Dollar Affair Made for Empress Eugenie.

"What is the best umbrella in the world?" asked a reporter of a wholesale dealer in such commodities.

"It depends upon whether you want it to lend or to keep," replied the merchant, humorously.

"To keep, of course."

"The silk umbrella is by all odds the best."

"Better than alpaca?"

"Better than any thing; more durable, more serviceable and lighter."

"What kind of silk do you use?"

"French entirely. A new product is a mixture of silk and linen, also made in France, which can hardly be told from the real article. It is superior to a common grade of silk umbrella and costs about the same."

"What is the cheapest price a silk umbrella can be sold for?"

"Some silk umbrellas are sold at retail for two dollars, but they are not worth much. A good umbrella, with an inexpensive handle, may be bought for five dollars. From that price they run up to the thousands, depending entirely upon the handles."

"Did you ever see an umbrella worth thousands of dollars?"

"Yes; but I am sorry to say there was some one else in the room at the moment," responded the merchant with a sigh of regret. "It belonged to the Empress Eugenie, and was sold to an umbrella manufacturer in Paris, who had originally made it for her, and exhibited it as his chef d'œuvre."

"What made it so expensive?"

"The stick was beautifully inlaid with gold and the handle was of the same metal and fairly blazed with jewels. It cost 50,000 francs and the stones were worth at least 45,000."

"Did she ever carry it?"

"I believe she did use it once. It was small and she carried it in an open carriage as a sun shade. It was a marvelous piece of work.

"There is not much change in the styles?"

"In nothing except handles. They are continually changing. The popular style this year is capped with silver and gold knobs. Buckhorn handles are also very popular. Natural wood handles with the bark on are also neat and popular. The present style is as different from the old-fashioned ivory-handled umbrella as you can imagine. We still keep up one old fashion though, and that is the cotton umbrella with rattan ribs. They are sold to the most remote of the New England farmers. That style, I have heard, was originated by Noah during the flood, but I am not certain, as the inventor neglected to take out a patent. Of one thing I am sure, though, and that is, that when the next flood comes those same old umbrellas will be among the last things visible on the face of the earth."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

DON'T FRET OR WORRY.

Words of Advice for Exhausted and Nervous Housekeepers.

"Every one of these doors creaks so horribly that it almost sets me wild," exclaimed a tired housekeeper, who was trying to rest a little after the labors of a wearisome day. Now this was not the first, perhaps it was the twentieth time she had made the same, or a similar remark about the creaking of the doors, when with the aid of a bottle of oil and a feather she might have made them swing noiselessly and saved herself all the annoyance she had suffered.

It is a great deal easier to make suggestions than to follow them; but it seems to me that the "golden rule" for housekeepers might be this: "If any thing goes wrong for which there is a remedy, apply it as soon as possible; if there is absolutely no remedy do not fret, but make the best of it."

I believe that often it is not the work that makes us feel so thoroughly weary at the end of the week as worrying over it. I remember of fretting a good deal over some Thanksgiving pies, complaining that I always spoiled them by putting in too much of one thing or another, when my sister quietly remarked that perhaps I put too much anxiety into them. I saw the point, and resolved henceforth to do the best I could with my cooking, and to worry less over results. Of course I had afterwards better success, and far more peace of mind.

There are days in the experience of every housekeeper when every thing seems determined to go wrong, and a perfect avalanche of little troubles and perplexities seem to overwhelm one. Then, indeed, is she that ruleth her spirit "better than he that taketh a city."

But how often at the close of such a day have we looked back and seen that all came right at last in spite of our forebodings, and we have wished so much that we could have been self-controlled and sweet-tempered through it all.

It is so natural to magnify little troubles instead of remembering that they are not worth fretting about. If at breakfast the biscuits are a little too yellow, and the steak a trifle overdone, in almost every case no one will be troubled about it if you are not.

If the coffee is not just exactly right, no one will notice it unless you call attention to it by some disparaging remark. Especially should we guard against a habit of fretting because of the discomfort it causes those about us, and the bad influence it has upon them. If the housekeeper frets the children do the same, and the servants also, for nothing is more contagious, and we have any thing but a happy household. However badly things may go, nothing is gained by worrying over them, and if we can not be always bright and cheerful, we can at least endure patiently till the storm passes over and the sunshine returns, as it surely will in due time.—Christian at Work.

CRUEL PUNISHMENT.

An Account of the Galley Slaves of the Middle Ages and Later Times.

The galley, a long, low, narrow vessel of war, having sails, but chiefly propelled by rows of oars on each side, was used as a part of the fleet of all maritime nations from the earliest historic times down to near the close of the eighteenth century. The vessel drew but little water and was especially convenient for coast service; but the advancement in the art of navigation, and especially the improvements in gunnery, at last put an end to this class of ships, which, it was said, "had dominated the maritime world for over three thousand years." In the most ancient times to row in the galleys was considered honorable; but as the work was very laborious and it was difficult to procure voluntary recruits for it, the ancient nations used to put their prisoners of war to this service. Then it became customary to condemn criminals to the work. In the middle ages the galley rowers were convicts and infidel prisoners, who were chained to the benches. The Turks retaliated, and put captured Christians to the same labor. In France, Spain and the Italian republics during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the galleys were used as the means of punishment for all criminals; even those who had committed capital crimes were thus utilized. Heretics were particularly sought out for this purpose, and in France vagrants, beggars, poachers, etc., were employed, and, as even all these did not suffice to man the benches, slaves were bought from the Turks, negroes were brought from Guinea, and Indians were kidnaped in the New World. Galley slaves were subjected to the greatest indignities and cruelties. Their heads and faces were shaved, they were always chained to their benches, and they rowed entirely naked, being only allowed to wear clothing when in port. They were seldom released, even when their time of service was accomplished. Henry IV. ordered the captains of all galleys to retain prisoners for six years, even although condemned for a shorter time, and under Louis XIV. galley slaves sentenced for only two or three years were often retained for fifteen years and more. Criminals preferred mutilation and even death to labor in the galleys. The galleys in France were abolished in 1748. They had been gradually going out of use in that and other countries for some years.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

PLEASURES OF THE CHASE.

Remarks by Bill Nye on the Modern Fox Hunt.

THE joyous season for fox hunting is again upon us, and with the gentle fall of the autumn leaf and the sough of the scented breezes about the gnarled and naked limbs of the wailing trees, the huntsman comes with his hark and his halloo and hurrah boys, the swift rush of the chase, the thrilling scamper 'cross country, the mad dash through the Long Islander's pumpkin patch—also the mad dash, dash, dash of the farmer, the low moan of the disabled and frozen toed hen as the whooping horsemen run her down; the wild shriek of the children, the low melancholy wail of the frightened shoat as he flees away to his strawpile, the quick yet muffled plunk of the frozen tomato and the dull scrunch of the seed cucumber.

All—all indicate that our great national autumn sport, the sport which has for years characterized us as a nation and been imitated to some extent in England and our other colonies, is here.

The huntsman now takes the flannels off his fox, rubs his stiffened limbs with gargling oil, ties a bunch of firecrackers to his tail and runs him around the barn a few times to see if he is in good order.

The foxhound is a cross of the bloodhound, the greyhound, the bulldog and the chump. When you step on his tail he is said to be in full cry. The foxhound obtains from his ancestors on the bloodhound side of the house his keen scent, which enables him while in full cry 'cross country to pause and hunt for chipmunks. He also obtains from the bloodhound branch of his family a wild yearning to star in an "Uncle Tom" company, and watch Little Eva meander up the flume at $2 per week. From the greyhound he gets his most miraculous speed, which enables him to attain a rate of velocity so great that he is unable to pause during the excitement of the chase, frequently running so far during the day that it takes him a week to get back, when, of course, all interest has died out. From the bulldog the foxhound obtains his great tenacity of purpose, his deep seated convictions, his quick perceptions, his love of home and his clinging nature. From the chump the foxhound gets his high intellectuality and that mental power which enables him to distinguish almost at a glance the salient points of difference between a 2-year-old steer and a $2 bill.

The foxhound is about two feet in height, and 120 of them would be considered an ample number for a quiet little fox hunt. Some hunters think this number inadequate, but unless the fox be unusually skittish and crawl under the barn 120 foxhounds ought to be enough. The trouble generally is that hunters make too much noise, thus scaring the fox so that he tries to get away from them. This necessitates hard riding and great activity on the part of the whippersin. Frightening a fox almost always results in sending him out of the road and compelling horsemen to stop in order to take down a panel of fence every little while that they may follow the animal, and before you can get the fence put up again the owner is on the ground, and after you have made change with him and mounted again the fox may be nine miles away. Try by all means to keep your fox in the road!

NYE AND HIS FOXHOUND.

It makes a great difference what kind of a fox you use, however. I once had a fox on my Pumpkin butte estates that lasted me three years, and I never knew him to shy or turn out of the road for anything but a loaded team. He was the best fox for hunting purposes that I ever had. Every spring I would sprinkle him with Scotch snuff and put him away in the bureau till fall. He would then come out bright and chipper. He was always ready to enter into the chase with all the chic and embonpoint of a regular Kenasha, and nothing pleased him better than to be about eight miles in advance of my thoroughbred pack in full cry scampering across the country, while stretching back a few miles behind the dogs followed a pale young man and his financeer, each riding a horse that had sat down too hard on its tail at some time and driven it into his system about six joints.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the costume worn while fox hunting, and in fact that is, after all, the life and soul of the chase. For ladies nothing looks better than a close fitting jacket, sewed together with thread of the same shade, and a skirt. Neat fitting cavalry boots and a plug hat complete the costume. Then, with a hue in one hand and a cry in the other, she is prepared to mount. Lead the horse up to a stone wall or a freight car and spring lightly into the saddle with a glad cry. A freight car is the best thing from which to mount a horse, but it is too unwieldy and frequently delays the chase. For this reason, too, much luggage should not be carried on a fox hunt. Some gentlemen carry a change of canes neatly concealed in a shawl strap, but even this may be dispensed with.

For gentlemen a dark, four button cutaway coat, with neat, loose fitting white panties, will generally scare a fox into convulsions, so that he may be easily killed with a club. A short waisted plug hat may be worn also, in order to distinguish the hunter from the whipperin, who wears a baseball cap.

Fox hunting combines the danger and the wild, tumultuous joy of the skating rink, the toboggan slide, the mush and milk sociable and the straw ride.

With a good horse, an air cushion, a reliable earth stopper and an aniseseed bag, a man must indeed be thoroughly blase who cannot enjoy a scamper across country, over the Pennsylvania wold, the New Jersey mere, the Connecticut moor, the Indiana glade, the Missouri brake, the Michigan mead, the American tarn, the fen, the gulch, the buffalo wallow, the cranberry marsh, the glen, the draw, the canyon, the ravine, the forks, the bottom or the settlement.

For the young American nobleman whose ducal father made his money by inventing a fluent pill, or who gained his great wealth by relieving humanity by means of a lining pad, a liver pad, a kidney pad or a foot pad, fox hunting is first rate. BILL NYE.

P. S.—The above is written in the utmost good humor, and I hope that nothing I may have said can possibly cause any fox hunter who may read it to take a fence. B. N.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—During the recent eclipse of the sun the Russian Nihilists scattered their pamphlets all over Russia.

—The fashionable Swiss hotels now have American bars, presided over by handsome Swiss girls in native dress. This is said to account for the withdrawal of English patronage.

—Frenchwomen have of late begun to manifest an extraordinary taste for rare books, curious editions, and beautiful old bindings. Hitherto the typical Parisienne read less than the women of any other civilized nation, and the only wonder is they are so well informed as they are in most matters.

—A French journal prints the number of works of art exhibited at the saloons since 1872. Of a total of 2,069 that year, 1,500 were pictures proper. The total to date is 74,408, including 54,146 pictures proper. The other 20,000 were not pictures improper, as might be supposed, but sculptures and medals.—Philadelphia Press.

—The English co-operatives have a bank whose transactions amount to $80,000,000 a year. They have 1,400 ores and do a business of $150,000,000 a year. Their 900,000 members receive an annual profit of $15,000,000. Their profits during the past twenty-four years have been $150,000,000.—Public Opinion.

—The Prussian Minister of Public Instruction has vetoed a bill providing for the lighting of the Royal museums of Berlin by electricity for the reason that the public has ample facilities for visiting the reading-rooms in daytime. Only the Museum of Art Industry, which already possesses the necessary appliances, will be lighted by electricity and be accessible to the public in the evening hours.

—The Japanese Prof. Nishigava is at present studying the German art of beer brewing at its source in Munich, where he spent as much time as eight days in one brewery. He was sent thither by the Japanese Government, which is desirous of checking the growing consumption of brandy, and contemplates the introduction of German and English beer free of duty, while putting a high tax on stronger alcoholic liquors.

—A French newspaper reports that in Sabiaco, near Rome, all the inhabitants are under the influence of epilepsy or hypnotism. The curate spends his time in exercising the evil spirits, and Cardinal Bianchi has sent the Pope's special benediction—all without avail. A troop of soldiers who were sent to the village have shown symptoms of giving way to the disease, and there is supposed to be something in the air affecting the nerves.

—Next to gold, statistics show that kawri gum is the most valuable product of mining industry in New Zealand. This gum, which is largely used in the manufacture of fine varnishes, occurs in the ground formerly occupied by kawri forests, and is also found as a deposit at the foot of the growing kawri tree. In the North Island about six thousand tons are obtained annually, and the value of the aggregate yield up to the present time has been $17,500,000.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Comformably to the laws of advance and retreat of glaciers, it is said those in the valley of Chamounix, Switzerland, are now beginning to advance. The lower extremity of the Glacier des Bossons is "not more than three thousand feet above the level of the sea," and is going still lower. During the past three years this lower extremity "has advanced at the rate of fifty yards a year." It is said that "a grotto cut out of the ice in May, 1846, a quarter of a mile from the extremity, has moved down more than sixty yards."

—The gold which is now being dug out of the ancient cemeteries (huacas) at Hilandia, Central America, and other places near Pereira, has led more than one thousand workmen to flock to that spot, and a town has sprung up there within the last four years which now contains more than fifty thousand inhabitants. Public attention is being turned to those regions, as the ancient burial places and deposits of the wealthy Cacique Caracal have not yet been discovered, and it is believed that his treasures were immensely more valuable than any which have yet been unearthed.

—It seems anomalous, says an English paper, that corn should be as cheap in a part of Turkey as near to the great European markets as Erzeroum is, as in the most remote districts of the far West of America or Manitoba, while live stock and dairy produce sell at low prices. The means of communication are so bad in Erzeroum, however, that wheat was selling there last autumn, according to Acting Consul Devey, at 11 shillings a quarter, barley at a little over 5 shillings, sheep at 7 shillings and 6 pence to 9 shillings each, butter at 5½ pence per pound and cheese at 1 penny. When, if ever, the proposed railway from Constantinople to Diarbekir is completed, the farmers of the vilayet will, no doubt, get better prices.

Lack of Punctuality.

Lack of punctuality in keeping all one's engagements is immoral, because it is selfish. We are too lazy and intent on pleasing ourselves to care for the convenience of others. It is immoral, because to be tardy in keeping a social or business appointment is an insult to the person whose rights are thus ignored. It is more than immoral, it is ill-bred. It shows a contempt for those courtesies that make social life possible. This is especially the case when lack of punctuality is shown in public gatherings.—N. Y. Examiner.

MONGOLIAN TARTARS.

Rev. Father Gundy's Recital of Ten Years' Labor with Them.

A strangely-attired Belgian priest arrived on a recent steamer from China. He is Rev. Father A. Gundy, president of the Roman Catholic missions in Mongolia, where he has been arduously laboring for ten years past. He is a man of about forty years of age, with a full flowing beard and a rich silken gown of an oriental design. Other marks of dress betoken him a resident of a land most remote from ours. A reporter sought an interview with him. Said he:

"My life work has been with the Tartars who inhabit Mongolia, and the scenes of my work have been close by the great wall of China. The commercial emporium of Mongolia is Kalgan, a town of 40,000 inhabitants. It is here that the Russians come to buy chamois skins and tea, which the Chinese residents of Mongolia raise in immense quantities. The Mongolians themselves despise tilling the ground, and as the land belongs to the different tribes, their chiefs have been selling it off to the Chinese.

"The Mongolians are descendants of the old Tartars, and raise tens of thousands of cattle and horses. Beyond this they do nothing except hunt. They are a wild, ungovernable race, living in tents. They are magnificent horsemen, something like your wild Indians. Their religion is Tartaric Buddhism. One of their sacred temples is at Kunbun. In Thibet the great temple of U Lassa is constructed after the manner of an Indian Buddhist temple. Only one or two Europeans have ever been admitted within its sacred precincts. They think the mere admission of a foreigner within its portals would forever defile it.

"The Russians who tried to invade this country three years ago have relinquished their efforts. They got two consulates established on the Mongolian coast, and they have had to give way. They now have open ports as far as Peking, but no further. All the talk you hear of invasions from the Russians now goes for nothing. Mongolia is under the domain of China.

"The country is largely a desert, although with water it is exceedingly productive. There are very rich mines of copper and silver as well as magnificent beds of coal. Mongolia is colder than China, and consequently the inhabitants, although dressing somewhat like the Chinese, put on more clothes. They are unlike the Chinese entirely otherwise, being more aggressive and warlike. They are not a tractable race by any means.

"Hunting the chamois is great sport with the Mongolians. They are skilled horsemen and dead shots with their weapons, a variety of which they use. They are also skillful with the dart.

"In the ten years that I have been there we have succeeded in converting about twenty-five thousand of these wild Tartars. Though wild they are open to civilizing and humanizing influences; but there are so many of them, and their country is so large, that it takes a long while to make much effect upon them as a mass."

DANGERS OF BENZINE.

Why the Utmost Care Should Be Exercised in Handling It.

Some weeks ago in a Philadelphia music printing establishment, while a boy was engaged in cleaning a press with benzine, rubbing it with a rag, the fluid blazed up; the lad's clothing caught fire, and he was so severely burned that his recovery was stated to be doubtful. It has been popularly supposed that flame, or at least a temperature equal to the white or red heat of iron, was necessary to ignite benzine, but this is a mistake. It is a fact little known that hard friction can develop sufficient heat to inflame benzine vapor, especially if the surface rubbed be varnished with shellac. We are informed by a competent and truthful mechanical engineer that a few years ago (while trying with benzine in a closed tin vessel to construct a thermostat to ignite a powder giving out sulphurous gas in case of fire outbreak), he found that the vapor was leaking from a minute crack in a seam. He requested a tinman to solder the leak, supposing that a copper soldering tool at dark heat would nor be dangerous. To his surprise and that of the workman, the vapor ignited, with a blue flame, as soon as the tool approached near the crack, and a flame played around the tool like a will-o'-the-wisp. This gentleman several times experimented afterward and found that at a dark heat the tool did not inflame the vapor when at a distance of twelve inches from the crack, but did always set fire to it if within six to four inches. No matter how small the crevice, there always came out enough vapor to ignite at this low degree of temperature. In these trials, as in the first instance, the tin-man's furnace was kept at a considerable distance. We mentioned a few months since a case in which this vapor was ignited by electricity generated in rubbing a flannel garment, which was being cleaned in a tub of the fluid. This last occurrence once more emphasizes the need of the utmost caution in the handling of benzine in the scouring and furniture establishments and printing offices, in which it is so generally and extensively made use of.—Fire and Water.

TWO KINDS OF CAPITAL.

The Comparative Value of Money and of Knowledge and Skill.

In 1848 two young man graduated from an interior college. When they were about to leave for home the president shook them heartily by the hand and wished them success in life.

"Ah, doctor," said one, "it has come to Jim already. He has a fortune of fifty thousand dollars. But I have no capital to begin life with."

Jim's fortune was a large one for those days. He had invested it and for a few years lived on the interest of it. The investment proved a bad one, and he lost every thing. He had neither trade, profession nor business habits. Hence he remained for the rest of his life a poor man. His comrade, knowing that success depended on his own efforts, studied a profession which, without a dollar of capital, brought him a competency, and at last wealth.

Young men are apt to estimate money alone as capital. That one of their number who has inherited money is, they think, better equipped for the struggle of life than any other. They should look into the comparative commercial value of money and of knowledge and skill, before they are quite so sure of that. Figures, in this case, tell no lie. Of late years, money in this country has decreased in value as a money-getter, while human ability has increased. That is, the income from money invested at interest has diminished while the compensation for service rendered has become larger.

For example, a capable domestic servant in our cities may annually lay by a sum equal to the income upon three thousand dollars in Government bonds; and an industrious mechanic, in steady employment, earns a sum equal to the interest of twenty thousand dollars at four per cent. A teamster in Montana, or a cow-boy in Colorado, finds that his strength and skill are worth to him, in money each year, as much as would be forty thousand dollars invested in the same lands, even if he could buy them at par.

The lawyer or physician in a country town who earns his two thousand dollars annually, if suddenly debarred from practice would require sixty-six thousand dollars in bonds to yield him the same income; and the editor-in-chief of a great city daily has a power in his brain worth to him, in hard cash, the capital of half a million.

Such estimates, of course, vary with place and time, but they will serve our purpose if they convince the boys and girls who read them that they have in their brains and hands, while the power of brains and hands remains, actual, money-yielding capital, more permanent and secure, and far more satisfying, than any gold bearing bonds.—Youth's Companion.

PET ECONOMIES.

Spendthrifts Who Were Penny Wise and Pound Foolish.

We don't all realize it, but each one among us has got a pet economy. Be he ever so careless or extravagant in other respects, he still clings to that.

A man who was a great gambler, and thought little of losing £500 or £600 at a sitting, would always be scrupulously careful, from economical reasons, to turn down his lamp before making his way to the tables. He said that, having sometimes forgotten it and passed along a couple of streets, he would feel compelled to turn back and attend to the unfulfilled duty, even though he knew his friends were waiting for him and his hour past. Did he resist the impulse? The recollection of the wasted light would so annoy him that his play for the evening would be entirely spoiled.

Another, who squandered thousands in the year on his special brands of champagne, his forced pines, his strawberries midst the snows of January, his lamb and green peas on Caristmas Day, had a hatred of seeing salt wasted. He would dole out a limited number of grains into his plate, adding minute fragments from time to time to flavor his last mouthful of mayonnaise, and looked daggers upon those among his guests who had left a snowy hillock on the edge of their plates almost untouched.

It is a common thing for a man who finds at the end of the year that he has exceeded his income by several hundreds to stop a magazine in his household or order a penny paper in the place of his former, and with that rest content, having a vague feeling that he has effected economies, and all will now be well.

Another man, generous by nature, after deciding it would be impossible to dispense with the services of his second footman, tries to strike the balance even by carrying his own bag across the railway platform to avoid the necessity of superfluous tips, or sneaks shame-faced round the corner of a more distant street that he may escape a touch of the hat from his pet crossing-sweeper who mutely asks for a copper.

Others will prefer to risk setting the house on fire to striking a fresh match on the second story in place of carrying up that with long quivering red end which has served to light the gas below.—London Times.

—One of the probable effects of rapid transit in Brooklyn will be the lowering in value of residence property in New York City. Real estate owners are closely watching events. Those in Gotham are apprehensive of a decrease in their holdings, and those in Brooklyn are expecting a boom in all the unimproved lots of the City of Churches. Another result that is likely to come from Brooklyn's elevated roads is an unusual development toward the ocean.

A Popular Literary Work.

The third volume of ALDEN'S "Cyclopedia of Universal Literature," now ready (cloth binding 50 cents, half Morocco 75 cents), contains 496 pages, and represents eighty-six of the most famous authors of the world, of all nations and languages, including among others: Bossuet, Boswell, Bronte, Brougham, Browning, Bryant, Buffon Buckle, Burke, Burns, Burroughs, closing with Byron. There are nearly three hundred choice literary selections representing these authors a truly wonderful amount of entertaining literature for a little money. The following are representative opinions of this work by competent literary critics:

"The third volume strengthens the good opinion formed by its predecessors. The articles, though brief, are remarkably comprehensive, presenting in a few pithy paragraphs the very facts that the reader most wishes to know, while the extracts from the writings of the authors described are selected with discriminating taste. We are much pleased with the work. It bids fair to be, when completed, the best cyclopedia of literature in the language."—The Interior, Chicago.

Mr. ALDEN'S idea and enterprise in the execution of it should be encouraged generously. He places within the reach of all who read, a good knowledge of the world's literature, and of those who have made it, and helps them to form a good literary taste, and to desire literary culture. To know what is for him to read, is the first difficulty of the self-instructor. This cyclopedia tells him, with illustrative quotations. To all it is a complete and reliable guide to the best reading."—Commercial Advertiser, Detroit, Mich.

"The articles are remarkably comprehensive; presenting in a few pithy paragraphs the reader most wishes to know, while the extracts from the authors described are selected with discriminating taste. We are much pleased with the work."—Standard of the Cross, Cleveland, Ohio.

The work is designed to be completed in 15 volumes. The publisher offers a sample volume, post-paid, for the nominal price of 35 cents, on condition that within three days after receipt you will either remit the remainder of the price or return the book, in which case your money will be refunded,—half Morocco binding 50 cents, on the same conditions. Descriptive catalogue of the publisher's very large list of standard books, sent free. JOHN B. ALDEN, publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Absurdity.

Many letters come from the east, asking for single copies of this paper, the writers saying that they want to know all about the country. If the writers of such letters would only look over their own local papers, and then consider how little a total stranger could learn from one issue of any of those papers of the soil, climate, productions, cost of land, market price of farm products, distance from railroad, schools, and churches; population of towns, character of people, depth of wells and quality of water; greatest heat in summer and greatest cold in winter; prevalence of rheumatism, consumption, ague, pneumonia, diptheria, neuralgia, catarrh and other diseases; chances for finding employment and wages paid for all kinds of labor, and very many other things that the writers of these letters want to learn; we say if they would look over their own local papers they would not fall into the absurdity of expecting to get any just conception of California from one copy of any, or even of all the papers published in the State. It is only by a careful reading of the papers published in the course of a whole year that a stranger to the State can get a fair knowledge of the character and resources of the State.

Railroad Extens on Certain

It would appear that the extension of the C. & C. road is no longer a bare possibility, but a certainty. Nor is the extension to be merely to Los Angeles; it appears to be certain that connection will be made with the harbor of San Diego. The New York Commercial Bulletin says: "One of the incorporators of the San Diego and Elsinore Company is Governor Stevenson of Nevada, who is part owner of the Carson and Colorado, and another is ex-Governor Merrill of Iowa. Richard Gird of Pomona, Cal., and W. and Thomas Head of Riverside, Cal., are also incorporators. These names leave no doubt of the concern's financial ability to do what it undertakes. To carry out the plan the construction of a little over two hundred miles of road would be necessary, besides an extension of the Carson and Colorado line from its present terminus at Keeler to Mojave. D. O. Mills of this city is the largest individual owner of the Carson and Colorado. He states that he has not abandoned the project of extending to Mojave and that before many months he will push the new line to completion. He claims, however, to have made no arrangements with the San Diego and Elsinore or the Union Pacific party. It is certain, however, that the Carson and Colorado will be extended, and the character of the men behind the San Diego line leads to the impression that they will push their enterprise in the event the Union Pacific capital will not be employed."

When Richard Cobden was urging his free trade doctrines in England, more than forty years ago, the English farmers declared free trade would ruin their business. Cobden carried his point by the enactment of a law in 1846, and from that day till the present the condition of the English farmers has steadily grown worse. When great interests are at stake, involving the welfare of multitudes of people, there appears to be an instinctive apprehension of results stronger even than reason, and quite as accurate in presaging what will follow from certain courses of action.

ORDINANCE NO. 19.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, do ordain as follows:

All persons doing business within the county of Inyo shall obtain licenses from the Tax Collector of said County as follows:

SEC. 1. Auctioneers are divided into two classes and must obtain licenses from the Tax Collector as follows:

First Class. Those whose average monthly sales amount to $2,500 and upward constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those whose average monthly sales are less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 2. Persons engaged in banking, loaning money at interest, or in buying or selling notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of private persons, or in buying or selling State County or City stocks, or other evidences of State, County or City indebtedness, or stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness of incorporated companies, or in buying or selling gold dust, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver coin, are divided into two classes and must pay licenses as follows:

First Class. Those doing business in the aggregate to the amount of $10,000 per quarter, or over, constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those doing business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter, constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $5 per and for each bowling alley, $15 per quarter for each alley; but no license must be granted for a term of less than three months.

SEC. 4. For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a circus or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $5. And for each show for pay of any figures, jugglers necromancers, ring shows, wire or rope dancing, and sleight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this Section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable entertainments, by any amateur dramatic association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 7. Every person who sells spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax-Collector and make the following payment:

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,000 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $30 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter.

SEC. 8. Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, (except Agricultural or Viticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale under license) and all persons who keep horses or carriages for hire (except such as are used in the transportation of goods) must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, license, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector; such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates.

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 per month or more constitute the first class and must pay a license of $20 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $1,250 and less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $1,250 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $8 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon measure.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines.

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $5 per month; and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares, or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $15 per month.

SEC. 11. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or bull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for hire must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax-Collector and pay therefor as follows.

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $25.

Second. At $25 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $60.

Third. At $50 and less than $75 constitute the third and require a license of $40.

Fourth. At $35 and less than $50 constitute the fourth class and require a license of $25.

Fifth. At $16 and less than $35 constitute the fifth class and require a license of $15.

Sixth. At less than $15 constitute the sixth class and require a license of $10.

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A license for propagation obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 12. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said fine be paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine be satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 13. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3769 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 15. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks.

The above ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county at a regular meeting of said Board October 4, 1887, by the following vote:

Ayes: Harger, Robinson and Eldred.
Noes: None.
Attest: P. H. MACK, Clerk. J. D. HARGER, Chairman.

For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.
This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.
The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.
No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.
Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.
If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack.
A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.
I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.
JOHN C. EVANS, SHOTWELL, Mo., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Hayser and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 160 acres in cultivation. If you will put up any instrument that will take as much labor off of men as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the feathers from under their wife and babies to pay for it."
JOHN R. DUDGE, JR., jeweler, NORMAL, Ill., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. Ist. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just at good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If our man shirt, you can not buy one for love."
I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capable agents big money. Write for particulars.

At the beginning of the week Pat Key got return from a shipment of ore recently made from the White Hill; the ore netted over $118 per ton. C. Walter and D. Whittaker made a shipment at the same time from another mine in the same locality and their ore netted over $107 per ton.

Mr. Sam Allen, of Bridgeport, has purchased some lots in the Academy addition at Bishop Creek. The whole addition is very desirable property and the lots are steadily increasing in value.

Another land contest was had at the Land Office this week. Ben. T. Williams contested a desert land location made by Mrs. Kate Lane near Bishop Creek. The case occupied two days in hearing.

A PRIZE.—Every ticket to the Grand Concert will be numbered and will entitle the holdto a chance in the drawing for an elegant prize.

Lunch will be served at the Independence Hotel every evening up till midnight. The best of oysters, shrimps, sardines, sausage, Switzer cheese, pigs feet, bread, crackers and all kinds of sandwiches, pretzels etc., washed down with Fredericksburg beer. Everybody welcome.

Arrangements for the concert are now under good headway and a decided success is assured. A full programe will be published next week. The management aims to make the ball the enjoyable affair of the season. Tickets can be secured at any of the stores and Hotel's in town. The price of tickets is very low, the aim being to secure as large an attendance as possible.

During the past three years the Maxim mill and mines at Chrysopolis have been more or less subject to legal proceedings. Mr A. Davidson, who represents the parties in New York who are interested in the property, is now at Independence engaged in putting the affairs of the concern in satisfactory shape. Mr. Davidson was Sheriff of New York a few years ago; he was accompanied across the continent by Mrs. Davidson.

The citizens of Fresno are having a very large and handsome wagon built. The wagon will be fitted up with glass show cases, and these will contain the varied products of the soil. A fine team of horses will be hitched to the wagon and driven to Los Angeles; there it will be taken through the streets of the city and its contents exhibited. A competent man will accompany the exhibition, who will lecture on the resources of Fresno county and will give full information to all who may contemplate settling there or investing money in property. Clearly there is somebody in Fresno who knows the value of advertising and how to do it.

In Tulare county it is proposed to form an irrigation district. The Delta gives an account of the proceedings before the Board of Supervisors last week, when the petition for ordering an election on the formation of a district was considered. There is much opposition to the scheme, and evidently a good deal of bitter feeling is growing up among the people in the proposed district. Many oppose the scheme on the ground that they do not need more water and object to being taxed for the benefit of those who do; others oppose it on the ground that the proposed canal would be an injury to their lands. The Supervisors are taking time to consider the matter.

Firemans Ball

On Monday evening a Firemen's ball will be given at Lone Pine. The Committee has made every effort to make the occasion a complete success. Excellent music has been secured and a good floor provided. Supper will be given at the Whitney House. It is certainly due Lone Pine to say that strangers are always treated with every courtesy, and no pains spared to secure the pleasure of visitors. The ball is certain to be an enjoyable one in every particular. Independence should by all means be well represented.

Returned A Wiser Man.

Three months ago Rrooks McLean, of Luning, Nevada, left home to make a tour through southern California. He traveled with two horses, leading one and riding the other alternately. He crossed the mountains by way of Mammoth, in Mono county and from Sonora on the other side traveled south through Tuolumne, Fresno, Tulare, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. Last Sunday Mr. McLean reached Independence on his way home, and continued his journey next day. The entire trip will cover something over a thousand miles. The end Mr. McLean had in view was to find a place where he could buy a peice of land in a desirable location for a home. He carefully examined every locality where he visited, and made the following report of his experience: Land of fair good quality, with some water and not too far distant from town or railroad, costs from three to five hundred dollars per acre. This does not include buildings or other improvements. The buyer of such land would have to improve it; plant young trees and wait several years before getting any return from fruit trees of any kind. While waiting for the trees to begin bearing no kind of farming will pay interest on the capital invested on such land and enable the buyer to support himself and family. But with the prices named people are flocking into the whole southern country, and every new comer wants to get land. So great is the inrush of people and so eager the desire to get land, that regions till very recently the most forbidding are being settled up. The strangest thing in this connection is, that the land so recently regarded as worthless, proves to be well suited to the growth of friut trees and vines. While traveling along on the edge of the Mojave desert, in a distance of seven miles Mr. McLean met eight families traveling out into the desert to settle. He says it is wonderful how rapidly that great desert is being settled up and improved. The apparently utterly worthless soil is plowed, alfalfa and other seeds are sown and germinate and grow. Many families are now settled upon the desert who have to haul water many miles for domestic use and for their animals to drink. The climate is so pleasant that any slight shelter serves for a dwelling. Mr. McLean is very confident that from Mojave to Owens Lake, the whole distance of about one hundred and twenty miles will be thickly settled with people within two years. He says that along that valley all the way he saw land uninhabited that is far superior in quality and offers much better advantages to settlers than other regions he visited where settlers are paying high prices for land. Mr. McLean is a young man and since boyhood has lived east of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Like many others, he thought the eastern part of California and of Nevada was good for little else than mining and pasture land. The knoweledge gained on this trip has taught him how greatly he was mistaken. In Esmeralda and Nye counties Nevada, there are valleys containing thousands of acres of as good land as any he saw on his trip, and where there is not an inhabitant. He is amazed at the blindness of himself and others who had failed to see the advantages these valleys offer to settlers. His own words were: "When I saw the lands speople are so eager to get in the places where I have been, I was actually frightened lest all the best land in my own neighborhood should be gobbled up before I could get back home to secure some of it, and now I'm going after it just as fast as I can get there." Mr. McLean says if Owens valley were connected by rail with Los Angeles, there would be such a rush of people here and land would so rapidly increase in value that the most sanguine cannot correctly estimate the change one year would effect. But with or without rail communication, the numbers of people flocking into the southern part of California in search of homes is so great that he believes many of them will reach here during the coming season.

Change of Time.

Another change of time has been made on the C. P. railroad. By the new arrangement the morning overland will leave San Francisco at 7 o'clock and the afternoon at 5 o'clock. The west bound trains will leave Reno at 6:45 p. m. and 10 p. m. There will be no change in the time of arrival at Reno from San Francisco. Such arrangements have been made on the V. & T. and C. & C. roads as will enable passengers from the south to catch trains at Reno without loss of time. The new time-tables will doubtless be published in a few days. Mr. Yerington is endeavoring to make arrangements for passengers to go direct through from Owens Valley without loss of time at Belleville; this would be a great public convenience.

Christmas Tree.

Parents and friends of children who intend to have gifts put upon the Christmas tree at the M. E. church are earnestly requested to take the articles or packages to the church at an early an hour as possible this [Saturday] morning. The name of the person for whom each gift is intended should be plainly written upon the package or article so that it it may be sure to reach the person for whom it is intended. Distribution will begin at 7 o'clock in the evening. A concert will be given by the pupils and scholars of the Sunday School. No charge for admission and no collection taken. Everybody invited to attend and be happy and see the children happy.

Turkeys.

On Christmas day Henry Levy will offer several fine turkeys to be shot for. In the evening there will be raffling for turkeys at the Independence Hotel. During the day and evening roast turkey and cranberry sauce will be served to all comers at the Independence hotel, together with other good things to match.

WHICH DO YOU BELIEVE?

Both Sides of an Absorbing Controversy Clearly Stated.

According to "Scribner's Statistical Atlas of the Census of 1880," there was not a single death from kidney disease in the entire United States from 1870 to 1880!

But can this be possible? If we are to believe the articles of one of our best advertisers, kidney disease, and diseases arising from kidney derangements, is actually responsible for the majority of deaths!

The suspicion is nourished by them, and we confess with good reason, that because the medical profession is not able to cure extreme kidney disorders, the profession officially disguises from the public the fact of their prevalence; meanwhile its journals are filled with regrets at this prevalence and the impotency of the profession to treat it successfully!

Why is the public misled?

These advertisers shrewdly say it is because the profession, if it concedes what they claim that kidney disease is universal, fears that the people will desert the powerless doctors and use the advertised preparation!

We do not know but they are right! But what should the people do?

The advertisers claim to have cured hundreds of thousands of cases of Bright's disease and all lesser forms of kidney, liver and blood derangements. They offer $5,000 for proof that their statements of cures, in every quarter of the globe, are not true, so far as they know. These statements are from prominent men and women all over the world, and the closest scrutiny is invited!

If a physician cures a man and he knows it and says it, people believe him. If Warner's safe cure cures a man and he knows it and says it over his own signature, it is just as conclusive evidence in the latter case as in the former.

A few years ago, after having broken down prejudice in England, Canada, the United States, Australia, India and China, the owners of this great remedy applied for the privilege of its manufacture and sale in Germany. The laws of that great country are very stringent, and nothing can be manufactured or sold until it wins permission from the government, and this will not be granted until the government is satisfied that the best interests of the public and its individuals will be served by such a preparation.

The medicine was chemically and microscopically analyzed (as accurately as possible), the formulæ were examined (with perhaps a secret prejudice against them), by the government chemists, searching inquiry was everywhere made at home and abroad to verify its past record and reputation. Finally, it was triumphant even under the most critical examination, and full permission was given to make and sell Warner's safe cure in the Fatherland—the only life privilege of the kind ever granted to any American proprietary preparation.

Unprejudiced people will say that this favorable consideration of the merits of Warner's safe cure by the German government was a very significant as well as a very distinguished compliment to its merits, and so it is.

The evidence is all in favor of these intelligent advertisers, who have certainly won universal public approval, because of their straightforward course in proclaiming the merits of their remedies.

A Writer for the Press.

Lucky Dakotians.

It will be remembered that Eugene Speck, Maillard Bird, Henry Lewin and William Duncan together drew the second capital prize in The Louisiana State Lottery on ticket 61,503, in the drawing on the 13th ult. An Argus-Leader reporter to-day called on Mr. Speck, who is a barber here, to see if he had secured his money and to find out how he was going to use it. Mr. Speck said: "Yes, we got a notification the other day to the effect that the money was at the Sioux Falls National Bank. We went there and received $5,000 in cash for the money we put in. That gave us $1,250 apiece. Yesterday I bought me a house in Western Sioux Falls for $850. That is something I have always wanted and now that I have got one I will keep it. I am going to start for my old home in Switzerland next week, taking along my family. Two others of the boys are going over to Scotland, besides putting their money into some excellent Sioux Falls real estate. We are willing to testify that the management of The Louisiana State Lottery is done entirely on the square and will heartily recommend it to any who want to risk a little for the sake of a chance of a big gain."

Mr. Speck has lived here for a number of years and has many friends who are as pleased as he is at his good fortune. The other three gentlemen are paving cutters and are not known so well. The boys had first formed a scheme to invest their $5,000 in a bunch in real estate, but decided at last to divide and invest as each one saw fit.

All of the lucky fellows are working at their usual business and though well set up at their good luck are sticking right to their lasts as if nothing had happened.—Sioux Falls (Dak.) Argus Leader, Oct. 6.

AN ELEPHANT STORY.

Many were the sights I witnessed in and out of the Palace at Mandalay; but nothing struck my attention so much as the number of trained elephants, lately belonging to the deposed monarch, and the splendid quarters in which they were located, and my surprise was still more increased when I was introduced to, and entered into conversation with the gentleman who presided over this extensive establishment. He turned out to be a real native of the Isle of Wight. The white or mouse-colored elephant was there, of course; but "how are the mighty fallen!" He was no longer in a magnificent pavilion, alone in his grandeur, surrounded by many servitors of the king; on the contrary, he was in a stall like the rest of the beasts, and, if any thing, less noticed than many of his finer brethren. One more anecdote about this wonderful beast, and I have done with elephants. Shortly before our arrival, one of these animals had greatly disgraced himself by refusing to carry a certain weight of goods which had been piled on his back. There is the regulation weight, and the beasts know to an ounce what they ought to carry, and if any of the mahouts attempt to put a surplus amount on his or their backs, it is immediately shot onto the ground. The animal in question had been duly laden with a weight which was under the regulation scale; but although it had been twice weighed, as Mrs. Gamp would say, before his own eyes, he still refused to carry it. This was too much for even his indulgent driver, so he accordingly reported, and just as we arrived he was about to be tried for his extraordinary and obstinate conduct. Several elephants were led out into a large courtyard, forming a kind of circle around the delinquent, who seemed already to feel his position acutely, for he glanced anxiously from time to time at his mahout, who was visibly affected and who stood by his head. A karen presided over the court-martial, and read aloud the indictment against the offender, the elephants which constituted the jury apparently listening with great attention. After the statement was finished and the mahout examined, who by the way, gave his evidence with great reluctance, the karen decided that the case had been distinctly proved, and the culprit was adjudged the punishment of twenty strokes. Upon the announcement of the verdict, the jury marched in a most solemn manner to a distant part of the yard and returned with a switch about as large as a fair sized scaffold pole. In the meantime the mahout had been addressing the offender, who was now weeping copiously, large drops of tears falling from his eyes, and occasionally a shrill and peculiar sound issued from his capacious throat. The executioners of the law were at hand, and stood about twelve to fourteen feet apart, each balancing with peculiar nicety in his trunk the aforesaid switch. The culprit was led up to the place, and as he passed number one there was a sound which resembled somewhat a sharp clap of thunde; it was the first blow delivered by the dread myrmidons of the law. The blow was followed by a sharp, shrill scream, although there was evidently an attempt on the part of the culprit to suppress any exhibition of pain. This punishment continued until the whole of the sentence had been carried out: Although I felt considerable sympathy with the unfortunate delinquent, I was at the same time intensely amused with the thorough business-like air with which these ministers of justice carried out the sentence. There were no light blows delivered; but as a matter of fact, each elephant determined to administer a heavier amount of punishment than his neighbor, and the sly twinkle in the eye as the blow was delivered was a sight to see.—Primrose Magazine.

ABOUT WOOD CARPET.

A Profitable Industry That Is Monopolized by Four American Firms.

The use of wood carpet is constantly on the increase, and there is scarcely any limit to the prospects for it. This kind of floor covering can be made so as to sell as cheaply as a good quality of ingrain, or it can be so wrought with costly woods as to sell at one dollar or more a foot. Good oak, ash and maple carpet can be sold at between eighty and ninety cents a yard. Finished in oil, it is good enough for any ordinary use. For wainscoting and ceiling it is admirably adapted.

The process of making wood carpet is comparatively simple, though the work must be done with exactitude. Carefully adjusted saws strip the lumber into the desired thickness and width, the latter differing according to the work required. The stuff is then subjected to the saws that cut it out in proper shape for inlaying, to form the fabric and figure of the carpet. This must be done with much particularity, as each of the multiform pieces must exactly fit. The arrangement of the pieces and the gluing of them is done by lads, and looks like slow work, but yards are thus woven with fair celerity. Canvas is glued on one side to give strength to the fabric. The carpet is then subjected to sand-paper, and is finally finished with hard oil. The designing of wood carpet is tedious and expensive. Sometimes the manufacturer devises and works out a pattern at great expense, only to find that it does not suit the popular taste, and must be thrown aside. The popularity of woods also fluctuates, as it does in interior finish. Plain, white oak carpet is now very salable, because it is cheap, finishes well, and is of lasting quality.—N. W. Lumberman.

—Lemon juice and sugar, mixed very thick, is useful to relieve coughs and sore throats. It must be very acid as well as sweet.

—The women of New York have been granted more patents than their sisters in any other State. The women of Massachusetts, Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin rank next in order.

FARMERS' WIVES.

How the Comforts of Rural Life Can Be Increased Easily and Cheaply.

In discussing the reasons why so few boys born and bred on the farm follow their fathers' calling, there is one that is entirely creditable to them and that is too little considered. Most of them expect to marry some day, and seeing how hard a time their mothers usually have, are properly unwilling to oblige the girls they love to assume such arduous responsibilities. In fact, they can not oblige a girl to become a farmer's wife if they would. The time for such obligation has not yet come, and in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred, ambitious girls, who like a man well enough for himself, suppress their feelings and give him the go-by, if this be the prospect in life that he holds out "for better or for worse." It is, unfortunately, not altogether a prejudice that thus influences young women against the farm, or rather it is the natural prejudgment of their own fate from the facts in farmers' wives' experiences with which they are themselves familiar.

Undoubtedly the greatest improvement in farming life now needed consists in greater comforts and conveniences for farmers' wives. The farmer himself has all sorts of labor-saving machinery. The wife often has to do with only the same conveniences provided for her mother and grandmother before her. As social duties become more exacting her time and leisure are less than formerly. Children on the farm do not "rough it" as much as they used to. Just all the difference in their appearance marks so much the greater care thrown upon the mother. It is more difficult than formerly to get good help in the house in the country. Girls who work in private families prefer city life. They, too, had rather find a beau among the young men in some city avocation than on a farm. Now, as far as possible, a farmer should either make his wife's work proportionately as easy as his own, or he should quit the business if satisfied that this can not be done. Usually the hardest jobs in the house may be saved by a little timely thoughtfulness on the part of the husband and men folks. Having a good supply of wood or other fuel in a convenient place ought to be a requirement from every housewife. So, too, should good hard and soft water convenient for use. Many steps may be saved by constructing sewage drains to convey slops from the house. This drain should terminate in some receptacle at a distance from the house, which kept disinfected, will more than pay its way in providing fertilizers for the farm.

It is presumed that most farmers' wives have sewing machines. They are as great help in the house as mowers and harvesters are on the farm, and may be used many more days in the year. The ice-house and creamery should be maintained wherever a cow is kept. They make a great saving in the labor of caring for milk, and are besides well worth their cost in making more and better butter than by the old laborious methods. The ice-cold milk from the creamer is an excellent drink for hard-working men. With every particle of cream removed, it is as nutritious as it ever was, and its coolness, combined with nutrition, makes it valuable for a drink to men in the hay and harvest fields. Then, too, with plenty of ice it is easy to have ice cream easily, made cheaply and better than nine-tenths of what is sold in cities. With beautiful home-grown flowers in the dooryard, and perhaps a greenhouse for them in winter, the farmer's wife need ask no odds of her city sisters with equal wealth in the pleasures and refinements of life which each may enjoy.

The trouble with most farmers is that they do not make the most of little things where they can easily and cheaply increase the comforts and luxuries of life. Lacking these, they look with greater envy on the supposed advantages of city residents, and of course become discontented and unhappy. If farmers asked the advice of their wives more than they do about household arrangement, and gave them their way in these, they would find the comforts of their homes greatly increased thereby. Perhaps then their sons, whom they hope to leave as prosperous farmers, would not be deterred from their father's business by their inability to find lovable and intelligent young women willing to share such a life with them.—Boston Budget.

WOOD PULP PAILS.

An Interesting Description of the Process of Their Manufacture.

The pail is entirely in one piece and without hoops, so it never leaks or falls to pieces, besides being lighter by far than any other material from which such vessels could be made. The process of their manufacture is thus described: The wood, preferably spruce, although any soft, fibrous wood will answer, is first cleared of its bark and cut to a length uniform with the grindstone to be used, generally sixteen to twenty-four inches. It is then placed against the face of a rapidly revolving grindstone, the grain of the wood being in a line with or parallel with the axis of the stone, and a hydraulic or worm screw piston keeping the wood constantly pressed against the stone. The result, which is washed off the stone by a shower of water, after being screened of slivers and sawdust, is a milky-white liquid. With the water sufficiently extracted this is the wood pulp used in the manufacture of paper and indurated fiber ware. The process of manufacture of ware from the pulp is exceedingly simple, and is similar in all the lines made by the company. In making a pail, for instance, the machine for first molding the pail from the pulp is provided with a hollow perforated form of cast iron, shaped like the inside of a pail, and covered first with perforated brass and then with fine wire cloth. This form, worked by a hydraulic piston, is pushed up into a large cast iron "hat," which fits over it very tightly. Within this hat is placed a flexible rubber bag, and between this and the inner form first mentioned is admitted the pulp, still in a liquid state. The pulp being pumped in under pressure, the water immediately begins to drain off through the wire cloth and perforations, and the rubber bag swells until it fills the hat. The supply of pulp is then shut off, and water under high pressure is admitted within the hat and outside the rubber bag, thus squeezing much of the water from the pulp. After standing some eight to ten minutes the pressure is shut off, the inner form lowered, and the pulp pail removed. At this stage the pail is still nearly fifty per cent. water, but is sufficiently strong to allow handling. This water is first all dried out in dry kilns, and then the pail is turned off on the outside with a gang of saws. After sandpapering inside and out the pail is ready for the treatment house, where it is charged with a water-proofing compound which permeates thoroughly the material of which the pail is made. Baking in ovens at a high temperature succeeds each dip or treatment. The polish which the goods present is described as being the result of the final treatment. After this the handles are riveted on the goods, which are then ready for the market.—Railway Review.

LIFE IN THE WEST.

A County Coronor Who Has an Ever-Watchful Eye for Fees.

A man who had just moved to Nebraska with his family was called on before breakfast the other morning by a tall native.

"Mornin', stranger," said the Nebraska man. "Jes' movin' in I see?"

"Yes, sir."

"I unnerstand one o' your sons was mysteriously killed a few months ago?"

"No, sir; you're mistaken."

"Am? Well, that's cur'us. But your wife tried to drown herself last spring?"

"No, sir, she didn't."

"But one of the gals took pizen an' died 'bout that time?"

"No."

"Ah, wrong again? I unnerstood she did. Your whole fam'ly is subject to fallin' sickness an' such I'm told?"

"Gosh, that's funny! But, say, ain't there been a good many violent and unexpected deaths in the fam'ly somewhere?"

"Never one."

"Well, you shot a man 'bout a year ago—I got that straight?"

"No, sir, I never did!"

"Well, well, I must have struck the wrong house somehow—there's such a fam'ly jes' moved in 'round here somewhere. You see I'm county coroner, an' I'm very anxious to make their acquaintance an' tell 'em that they're welcome, an' that if they care to indulge in their specialty I'll see that they have just as slick an inquest as was ever held in Newbraskey! Good-bye' stranger!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Streets of Paris.

From a report published in the Nouvelles Annules de la Construction, the total area of the streets of Paris, measured between the kerbs, amounted at the end of 1886 to 8,517,100 square metres (91,678,065 square feet), of which 6,250,000 square metres are laid in granite, 1,608,100 square metres macadamized, 302,000 square metres asphalted, and 355,000 square metres provided with wood pavement. The cost last year for relaying and repairs amounted to 11,000,000 francs (£440,000). To put all the streets of Paris into thorough order would require about 75,000,000 francs (£3,000,000), of which 15,000,000 francs would have to be spent in changing macadamized roads into pavement, and 60,000,000 francs in improving existing pavements.

—Party in the chair—"Hullo, there! You've got my coat." Seedy party—"Ah! what's de matter wid you? Ain't I leaving you my new mackintosh instead? If yer ain't satisfied I'll leave my hat, too."—Texas Siftings.

—There's some cloud resting on Squander. Every time I meet him he is gloomier than before. He must owe a lot of money." "That isn't what troubles him, though. It's because he can't owe any more."—Town Topics.

—Sweet Pickles: Ten pounds of fruit, four pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar, four ounces cinnamon, one ounce cloves. Boil fruit tender and drain, scald vinegar and spices together three mornings and pour on hot.—Boston Budget.

"You may bring me," said the Boston girl, "a small portion of Celtic disturbance." "A—which is it," said the waiter. "Irish stew, you stupid," answered she.

WHAT A CHANGE!

A few short weeks ago that young girl was the personification of health, vigor and beauty. The blush upon her cheeks rivalled that of the rose; her step was light and buoyant, her every moment was a revelation of perfect physical health. Yet now she is pallid and haggard, and her superabundant vitality has given place to a strange dullness and lassitude. What has caused this change? Functional irregularities, which can be cured by Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," a remedy to which thousands of women to-day owe their lives. All druggists.

THE WESTERN SETTLER'S CHOSEN SPECIFIC.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly-peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older-settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently-cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

An Omaha real estate agent, says an exchange, was attacked by three footpads recently. He killed one and forced the other two to buy a thirty days' option on town lots.

"FIRE-PROOF PAPER MAY BE MADE,"

says a scientific exchange, from a pulp, consisting of one part vegetable fibre, two parts asbestos, one-tenth part borax, and one-fifth part alum." It is a pity that such facts as the one following cannot be written, printed or otherwise preserved, upon some sort of indestructible paper. "My wife suffered seven years and was bed ridden, too," said W. E. Huestis, of Emporia, Kansas, "a number of physicians failed to help her. Dr. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured her." All druggists sell this remedy. Everybody ought to keep it. It only needs a trial.

A critic, Mary Ann, is a party who reads your book, your story, or your poem, and then kindly sits down and tells you how he would have written it if he had been you.

BATTLE OF MISSIONARY RIDGE.

HEALD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Young men residing in the country, who have arrived at the age when existence should be sustained by their own efforts, are frequently at a loss for some remunerative occupation. There is in San Francisco an institution which offers unbounded facilities for all in search of employment. Reference is made to Heald's Business College, 24 Post street, San Francisco, where, for a moderate sum of money, a thorough commercial education can be obtained. The great advantage which this establishment provides is its extreme practicability. The student becomes a bona-fide merchant, and is made thoroughly familiar with all the minutest details appertaining to affairs in the mercantile world. In addition to bookkeeping, penmanship is taught with a thorough review of the English branches. They also teach shorthand and type-writing, and have recently adopted a new system in stenography containing less than 50 signs and characters, while the old systems in general use have 1,500. It is no wonder students become disgusted, and give up the study, when confronted with such a mass of hieroglyphics to master before commencing to write. They make good manuscript reporters before the student has learned the characters of either Pitman, Marsh or Munson.

Everything pertaining to a business education, including shorthand, type-writing and telegraphy, is taught for the sum of $75.00 for a six-months' course.

In this connection attention is also directed to the School of Practical, Civil, Mechanical and Mining Engineering, Surveying, Architecture, Drawing and Assaying of Prof. A. Vander Naillen. This is a practical and valuable course of instruction in most important branches, and Vander Naillen's long experience in conducting this special school enables him to produce most satisfactory results. He has recently secured commodious quarters in the new Bancroft Building, on Market street. See his ad. in this paper.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

CURES ALL HUMORS, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, White Swellings, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and vital strength, will be established.

CONSUMPTION, which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its marvelous power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills, alternating with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and coated tongue, you are suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is unsurpassed.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy. Sold by Druggists, at $1.00, or SIX BOTTLES for $5.00.

The Madder Style of Applying the Colors to the Cloth.

The first operation connected with the printing of cloth is the removal of the surface hairs or minute threads which communicate a fibrous down or nap to the surface of the cloth, and if allowed to remain, would interfere with the uniform application of the colors. The surface down is got rid of by the process of singeing, during which the cloth is drawn over a red-hot iron or copper bar, or plate, or through a series of gas jets. When well singed the cloth undergoes the process of bleaching, and is thereafter calendered. There are several modes of applying the colors to cloth, only one of which, termed the madder style, we have space to describe.

The madder style is that in which a certain fixing agent or mordant is printed on the cloth, which is then introduced into the coloring matter, in a dye-vat, when the mordant, having an attraction alike for the fiber of the cloth and for the coloring matter, acts the part of glue or paste, and cements the color to the cloth. Originally, madder was the only coloring substance employed in this style; but now-a-days by far the greater number of dye-stuffs, vegetable and animal, including cochineal, logwood, etc., are attached to cloth in this manner. The fixing agents or mordants generally employed are different strengths of red liquor (acetate of alumina), iron liquor (acetate of iron), and mixtures of these. These are thickened with wheat-starch, potato flour, roasted starch or dextrine, and gum-arabic, so that the mordant may not run when it is placed on the cloth by the pattern-block or by the printing machine. After the mordant has been imprinted on the cloth, the latter is hung in a warm, airy room, where it can easily dry, but where it is at the same time surrounded by a moist atmosphere. The result is, that the mordant is decomposed, the acetic acid is evolved, and the alumina or iron is left attached to the fiber of the cloth in the state of an insoluble subsalt, which can not be dissolved by water.

As some of the mordant is still left in its original soluble condition, it is necessary to wash the cloth free from this, else, during the dyeing operation, the soluble part of the mordant would run on to those parts of the cloth not intended to be colored, and thus produce a blotted appearance. To obviate this, the cloth, having undergone the process of drying and ageing, is then introduced into a vat containing water, through which is diffused some cow dung, dung substitute—a preparation of bone ash, sulphuric acid, carbonate of soda and glue—or bran. The result of this process of dunging is the removal of the soluble part of the mordant, as also the starch or thickening agent, leaving the decomposed or insoluble mordant adhering to the fiber. The terms dung-fixing, substitute-fixing and bran-fixing have reference to the employment of one or other of these agents at this stage of the operation. When the cloth has been well washed from the dunging, it is introduced into the vat or dye-beck containing the coloring matter. The whole is heated by steam pipes, and the cloth being placed on a sparred reel kept in motion, is repeatedly wound out of the vat, and returned thereto. The result is, that wherever the mordant adhered to the cloth the coloring matter is attached thereto, and little or no trace of color adheres to the unmordanted parts.

The last operation is the clearing or brightening, during which the colored cloth is introduced into warm baths of water containing soda, or for the more delicate tints, bran, and is thereafter acted on by weak acid solutions. The object is to clear the colors, and at the same time to confer upon them the property of resisting the fading action of the air and sun for a much longer time. The different shades of color which can be obtained from the same madder beck or vat, with different mordants, is very numerous, and includes reds, lilacs, purples, chocolates and blacks. Thus, when a weak solution of red liquor (acetate of alumina) is employed as the mordant, a light-red tint is produced; with a stronger amminous mordant, a deep red is formed on the cloth; with a more or less dilute solution of iron liquor (acetate of iron), the cloth is colored lilac, violet or purple; with a strong solution of iron liquor, black is obtained. Indeed, the same piece of cloth stamped in different places with the various strengths of aluminous and iron mordants, and mixtures of these, and immersed in the madder bath, will be obtained dyed with all the shades mentioned; and in this manner many of the beautiful variagated colored dresses and handkerchiefs are prepared for market.—Ohio Farmer.

Twelve Rules for Schools.

In school work we should require, first, a comfortable temperature, and especially let the feet be kept warm and dry; second, good ventilation; third, loose clothing; fourth, erect posture; fifth, little study before breakfast, or directly after a hearty meal, none at all in twilight or late at night; sixth, great caution about study after recovery from fevers; seventh, light abundant but not dazzling; eighth, sun not shining on the desk, or on objects in front of the pupil; ninth, light coming from the left hand or left and rear; under some circumstances from in front (no light from the right of the pupil permitted;) tenth, the book held at right angles to the line of the light, or nearly so; eleventh, frequent rest by looking up; twelfth, distance of book from eye about fifteen inches.—Dr. Lincoln, in Sanitarium.

GRAND SNAKE ROAST.

An Able-Bodied Yarn Coming All the Way from the Pacific Coast.

"I was reading something in your paper about snakes the other day," said J. D. Andrews, an Oregon pioneer. "Let me tell you of a peculiar experience I had with snakes. I have a farm on the Mollalla, a few miles from Oregon City, near an oblong, rock-covered hill, called Rattlesnake Hill, which for years has just been swarming with them. In the spring, when the weather gets warm, rattlesnakes come out of the ledges and drift down on the creek bottoms, becoming very troublesome. My farm being only three miles away, these reptiles become each year more and more troublesome, endangering especially the lives of my children, who, despite all I could do, would persist in going about barefooted.

"Well, a year ago last spring they swarmed into my wheat-field so thickly that I couldn't cut it when it was ripe. This may sound odd to you, but it is a fact. But I got some of my neighbors to help me, and I plowed several furrows around the field, and then laid hair ropes around it and set fire to the wheat. Well, of all the sizzing and frying and strange squawks and noises you ever heard, we had them there. Such a lot of rattling and leaping up and displaying forked tongues, I don't think anybody ever before saw. Of course, they ran from the fire, but the hair rope on the further side turned them, until we had a complete circle of fire around them.

"Well, when the wheat was burned off there were thousands of dead rattlesnakes. They were thicker in the middle of the field than anywhere else, and were twisted and tied together in knots and bunches almost as tight as a barrel. I guess we must have made a clean sweep of them that time, for they have never put in an appearance there since."—San Francisco Examiner.

ANDY JACKSON'S HOME.

Attention by Alfred, the old servant of General Jackson, is quite the same to all visitors at the Hermitage. His politeness on the arrival of visitors by its manner conveys the idea of compensation of favors. On an occasion he said: "Sit here in the hall till I open the windows." On entering the parlor he said, not loquaciously, but with an interest which repetition does not lessen: "That's General Jackson's picture, painted when he was President by Mr. Earle." Then he called attention to another by Healy four days before the General died.

"All this furniture was his and sits just where he left it. That's the last cup and saucer used by the General; this is his snuff-box. They didn't use snuff then as now, but put a little of it in the nose. That's his pipe. The General usually smoked a cob pipe. Them was his goose quills—pens and inks, you know. Here are some Injin tools. I suppose the head chief gave them to the General after peace was made.

"That's General Coffee," resumed Alfred, pointing to a portrait. "That's his adopted son. I hope to bury him," meaning he helped to bury him. "I was forty-one when the General died; was born and brought up here. He bought my wife in '32 to wait on him an' old mistiss."

There are several rare pieces of furniture in the building. A sideboard is one of the most elaborate to be found. The hall paper is of French design and antiquely historical. A Bible is well preserved, printed MDXCIII., in Tubingal. WANTED TO SMOKE.

The Strange Request a Sturdy Centenarian Made of a Friendly King.

When King Frederick William IV. of Prussia visited the Rhine provinces in 1843 he stopped some hours at Wesel, in which strongly-fortified town, as the millitary commander of the post informed him, the oldest man in the monarchy was then living. The King went to see the oldest of his subjects and found him a hale and still hearty veteran of one hundred and six, comfortably seated in an old arm-chair, enjoying his inseparable companion—a short pipe. On the approach of the King he rose and advanced a few steps, but the King made him sit down, and conversed quite freely with him, the pipe, however, not leaving the old man's lips a moment. On parting the King asked him if he had any wish that he could gratify. "No, your Majesty," was the reply, "I thank you; I have every thing I need in this world." "Have you, indeed? Just think a moment; we mortals generally have some wish or other." "Well, sire, on second thought I might ask a favor. My physician insists upon my taking a walk every day on the ramparts. Every time I pass in front of the powder magazine the sentry hails me from a distance, crying out 'Take the pipe out of your mouth,' and as I can advance but slowly my pipe goes out every time. Now, if your Majesty will be gracious enough to give the order that the sentry shall let me smoke my pipe in peace the whole of the way I shall esteem it the greatest boon of my remaining days." The order was given and the old man enjoyed the privilege for upward of two years, dying with his pipe in his mouth.—Paris American Register.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

Soft Gurglings of a Couple Whose Spooney Traits Were Well Developed.

I am a married man, and was, I do not blush to say, spooney enough myself in the days of my courtship; but I am gratified to remember that there were limitations to my weakness in the spooney direction, and there were none in the case of the young couple near whom I sat in Central Park the other night. They didn't know I was there, but their rapture was too deep for them to care if they had known. She was pretty enough to make it tantalizing to see her embraced by the glorified youth who sat by her side. With a beatific expression he gurgled out:

"My Willie."

"Who's my pet?"

"I?" she asked.

"My little girly! Need you ask?"

"I'm so glad, Willy!"

"And you love me just a teeny bit?"

"A 'teeny bit'—now, Willy!"

"More than that, then?"

"A billion, trillion times more!"

"No!"

"Yes, indeed, indeed!"

"What makes you love me?"

"Oh, because you're so—so—so—sweet!"

"You dear, sweet, little birdie!"

"You precious, precious old boy!"

"Precious to whom?"

"To me!"

"Ever and ever so precious?"

BILL NYE TAKES A HAND.

He Wrestles with the Shakespeare-Bacon Problem.

RUSTING that it will not in any way impair the sale of Mr. Donnelly's book, I desire to offer here a few words in favor of the theory that William Shakespeare wrote his own works and thought his own thinks. The time has fully arrived when we humorists ought to stand by each other.

William Shakespeare knew all the time that he was a great man and that some day he would write pieces to speak. He left Stratford at the age of 21 and went to London, where he attracted very little attention, for he belonged to the yeomanry, being a kind of dramatic Horace Greeley, both in the matter of clothes and penmanship. Thus it would seem that while Sir Francis Bacon was attending a business college and getting himself familiar with the whole arm movement, so as to be able to write a free, cryptogamous hand, poor W. Shakespeare was slowly thinking the hair off his head, while ever and anon he would bring out his writing materials and his bright, ready tongue and write a sonnet on an empty stomach.

Shakespeare did not want his plays published. He wanted to keep them out of the press in order to prevent their use at spelling schools in the hands of unskilled artists, and so there was a long period of time during which the papers could not get hold of them for publication.

During this time Francis Bacon was in public life. He and Shakespeare had nothing in common. Both were great men, but Bacon's sphere was different from Shakespeare's. While Bacon was in the senate, living high and courting investigation, Shakespeare had to stuff three large pillows into his pantaloons and play Falstaff at one night stands.

Is it likely that Bacon, breathing the perfumed air of the Capitol and chucking the treasury girls under the chin ever and anon, hungered for the false joys of the underpaid and underscored dramatist? Scarcely!

That is one reason why I prefer to take the side of Shakespeare rather than the side of Bacon.

I know that Shakespeare has been severely criticised by the press for leaving his family at Stratford while he himself lived in London, only visiting home occasionally, but I am convinced that he found they could live cheaper in that way. Help in the house was very high at that time in London, and the intelligence offices were doing a very large business without giving very much intelligence. Friends of his told him that it was not only impossible to get enough help in London, but that there was hardly enough servants to prevent a panic in the employment bureau. Several offices were in fact compelled to shut down for a half day at a time, one using the limited stock in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon.

SHAKESPEARE REACHES LONDON.

Shakespeare was a perfect gentleman, having been made so by the Herald's college, which invested his father with coat armor. This coat armor made a gentleman of the elder Shakespeare, and as William's mother was already a gentleman under the code, William became one also both on his father's and on his mother's side. Of course all this is mere detail and is dull and uninteresting, but I refer to it to show that those who have read things in Shakespeare's works that they did not like, and who therefore say that he was no gentleman, do the great bard an injustice.

I do not say that Shakespeare was the author of his own works, and it would not look well in me to set up my opinion in opposition to that of scholars, experts and savants who have had more advantages than I have, for I would never take advantage of any one; but I say that somewhere the impression has crept into the papers that he was a pretty good little play writer, and I am glad that Mr. Childs has had a testimonial made and sent over to England that will show an appreciation, at least, of his ability to keep before the people.

It will be noticed by an alert and keen scented litterateur that I have carefully avoided treading on the tail of Mr. Donnelly's cipher. Being rather a poor mathematician anyway, I will not introduce the cipher at this time, but I will say that although the whole thing happened about three hundred years ago, and has now nearly passed out of my mind, to the best of my recollection Shakespeare, though he was the son of a buckwheater, and though he married his wife with a poetic license, and though he left his family at Stratford rather than take them to live in a London flat, wrote the most of his plays with the assistance of an expurgator who was out of the city most all of the time.

I cannot show Shakespeare's ready wit better at this time than by telling of his first appearance on the stage as I remember it. He came quietly before the footlights with a roll of carpet under one arm and a tack hammer under the other. In those days it was customary to nail down stage carpets, and while doing so "Shake," as we all called him then, knocked the nail off his left thumb, whereupon he received an ovation from the audience. Some men would have been rattled and would have "called up," as we say, but Shakespeare was always ready to please his friends or respond to an encore, so putting his right thumb up against a large painted rock in a mountain scene, he obliged by knocking off the other thumb nail.

Shakespeare was one of the few Englishmen who never visited this country for two weeks for the purpose of writing an eight pound book on his impressions of America.—Bill Nye in New York World.

—The Jewelers' Journal says: "There has never been a time in the history of the American watch trade when the business was of such vast proportions as now. All the larger factories that have run all summer, as well as those that shut down for a short interval, are behind orders at the present time, with the prospect of the largest holiday demand ever known before them."

—The manufacture of corsets is becoming a most important industry in Wurtemberg, about 10,000 people being now engaged in the trade. Large quantities of woven corsets are exported to Brazil, La Plata, England and the United States. The amount sent to the last named country is, however, less now than previously, as the United States have also begun to manufacture this article.

—The British Iron Trade Association has issued its half-yearly statistics of the production and stocks of pig iron, and the production of Bessemer steel ingots and rails. As compared with the corresponding six months of 1886, the make of steel ingots shows an increase of 202,217, and the make of steel rails an increase of 75,856 tons. The production of pig iron increased 131,341 tons. The increase of stocks of pig iron as compared with the same period has been 73,165 tons.—Public Opinion.

—It seems that dynamite which has been exploded in blasting out rocks sometimes leaves an explosive residue which renders it dangerous to break up the smaller masses with the sledge-hammer. In Brazil, where this residue has caused several serious explosions in mines, it is supposed that nitro-glycerine exudes from the dynamite before or at the time it is fired, and remains at the bottom of the drill-hole, unexploded, until struck by the sledge-hammer when the miners are breaking up the rock. Whatever the true explanation may be, the subject is well worthy of investigation by the manufacturers of dynamite.—N. Y. Ledger.

—The discovery of a new gas is a rare and important event to chemists. Such a discovery has been announced in Germany by Dr. Theodore Curtius, who has succeeded in preparing the long-sought hydride of nitrogen amidogen, diamide or hydrazine, as it is variously called. This remarkable body, which has hitherto baffled all attempts at isolation, is now shown to be a gas, perfectly stable up to a very high temperature, of a peculiar odor, differing from that of ammonia, exceedingly soluble in water, and of basic properties. In composition it is nearly identical with ammonia, both being compounds of nitrogen and hydrogen.—Boston Budget.

LIFE-SAVING SERVICE.

Importance and Extent of This Branch of Government Work.

From time to time throughout the year the daily press gives an account of a shipwreck, and in most cases this account includes a more or less detailed history of the efforts of the crew of some life-saving station to rescue from the angry sea the imperiled passengers and sailors. These stories are read and soon forgotten except by the few who took part in the struggle, or possibly by some writer of romance who finds in them the best possible material for his work. But when these brief histories are brought together, as has been done for the year ending June 30, 1886, in the annual report of the Life-Saving Service Bureau of the Treasury Department, it forms a volume of over 500 pages, which gives one a realizing sense of the importance and extent of this branch of Government work.

The United States Life-saving Service includes 211 stations, of which 165 are on the Atlantic Coast, 38 on the Lakes, 7 on the Pacific coast, and one at the Falls of the Ohio, at Louisville, Ky. These stations had to do with 322 disasters to documented vessels during the year, involving property valued at $6,502,135, and 2,726 lives. Of the lives 2,699 were saved and 27 lost; of the property $5,073,078 was saved and $1,429,057 lost.

The total expenditure for the service during the year, including salaries of officers and clerks in the central office, was a little over $870,000. It is a large sum, but one which is extremely well invested in view of the results obtained, and we believe there is no bureau which is more carefully and economically managed or which is more deserving of public approval and support.—Sanitary Engineer.

UNCLE SAM'S ARMY.

What Is Required of Young Men Desirous of Enlisting in It.

"Then what few men are out of employment and want to go into Uncle Sam's service are most of them not up to the standard," said Lieutenant Cusick, who is in charge of the recruiting office recently moved to Portland from Pittsburgh, Penn. It is the first opened in Maine for a great many years, perhaps the first since the days of the war. The Lieutenant continued:

"The United States army wants 1,500 men at once to bring its strength up to the 25,000 required by the act of Congress. So far we have had but 21 applications in Portland, and only three of them have been acceptable. Of the other 19 there was one 'out' or another that compelled us to reject them. Fully two-thirds of them had defective eyes. One eye was not so good as the other. In the army a man must have good eyes that he may become a good marksman, and that he may be able to distinguish different objects. One eye should be as good as the other so that in case of temporary injury to an eye the efficiency of the soldier may not be impaired. Dissipated habits, too much rum and tobacco, are common causes of these weaknesses of the eyes. In many cases defects of vision have been produced by blows.

"Then in chest measurements and weight we find frequent reasons for rejecting applicants, especially in the fall of the year. The hard work of summer reduces the weight and the girth of the chest. We have a regular system of measurements, and it will not do to depart from a standard in a single particular. For the infantry service we take none below 5 feet 4 inches in height, and none over 6 feet 3 inches. For the cavalry 5 feet 4 inches to 5 feet 10 inches are the limits. We don't have any tall cavalrymen because they are liable to get too heavy. Light, tough men are wanted for the service. Now for the shortest infantrymen, 5 feet 4 inches, we require that he shall have a weight of 128 pounds, a chest measurement of 34 inches, with the ability to expand his chest 2 inches by drawing in a full breath. Then these requirements of weight and chest measurement are higher for taller men. A man 5 feet 8 inches tall must weigh 141 pounds at least, measure 34½ around the chest, and have a chest expansion of 2½ inches; for 5 feet 10 inches the required minimum is 155 pounds for weight, 35½ inches chest and 2½ expansion; for 6 feet the weight is 169, the chest measurement 36½, expansion 2½. You see, it does not necessarily follow that a man must be an athlete to join the army, as the tables to which the professors of physical culture train their pupils to have a standard of chest measurement somewhere near 40 inches for a man 6 feet tall. But we want good average, well-built and healthy men, without any defects physically. So far we have secured three out of every twenty applicants. But I don't think this small proportion is any sign that the vigor of the youth of Maine is departing. For many reasons the men who apply are not fair samples.

"Are the inducements offered by the service such as to attract the most ambitious young men?" asked the reporter.

"Well, you can judge for yourself. The soldier gets $13 a month with his board and clothes. He enlists for five years, and must stay in the service till his term expires, unless he can get the Secretary of War to allow his discharge. By good behavior he gets an increase of $1 a month during the third year of service, $2 during the fourth and $3 during the fifth. If he is promoted he gets further additions to his pay. He may become a corporal, a sergeant, a quartermaster-sergeant, a quartermaster or a commissary; he may even go higher, and by passing an examination before a board of officers get certified for an examination at Fort Monroe, Va. If he passes at the fort he may then become a commissioned officer, starting as a Second Lieutenant.

"Do many avail themselves of the opportunity?"

"The young men who graduate at West Point have the first chance, and of late they have filled all the vacant commissions. Practically very few men rise in the army from the ranks to a commission. Adjutant-General Drum, however, is one who did. I am not a graduate of West point myself, but I served as an officer of volunteers during the war, and was then transferred to the regular army as a commissioned officer. So I had an opportunity better than falls to the young man who enters the army now in any other way than through West Point. Yet there are some promotions even now. The commissions of the army are also open to civilians, though this is not generally known. After the West point graduates have got places, and the promotions from the rank of non-commissioned officers have been made, any vacancies left (there are rarely any, however) are open to civilians who can pass the examinations required."—Portland (Me.) Press.

TURKISH RECREATIONS.

How the Indolent Subjects of the Sultan Amuse Themselves.

The traits of a people may often be judged as correctly from their pleasures and recreations as from their history and serious conduct. In the freedom of the idle, pleasure-seeking hours, a people will betray whether they are imaginative or matter-of-fact, whether they are gentle or rough, whether they are sober or buoyant of spirit. It is usual to find that a people who dwell in rugged, inhospitable lands, in regions of storm and gloomy skies, prefer amusements which are hardy and active; while those who dwell in softer, sunnier climes enjoy themselves in milder recreations.

The old French chronicler, Froissart, observed, when in England, that the English "took their pleasures very sadly." The English, and especially the Scotch, dwelling as they do in a capricious climate, are noted for the ruggedness and hardihood of their sports. The buoyancy and gayety of the French character, on the other hand, are strikingly reflected in the lightness and sparkle which appear in all their favorite pastimes.

The recreations of Oriental peoples are more interesting, because less familiar to us, than those of the Western peoples, and afford quite as reliable a key to national character. A recent sojourner in Turkey has given a very entertaining account of the ways in which the subjects of the Sultan beguile their many idle hours. The Turks are an indolent people. The languor of their beautiful climate renders them prone to take the world easily, to have frequent holidays, and to enjoy pleasures which soothe rather than excite.

The principal public recreations of the Turks are three. One is, to witness the burlesque acting of a company of men, who do not use any stage for their performances, but issue forth from behind a simple screen. These players go about from place to place, erect their screen in the open air, and give their performances before the motley crowd of turbaned idlers who gather around them. Another favorite amusement is what the writer referred to calls the "Turkish Punch and Judy." This show, however, is given by means of shadows cast upon a white sheet. The effect of this is very weird and striking. The third public recreation is the gathering in the streets, or on the open spaces, to listen to the thrilling tales of the "meddahs," or professional story-tellers. The meddahs take the place, in Turkey, of lecturers in America. They relate the most exciting stories, with many emphatic gestures, contortions of the face and modulations of the voice. They sit in the middle of an attentive circle, and often rouse their hearers to a high pitch of breathless interest and excitement by their dramatic powers of narration.

The Turkish women are allowed to witness the burlesque acting, but they are forbidden to be present at the Punch and Judy shows, and at the story-telling of the meddahs. The women, moreover, are not permitted to attend the theaters and opera houses.

Like all Orientals, the Turks are very fond of music and of dancing. But their airs, musical instruments and dances are entirely different from those of Western Europe. They partake very much of the nature of the race as seen in other ways. The Turkish music, to Western ears, sounds soft, melodious and monotonous. The Turks, on the other hand, regard European music as too loud, boisterous and confused in sound. A choir, or an orchestra, in Turkey, all sing and play the air only.

The Turks like ceremony, and all their recreations are pursued in a sedate, quiet, ceremonious way. The musicians, dancers, story-tellers are ushered before and away from their audiences with flourishes and obeisances, and are rewarded with much solemnity of demeanor. There are very few recreations in Turkey in which men and women are allowed to take part in common. When both sexes witness the same performance, the women always sit in a group behind a screen or thick lattice, so that they can witness what is going forward without seeing or being seen by the men. But in this case, the best point from which to view the performance is accorded to the women.—Youth's Companion.

The Secret of Longevity.

A little way beyond the ancient church at Holderness is a brick residence, whose front is half hidden by one of those monster elms that are the pride of our Northern States, and beneath its shade I saw yesterday a man who is passing his ninety-fifth year sitting comfortably in a great arm-chair. My wife told me that his aunt had recently died, aged one hundred and five. Curious to know if there was any especial reason for such longevity, I made inquiries. "No," said my informant, "only they were almost always out of doors and lived a quiet life." Yet in that single sentence lay a greater philosophy than he dreamed of, a sounder precept than he knew. To keep out of doors and avoid worry is a maxim that, if followed, would close a majority of our hospitals, which, I regret to say, have a greater number of occupants with each succeeding year.—American Magazine.

The bill of Senator Stanford for refunding to the several states the amount collected under the direct tax laws of 1861 and 1865 should become a law without opposition. The taxes were paid to help the government in overcoming the rebellion. The National Treasury is now overflowing with money; the President and his cabinet appear to be driven to their wits end to know what to do with the amounts continually pouring into the Treasury. The whole amount to be returned is estimated at less than sixteen millions of dollars. The share of California would be $300,000. The money should be paid back; it is due to the States and the Nation is abundantly able to pay it.

The Mormons are making a desperate effort to have Utah admitted to the Union as a State. As citizens of a Territory the laws of Congress are enforced against them to compel them to give up the practice of polygamy, or to punish them if they persist in it. If admitted as a State the Mormons could make what laws they please in regard to polygamy. The men who practice unlimited sensuality and call it religion; who have perpetrated wholesale murder and called it an acceptable sacrifice; who regard their church organization as entitled to their allegiance in preference to the United States constitution and government, should never be entrusted with the government of a State. A State is not the land, but the people who live upon it; the Mormons would be the State of Utah.

NOVELTIES IN TRICK ARTICLES THAT DELIGHT THE JOKER.

Sleight of Hand Mysteries for the Boys—Tricks Which are Played Upon Smokers—Thrusting a Nail Through the Finger—The Wizards Pack.

"New tricks for the boys?" repeated a dealer in sleight-of-hand articles in reply to a reporter's inquiry; "I should say so. There's no end to them. There is a beautiful button-hole bouquet, for instance. After placing it in your coat button-hole you call the attention of a friend to its beauty and fragrance. Of course he will step forward and smell it, when to his astonishment a fine stream of water will be thrown in his face. Where the water comes from is a mystery, as you can have your hands at your side or behind you and not touch the bouquet in any manner. There is a little leaping monkey that is better than a surprise party for making fun and getting up an excitement. After it has been sitting quietly on the stand or table, and being admired by your unsuspecting friends, it will suddenly, and without warning, make a wild leap into the air and land under the table or in somebody's lap, creating a regular panic all around.

"That there is a cigar case that is one of the best practical jokes of the season. To all appearances it is an ordinary cigar case made in imitation of real leather. Ask your friend to have a cigar, at the same time handing him the case. As he attempts to open it an ugly-looking gorilla, six inches in height, suddenly pops up instead of the expected cigar. Another trick novelty in the cigar line consists of a light, strong metal shell, the size and shape and color of a cigar. It has a spiral spring concealed within, that may be released at the will of the operator by slightly pressing a trigger that is attached to the small end. One end of the spring is permanently fastened in the shell and the end, which is protected when released, has a dark cork attached to retain it in the shell. When the spring is released it will fly out from twelve to fifteen inches with a whirring, rattling noise, so quickly that while the person towards whom it is pointed can see something coming and hear it, he can not tell just what has happened until after he has seen it and made a lively effort to dodge it.

OTHER INTERESTING ARTICLES.

"A magic nail is another interesting little trick article. A common nail is shown, and, without a moment's hesitation, the performer forces it through his finger. The finger can be shown with the nail protruding from both sides. The illusion is so perfect that the spectators will be satisfied that the wound is a genuine one. The next instant the nail can be withdrawn for examination and the finger shown without a cut, scar or wound. In another trick you exhibit a neat and pretty windmill, which you blow with the greatest ease, remarking that the mill is enchanted and will only work at your command. Then hand it to any one with the request to try it. The moment he tries it he receives a startling salute, and finds lips, chin, nose and cheeks decorated with black or white, as the case may be. This has often been used with excellent effect by storekeepers who wish to get rid of loungers. It is placed on the counter or show-case, and most naturally some idle curiosity-seeker will pick it up and blow on it with a result that will cause him to retreat. A good trick is done with a card which you can change into a full-blown rose by simply transferring it from one hand to the other."

"What is new in trick cards?"

"The wizard's pack. This is a full pack, apparently the same as an ordinary pack, but with which wonderful and apparently impossible tricks can be performed. These are not done by legerdemain or sleight-of-hand. The secret is in the cards. Among these tricks are the following: A card may be drawn, shuffled in the pack and cut the first time; a card may be blown from the pack after having been drawn, returned, and shuffled; the two colors of a pack divided by one cut; the card discovered under a handkerchief; six persons may draw a card each, shuffle them and immediately after the performer at once produces them, pulling them rapidly out of the pack, one after the other; the performer may leave the the room and in his absence a card may be drawn, which he on his return at once picks out of the pack."—New York Mail and Express.

ORDINANCE NO. 19.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, do ordain as follows:

All persons doing business within the county of Inyo shall obtain licenses from the Tax Collector of said County as follows:

SEC. 1. Auctioneers are divided into two classes and must obtain licenses from the Tax Collector as follows:

First Class. Those whose average monthly sales amount to $2,500 and upward constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those whose average monthly sales are less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 2. Persons engaged in banking, loaning money at interest, or in buying or selling notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of private persons, or in buying or selling State County or City stocks, or other evidences of State, County or City indebtedness, or stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness of incorporated companies, or in buying or selling gold dust, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver coin, are divided into two classes and must pay licenses as follows:

First Class. Those doing business in the aggregate to the amount of $10,000 per quarter, or over, constitute the first class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

Second Class. Those doing business in any amount less than $10,000 per quarter constitute the second class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 3. From each proprietor of a billiard table not kept exclusively for family use, for each table, $5 per quarter; and for each bowling alley, $15 per quarter for each alley; but no licenses must be granted for a term of less than three months.

SEC. 4. For each exhibition for pay for a theatrical performance, a caravan or menagerie, or any collection of animals, circus or other acrobatic performance, $7. And for each show for pay of any figures, jugglers, necromancers, magicians, wire or rope dancing, and sleight of hand exhibitions, $5 for each performance. The provisions of this Section do not apply to exhibitions given for the benefit of churches, school, or other charitable entertainments, by any amateur dramatic association or literary society of the town or district in which such exhibition or entertainment is given.

SEC. 5. Each pawn broker must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 6. Each keeper of an intelligence office must pay a license of $10 per quarter.

SEC. 7. Every person who sells spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, or wine in quantities less than one gallon, must obtain a license therefor from the Tax-Collector and make the following payments:

First Class. Those making sales to the amount of $1,000 or more as a monthly average constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those making sales of less than $1000 per month constitute the second class and must pay a license of $25 per quarter.

SEC. 8. Every person who, at a fixed place of business sells any goods, wares or merchandise, wines or distilled liquors, drugs or medicines, jewelry or wares of precious metals, whether on commission or otherwise, except Agricultural or Horticultural productions, or the productions of any stock, dairy or poultry farm of this State, when sold by the producer thereof, and except such as are sold by auctioneers at public sale usual for such goods, is a peddler, and shall be licensed and all persons who keep horses or carriages for hire (except such as are used in the transportation of goods) must obtain from the Tax Collector, and for each branch of said business, license, and pay quarterly therefor an amount of money to be determined by the class in which such person is placed by the Tax Collector, such business to be classified and regulated by the amount of the average Monthly sales made or hiring done, and at the following rates:

First Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $2,500 or more shall constitute the first class and must pay a license of $50 per quarter.

Second Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring to the amount of $1,250 and less than $2,500 constitute the second class and must pay a license of $30 per quarter.

Third Class. Those who are estimated to make average monthly sales or hiring of less than $1,250 constitute the third class and must pay a license of $15 per quarter.

SEC. 9. The sales of liquors and wines by persons licensed under the preceding Section must not be in quantities of less than one gallon measure.

No license must be required of physicians, surgeons, apothecaries or chemists for any wines or spirituous liquors they may use in the preparation of medicines.

SEC. 10. Every traveling merchant, hawker, or peddler who carries a pack and vends goods, wares or merchandise other than the manufactures and productions of this State must pay for a license $20 per month, and every such traveling hawker, merchant or peddler who uses a wagon and one or more animals for the purpose of vending such goods, wares or merchandise of any kind must pay for a license $10 per month.

SEC. 2. Every person who keeps a stallion, jack or jull and who permits the same to be used for the purpose of propagation for the public must annually obtain a license therefor from the Tax Collector and pay therefor as follows:

First. Horses that are hired for the purpose of propagation by the season at $100 or more constitute the first class and require a license of $25.

Second. At $50 and less than $100 constitute the second class and require a license of $20.

Third. At $30 and less than $50 constitute the third and require a license of $15.

Fourth. At $15 and less than $30 constitute the fourth class and require a license of $5.

Fifth. At $15 and less than $25 constitute the fifth class and require a license of $10.

Sixth. At less than $15 constitute the sixth class and require a license of $10.

Seventh. For each jack, $10.

Eighth. For each bull, $10.

A fine for propagating without a license obtained from the Tax Collector under the provisions of this ordinance shall entitle the holder thereof to the right to go into any county of this State for the purpose of propagation without any further license or expense.

SEC. 11. Every person who commences or carries on in the County of Inyo any business, trade, profession, or calling for the transaction of which a license is required by any ordinance of the Board of Supervisors of said county without taking out the license prescribed by such ordinance is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 and unless said fine be paid shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail of said county until such fine is satisfied, such imprisonment not to exceed one day for each dollar of the fine.

SEC. 12. The Tax Collector shall have the collection of the licenses provided for in this ordinance, and it is hereby made his duty to collect the same and he may enforce the collection as provided by Section 3440 of the Political Code of California.

SEC. 13. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after twenty days from its passage.

SEC. 14. This ordinance shall be published in the INYO INDEPENDENT, a newspaper printed and published in said county, at least two weeks.

The above ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo county at a regular meeting of said Board held on the 4th day of December, 1887, by the following vote:

AYES: Harger, Robinson and Eldridge.
NOES: None.
ABSENT: P. H. MACK.

LIVER REGULATOR
For all Diseases of the
Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.

The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.

No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.

Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.

If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, will expel the poison and protect them from attack.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer
Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.
JOHN C. EVANS, Stockton, Mo., writes: "I stand up and when I a washer even more hard labor and money in a home for the man any Washer and Mover that ever was put on any farm with less than $50 cents in collection. If you will set up any Instrument that will take as much labor off of men as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money it does and not as more, I could sell one at every house. I wish I had to take the feather from under their wife and sales to pay for it."
JOHN K. DODGE, JR., jeweler, Nevada, Iowa, writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought of Stevenson. Well, it is the best machine ever invented by man. Sell. We have just as good testimony on Monday as on any other day. If you are short, you can not buy corn for grist."
I will ship a sample to show, desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Pays capital's agents big money. Write for particulars.

Beats a barometer—Judge Hannah's plug hat.

There is now more sugar made from beets than from sugar cane.

Now that the nights are long and cold chairs will need extra bracing.

A big flow of petroleum has been struck near Stockton at a depth of 2,000 feet.

In boring for water at Santa Ana, Los Angeles county, natural gas has been found.

The gentle zephyrs of Lone Pine waft sweet strains of midnight music—also a few brickbats.

J. B. Chamberlain, of Bishop Creek, had business at the Independence Land Office this week.

Lead is advancing in price. Should the big war that is expected break out in Europe in the spring lead will boom.

Breeze, breezier, breeziest; culminating in a storm Wednesday night. Rain in the valley, snow in the mountains, and plenty of it.

Surprises will happen. Harry treated us to one on Wednesday, Hope the compliment will be returned some day. "I told you so."

So rapid has been the improvement in machines for generating electricity that a given current costs but one fourth what it did five years ago.

Last week thirty-one Chinese women were sent back to China from San Francisco. It was proved that they had been imported for immoral purposes.

The young folks at Mr. Schabbell's were treated to a handsome tree Christmas eve. Santa Claus did not fail to put in appearance en regle.

The Enterprise rejoices in the fact that Christmas passed without a murder at Virginia City. This is described as a great improvement over former times in that city.

George Wiest recently made a shipment of ore from the Ygnacio mine, Cerro Gordo. Mr. Wiest has the mine leased from the owner, Mr. George Hawley, of San Francisco.

Supervisor William Davidson, of Mono county, having left the county, has resigned. Nat. Boyd, of Bodie, has been appointed to fill the vacancy till an election can be had.

In a billiard game played at Boston last week Harvey McKenna, of Detroit, made two runs, one of 2121 points and one of 2572 points. His runs for the game averaged 416¼. This is said to be the best record ever made at billiards.

Many visitors from the mining camps of the county came in to spend the holidays at Independence. There was plenty of jollity and good natured fun but not a single unpleasant incident to mar the general harmony.

In the artesian belt of Kern county, along a tract twenty-four miles wide, artesian water is everywhere found without fail. It is asserted that the largest well in the State is within this belt. Water from this well irrigates several sections of land.

It is believed that the fight between Kilrain and Smith was a sham and the draw prearranged. The whole class of prize-fighters are lazy, worthless fellows; sooner or later most of them become drunkards and many of them professional thieves.

By a recent order from the Postoffice Department, one cent additional postage will be charged on all letters that are advertised. As the list of letters remaining uncalled for at postoffices is published by newspapers free of cost, there does not appear to be any good reason for the order.

A very pleasant party took place at Camp Independence last Monday evening. The company was treated to a fine supper at the residence of Mrs. Lewis. After supper the company returned to the Fort building and spent the remainder of the night in dancing.

It is said that when the Salt Lake and Los Angeles railroad shall be completed coal from Utah can be delivered at Los Angeles at six dollars per ton. Owens valley is nearer the mines than Los Angeles and coal ought to be delivered here at least as cheap as in that city.

Terrible cold prevailed in Kansas last week. Many people were frozen to death; fence were torn down and burned; furniture and fuel were used for fuel. Here in Owens valley we can hardly realize that in other parts of our own country people should be freezing to death.

The Best Offer Yet Made.

During the past two weeks Mr. Henry Thompson has had a subscription paper before the people of Independence for the purpose of raising funds to buy machinery and bore an experimental artesian well. More recently Mr. B. F. Leete, of Reno, was here and has joined with Mr. Thomson in the project. The proposal of Mr. Leete is to put a boring machine of the most improved kind at some point in the valley; this to be done only when the amount subscribed shall reach one thousand dollars. When the machine shall be put in place and ready for work five hundred dollars of the amount subscribed shall be paid to Mr. Leete; the remaining five hundred dollars to be paid when a flowing well shall be found. If the first attempt should be a failure the five hundred dollars to be declared a total loss to the subscribers. The machinery will have capacity for boring one thousand feet. Two years ago when McLaughlin & Hawkins, well borers from Carson, were here their proposition was to be paid eight hundred dollars for bringing machinery and boring to a depth of five hundred feet, should water not be found at a less depth. The proposition made by Mr. Leete is evidently better than the former one. The editor of this paper was present when Mr. Leete and Mr. Thomson agreed upon the terms as stated above. The project is deserving of support; if successful it will be of vast benefit to the county.

Snow.

During Wednesday night the rain changed to snow. This continued falling till about 8 o'clock Friday morning, when it was about three inches deep. This is the greatest fall of snow in the valley in several years. For several days snow fell in the mountains; this will make plenty of water for next season.

County Warrants.

Notice is hereby given to all holders of county warrants that said warrrnts will be payable on Monday, January 2, 1888, and that interest on said warrants will cease on and after the above date given.

Rev. T. E. Sisson will preach at the M. E. Church at 7.30 o'clock to-morrow (Sunday) evening. Sunday school at 2 o'clock p. m.

A tall, elegant looking gentleman attracted attention on the streets at the beginning of the week; many people thought he was some distinguished minister of the gospel from the east. When Pat Keys dons broadcloth he is a regular stunner.

Mr. James McIntosh is taking a vacation in town during the holidays. When his vacation is ended he will resume charge of the lumber yard at Blackrock. Mr. McIntosh is a thorough expert in the business of a lumber yard.

The Carson and Colorado Railroad Company, for the present year, paid taxes on their property in Inyo county to the amount of $4760.49. This is much the largest amount of taxes paid by one concern in the county.

After Tuesday evening last at 6 o'clock, all taxes then unpaid would be delinquent and five per cent would be added to the amount. Up till the time stated something near five thousand dollars of the total amount of county taxes yet remained unpaid.

W. F. Matlack has bought a lot just south of Levy's Independence Hotel; he will build a blacksmith shop on the ground as quickly as lumber can be had and the work can be done. The location is one of the best in the town, being on the corner of the street leading to the depot.

Mr. Harry Jiggens and Miss Emma Flowers were married at Mairs' Hotel, at Independence, last Wednesday. Immediately after the ceremony they started for Cerro Gordo, where Mr. Jiggens is in business. Very many friends unite in hearty wishes for the prosperity and happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Jiggens.

The party at Lone Pine last Monday evening was one of the pleasantest affairs of the season. A good delegation attended from Independence. The midnight feast at the Whitney House was worthy of the season more especially dedicated to good eating. Lone Pine parties are always pleasant to visitors, who never fail to declare that the last one was the best.

The M. E. Church was crowded last Saturday evening with children, their parents and friends. The trees were filled with toys and many presents of greater value. A good deal greater pleasure was expressed with the songs and recitations of the children than the most renowned professionals could give. It was a happy Christmas for the young and this was enough to give pleasure to the more aged.

The artesian wells of Tulare and Kern counties are of immense value. The Visalia Delta says it is only a few years since the first well was bored in Kern county; now there are hundreds of wells and more are bored daily. The water from even the smallest well would irrigate a quarter section of land and the largest well fills a ditch large enough to fully water several sections of land, with everlasting supply.

On every package of seeds, or cuttings of trees or vines sent through the mails the postal charge is sixteen cents a pound, or three hundred and twenty dollars a ton, or three thousand two hundred dollars for ten tons. We complain that six hundred per car load is a heavy charge from California to New York; but this is a trifle to what the Government charges for matter passing through the mails. A change is needed in our postal laws.

Last Saturday the great property lately owned by the Manhattan Mining Company at Austin, Nevada, was sold at auction. Workmen who had not got their pay and merchants who had supplied goods had secured liens against the property and to satisfy these claims it was sold by the Sheriff. The property is valued at $350,000 and was sold for $41,000. Should no purchaser be found for the property the lien holders will organize a company and work the mines for their own benefit.

Mr. R. P. Rothi, the well-known photographer, who has been in Independence for the past few weeks, left for Lone Pine on Wednesday, where he will remain for a short time. While here he never failed in any instance, to give complete satisfaction. A comparison of his pictures with photographs taken in San Francisco results, if anything, in Mr. Rothi's superiority. His prices are very low, to suit the times, and entire satisfaction guaranteed. Parties wishing pictures taken will find it to their interest to give him a call.

Fruit Pests.

Now that agents are coming around canvassing for the sale of fruit trees, every intending buyer should observe the greatest care not to get trees that are infected with any kind of fruit pests. There are certain parts of the State where the worst kinds of insect pests abound, and where there are nurseries from which the pests are carried wherever the young trees go. The State Inspector of fruit pests recommends that no trees be bought from any locality known to be infected. In case trees should come from an infected locality the most thorough disinfection is demanded, which shall consist in the dipping, for at least one-quarter of a minute of all parts of the tree in a certain solution, viz:

One pound of lye (American concentrated) or four-fifths pound of caustic potash (98 per cent) to a solution of 25 gallons, made of one pound of the best whale-oil soap (containing no more than 25 per cent of water) to four gallons of water. Solution to be used warm, 110° F.

Ditto.

Let us throw stones at the farmers of Washoe county, Nevada; we don't live in glass houses.

An Enterprise reporter, while in Reno last week, noticed several ranchers buying at the stores such articles as butter, eggs, ham, bacon, potatoes, wheat for chicken feed, and other articles that can be raised abundantly and profitably throughout the valley. Inquiry of the storekeeper revealed a wretched and shiftless condition of things on the part of the ranchers. They raise scarcely anything but alfalfa, and this they sell in the stack, principally to California cattlemen, who, in fact, make about all the profit represented in the alfalfa by loading it inside of their cattle's skins.

To a man up a tree all the poetry of farm life is knocked into a cocked hat in contemplation of the fact that their fresh eggs come from the store and they have to drink black coffee or use condensed milk, but such seems to be the case with Washoe county farmers.

Home Interests.

A very important industry is growing up at Owens Lake in evaporating the water and gathering the soda held in solution there in. Every man employed in this work and every horse or mule at work there, makes more demand for farm products, gives more business to merchants and more work to blacksmiths, shoemakers, carpenters and other mechanics. The amount of revenue collected from imported soda in 1886 was $1,448,263. If the tariff should be changed so as to admit soda free of duty not another pound of it would be taken from Owens Lake and our home industries would be injured to that extent. The free trade schemes proposed to Congress would be wide reaching in mischief. Another of our home industries that promises to be of great importance is marble. The duty collected from this article in 1886 amounted to $229,772. If marble should be admitted free of duty our home marble quarry would be abandoned and the place where several hundred men may be employed within a very few years will be left in solitude There is hardly a county in the United States that would not have some interest injured, or ruined outright, by free trade.

Benefit Concert.

By referring to another column a complete programme of the concert, to take place next Monday evening will be found. It will be seen that a large number of excellent selections have been made, and it is certain that a good rendering will be given. By general request the "Three Little Maids" will be repeated. The concert will take place in the new pavilion. Doors will be opened at 7 o'clock, the programme to commence at 7.30. The hall will be placed in readiness and the grand march for the ball commenced at 9.15. The arrangements for concert and ball are all that can be desired. Special attention will be given by the reception committee to visitors and strangers. A list of dances will be posted in a conspicuous place and no deviation therefrom. Tickets to concert and ball, with chance for door prize, $2.50; single admission 50 cents, children 25 cents. Admission to dance $1.50, ladies free. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

A Long Fast.

Not long since Pat Downs brought his pack train down from Mazourka canyon, darkness set in while the train was yet in the mountains and it was not noticed that one of the mules had disappeared. When the valley was reached and the mule missed no search was made for it, as it was expected the animal would follow the train. The mule failed to appear and was supposed to have been taken sick, and died from thirst and starvation. Thirteen days afterward Mr. Downs was again passing over the road and saw where the animal had fallen. The beast was encumbered with an aparejo, and having fallen on his back was unable to get up. The aparejo was loosened; the mule was helped upon his feet and was able to get down to the valley. He is getting along all right and begins to laugh he haw, he haw, at his long fast.

A Bad Son.

An old lady named Mrs. Maxwell died at Genoa, Nevada, last Saturday. The Carson Union says there is reason to think her death was hastened, if not caused by her own son. It appears that her son who is about 27 years of age; and married, obtained posession of about $500 of her money and gambled part of it away and gave the rest to his wife. Mrs. Maxwell, senior, asked the wife for the money, and this is said to have angered the son so he used violence upon the old lady. He has not yet been arrested although the disclosures are said to be damaging against him.

Lodge Election.

Last Saturday evening an election was held for officers of the Masonic Lodge at Independence. The following were elected to serve for the ensuing year. John Shepherd, W. M.; G. W. Brady, S. W.; S. D. Thurston, J. W.; O. I. Mairs, Treas.; P. H. Mack, Sec. On Tuesday evening a special meeting of the lodge was held and the officers were installed, The following are the appointed officers: J. W. P. Laird, S. D.; H. P. Cartier, J. D.; S. G. Gregg and J. S. Gorman, Stewards; Thomas Parker, Tyler.

Fair Directors.

Governor Waterman has made the following appointments of Directors for Agricultural District No. 18. W. S. Enos, to succeed himself, term having expired. James C. Crocker, to succeed T. J. Goodale, term expired. At the organization of the Board last spring Mr. Goodale was one of two who by lot were chosen to serve for the first short term of one year. The year ended December 1st and Mr. Goodale refused to serve again. He made a zealous and capable Director. The new appointments are for the full term of four years.

WHY IS IT?

Why So Many Defalcations?—Why Such Injustice?

A good conscience and Divine grace may do much, but if the key to a man's body be bad, the man's life will be a failure. If the foundation of a building is weak, the prudent owner promptly repairs it.

Is there not some reason why prominent men who inspire the utmost confidence, become criminals, and seek foreign asylums?

The professed Christian, the devoted father, the most honored men, after filling positions of trust for years, fall. We see this daily, and have found no solution to the mystery.

If the medical profession gave this matter their attention, would it not be better than wasting their time grinding over their 'isms, or, worse still, declaiming against improvements that benefit mankind, but do not happen to come from their highly-respected schools? They are being taunted by the scientists that they are but little further advanced in their studies than they were years ago, while a wonderful advancement of benefit to suffering humanity, has been made by scientists outside the profession.

A few years ago, the medical profession proclaimed to the world that bright's disease was incurable. They are unable to explain in the slightest degree its causes. It is only within two or three years that it has become known that such a disease is only an advanced kidney trouble, which was treated with indifference at first, as of no consequence. Within a few years the truth has become established that most diseases arise from derangement of the kidneys; that if these organs are in a healthy condition these diseases could not exist, and when corrected, the disease ceases.

For years this has been the key-note of the great remedy known as Warner's safe cure, and from the best obtainable information, the fame of the remedy comes from outside the medical code. Nevertheless, the popularity of Warner's safe cure continues to increase, regardless of its place of birth. The liberal branches of the medical profession are fast recognizing its merits, and we expect they will ere long be proclaimed in medical halls and conventions. Perhaps its proprietors and perfector may never see it, but the time will surely come, as it has come with other valuable discoveries. Perhaps a hundred years from now, the discoverer of this valuable remedy may receive some honorable title for the benefit he has conferred upon mankind.

HER FIRST SEA BATH.

Notes Made by a Careful Student of Feminine Nature.

This is a truthful and most accurate description of how a woman acts when she first puts on a bathing suit and appears before the world in it. At first sight of it she giggles convulsively and titters out:

"Oh, I never, never can let anybody see me with that on!"

"Oh, yes you can. Put it on," cries some hardened companion who has been in before. "Every body wears them."

"But I'll look so awful!"

"Who cares? Nobody'll know you."

Then she gets into it giggling furiously. "Oh, I just can't go out in it."

"Yes, you must."

"But how can I."

"Bah; nobody'll notice you in the least."

"But I know I look perfectly dreadful."

"Well, every body else looks so, too."

"I know, but I (giggle) I shall die if I see anybody I know."

"You ready?"

"Yes, I—I—guess so! Oh, I just don't believe I can go, after all. Don't I look awful?"

"Pooh! no! Come on!"

"I can't bear to. Tee, hee, hee, hee!"

But she does all the same, giggling frantically, until she reaches the water, when she shrieks out:

"Oh, it's cold! Ugh! Hee! he! I'll look so awful when I'm wet! O-o-o-o-h, it's dreadfully cold!"

And when she comes out and is dressed again she bores every body she knows by saying over and over again:

"Oh, I think it's just lovely to bathe! I'm going in every day! Isn't it fun? I just love to lie down and let the waves run over me! I a-n't one bit afraid now! I was awfully frightened at first! I don't mind my looks one bit now! I'd like to have my photograph taken in my bathing suit! It'd be jolly fun, wouldn't it? I got some water in my mouth, and isn't it salty? Oh, its just splendid! I'm going in three times some days! I believe it 'll do me good! Oh, I'm wild over bathing! It's just too perfectly lovely and jolly for any thing."—Tid-Bits.

LIFE IN THE COUNTRY.

The Delights of Apple Bees in the Old New England States.

Social entertainments were rare. Occasionally there was an "apple bee," in which, after the work of paring, quartering and coring was finished, there were usually some games in which kissing played a prominent part. Judges were appointed, forfeits were taken, and then the pleasant labor of judgment and redemption was entered on. All the forfeits taken from the boys were designated as "fine" and those captured from the girls as "superfine."

"Fine or superfine?" was asked the judge as the forfeit was held up to the back of his or her head so that it could not be seen, as it was not desired that the ownership of the article should be seen.

"Fine."

"Well, he must bow to the prettiest girl, kneel to the wittiest and kiss the one he loves best."

Or:

"Superfine."

"She must go to Rome," which meant that the culprit must kiss in turn every gentleman in the room.

Immense was the excitement in carrying out, in many instances, these judgments. The young fellows ordered to go to Rome would occasionally encountered a young, untamed thing that either did not wish to be kissed by the particular culprit, or who had a coquetish desire to make the labor as exacting as possible. She would resist and then there would be music. The girls were no fragile creatures with pinched waists and slender arms. They were muscular, as active as cats, as slippery as eels, and as full of endurance as panthers. It was always a pretty fight. She would writhe from within his arms, slip from his grasp, evade his lips by agile contortions of infinite variety.

With him it was a victory or eternal disgrace. He must conquer or lose his reputation for manliness and gallantry. And he struggled as if his very life depended on the result. They writhed, twisted, the rich blood mantling their faces, their breath coming in great gasps until at last, her strength exhausted, her hair flying, her lips open, she sank limp and exhausted in his arms and lay back with closed eyes and upturned face. Then, with a fierce rapacity, he pounced on her lips and gathered the long-fought-for prize.

Scores of these kissing games were in fashion. The young people "threaded the needle," they made "sugar bowls" with a certain number of lumps of sugar (kisses) in them; they exhausted invention in the variety of forms in which osculation was practiced.

Dances there were none. Now and then, in the winter, there would be a sleighing party to a neighboring village, and generally a singing-school. It was held in the gallery of the church, and took the pupils from the naming of the various notes through to the acquisition of "Balerma," "Ortonville" and "Old Hundred." We know of no instance in which a Patti, a Brignoli, or a Carl Formes was developed in that remote and humble locality.

One of the things most strenuously frowned on by the elders in the case of children was what was termed "snoopin'," and which, on account of its forbidden nature, was a thing most delighted in by the younger ones, more especially when the old folks had gone to town or on a visit, and left them in sole possession of the house.

Almost the last words of the mother when she set out on such a journey were:

"Now, children, mind what I tell you; don't you go snoopin' around, but play good right here in the room, or go down to the crick, but don't git wet, and be good children."

What more direct inducement could be given to a curious child to "snoop" than this injunction to refrain from it? Had Eve never been told that there was a wonderful secret in the forbidden fruit, and that she must not, on any account, taste it, the chances are that the human race would have been spared the primeval curse, and Eve herself would yet be visited, each year, by the omnipresent census-taker.

No sooner had the wagon with the heads of the family disappeared around a turn in the road, or into a hollow, than "snoopin'" commenced in earnest. There was to the child-mind so much that was wonderful, mysterious, unknown about even the smallest of the houses. There were dusty and strange-looking trunks in the little space beneath the roof. In the dark recesses of the cellar there might be hidden who knows what curious things? And there was the small drawer in the bureau which the father never allowed any one to open save himself, and which the children were solemnly warned never to meddle with. Who knows but that it had stores of gold and diamonds and other precious things?

How often has my "snoopin'" in the black, unexplored corners of the cellar revealed a pan of delicious "cookies" deftly hidden on some obscure shelf! How often have rats been held up to detestation and objugation when it was found that some of the "cookies" were missing and the cream in the milk-pans disturbed by some unknown agency!—Chicago Times.

The Latest Brand.

He (despondently)—It seems useless to struggle any longer against a cruel fate. Your father refuses his consent to our union, my salary is but seven dollars per week, and your brother threatens to thrash me at the first opportunity. I will not conceal from you the fact that I am losing hope, and have more than once thought of suicide.

She (pausing before a brilliantly-lighted saloon)—Adelbert, I don't blame you. Listen: you have often told me of the fatal effects of the ice-cream of to-day. I see you follow me, by your paling cheek. Let us go in here. In a short time all will be over. We will die together.

Tricks in all Trades.

A citizen who sat in the office of a real estate dealer for an hour the other day heard him say to a man who came in to place a house and lot in his hands:

"I'll put it on my list at $5,000, but I frankly tell you that it is $1,500 too high. If you sell at $3,500 you are selling to good advantage."

"Well do your best," was the reply.

In about an hour a party came in and said he was looking for a house and lot worth about $4,000, and the dealer turned to the one he had last listed and said:

"I haven't any as cheap as that, but here is something for $6,000 which I think will suit you, and I give you my word it is one of the greatest bargains in Detroit. CHEAP OIL PAINTINGS.

How They are Dashed Off in New York Picture Galleries.

"See that picture yonder?" asked a local "art" dealer of a reporter, pointing in the direction of a big landscape surrounded by a showy frame. "It took just thirty-six minutes to paint it. How was it done? I'll tell you. So far as I know there are no places in Philadelphia where this class of work is done, but in New York dozens of men make good livings painting such pictures by the yard. The work is simple. A piece of canvas nearly a hundred feet long is stretched in a gallery shaped like a corridor. On the picture under notice, which, by the way, you can have for $4.50, frame and all, five men were employed. Each man had his particular line. One man put in the foreground, another the background, and still another did the clouds and cows that you see browsing in the pasture. A fourth man did the trees and shrubbery. In this way they were enabled to work fast. In exactly three hours five of these landscapes were finished, which is thirty-six minutes' time given to each. The fifth man did the finishing touches, and, perhaps, performed more and better work than any of the others."

"Are all cheap pictures painted in the same way?" the reporter asked.

"Nearly all. Occasionally a fairly good artist will become hard up, and during these times he will sell the products of his brush for almost nothing. Never buy the oil paintings that are peddled about the streets by men who say they are artists. You will only get left. The frames on all those that you see on the wall are worth double the amount of the pictures themselves. O, yes, there's some money in this business, but not so much as formerly."—Philadelphia Times.

A Cabinet-Maker's Luck.

Some men are born rich, some acquire riches and others have riches thrust upon them. To the latter fortunate class belongs Mr. Charles A. Johnson, who resides at 375 W. Ohio street, Chicago, and who was the lucky holder of one-tenth of ticket No. 13,646 which drew the first capital prize of $150,000 in the October 11th Drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery Company.

A Traveler reporter, hearing of his good fortune, called upon Mr. Johnson to congratulate him and hear from his own lips the story of his profitable investment. He found Mr. Johnson a very intelligent young Swede, twenty-seven years of age, a cabinet-maker by occupation, who six years ago came to America and found employment at his trade in Chicago. Being of sober, frugal and industrious habits, his wages were sufficient to maintain him comfortably, but would not permit of much to be laid aside for a rainy day. Having three times before purchased tickets in the lottery and drawn nothing, his joyful surprise may be imagined when he found that his last investment of one dollar had brought him a return of $15,000. The money was received by Mr. Johnson through the American Express Company on October 21st, just ten days after the drawing, and is now deposited to his credit in one of the banks of the city. When questioned regarding the use to which he would put his fortune, Mr. Johnson said: "I shall remain in Chicago and at once build a comfortable house, furnish it elegantly and marry the young lady to whom I have for some time been betrothed. For the present I shall continue at my trade, and later I may engage in business for myself." Mr. Johnson is pleased with the promptness with which the Lottery Company forwarded the amount of his prize, and especially is he delighted that he can now marry and maintain in comfort the lady of his choice. He is a sensible as well as fortunate young man and will, without doubt, make good use of his suddenly acquired wealth.—Arkansaw Traveler, Nov. 5.

Marriage is the strictest tie of perpetual friendship, and there can be no friendship without confidence, and no confidence without integrity; and he must expect to be wretched who pays to beauty, riches or politeness that regard which only virtue and piety can claim.

THE WESTERN SETTLER'S CHOSEN SPECIFIC.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly-peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older-settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently-cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH AND STRENGTH.

Use after each meal SCOTT'S EMULSION with Hypophosphites. It is as palatable as milk, and easily digested. The rapidity with which delicate people improve with its use is wonderful. Use it and try your weight. As a remedy for Consumption, Throat affections and Bronchitis, it is unequaled. Please read: "I used Scott's Emulsion in a child eight months old with good results. He gained four pounds in a very short time."—Thos. Trim, M. D., Alabama.

We have been informed by Colonel A. Andrews, who has just returned from the East, that his Diamond Palace will be open every evening until further notice. We have examined his magnificent stock of diamonds, watches and jewelry, and must confess that we never saw its equal in this or any other city.

It will certainly pay intending purchasers of goods in his line to go a few blocks out of their way and examine his choice stock before purchasing elsewhere, as they can save at least from 20 to 25 per cent. In the line of diamonds and watches, he has the largest stock of any house in the State, and his prices defy competition. Parties in the interior will do well to send their orders direct to Colonel Andrews, stating the article wanted and the price, and leave the selection to his good taste, judgment and honor, and they may be assured of being justly dealt with. If the goods do not suit, they can be exchanged, or the money refunded. Goods forwarded C. O. D.

CAN'T GO BEHIND THEM.

There is great intensity of the physical condition sometimes, and there are facts which we cannot go behind. In illustration further of facts which settle the points of a prompt and permanent cure, the following cases are cited: In 1884 Mrs. Mary K. Sheed suffered terribly with chronic neuralgia. She writes from 1110 Maryland Avenue, Washington, D. C. In the first instance she states: "I suffered terribly with neuralgia in the face; very severe attack extending to back and shoulders; suffered intensely. Tried St. Jacobs Oil; had parts well rubbed at night; in the morning all pain gone, magically." June 10, 1887, she writes from 224 Eleventh Street, S. W., as follows: "Four years ago I sent you a voluntary certificate setting forth the fact that I had been a great sufferer with neuralgia in my face, neck and shoulders. I obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and after three applications I was entirely relieved from all pain, and from that time to the present I have never had a return. The effect was miraculous." Again, Feb. 6, 1887, Mr. R. G. Troll, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "In March, 1881, I suffered terribly with neuralgia; had suffered nearly three years. Applied St. Jacobs Oil at 8.15 A. M.; at 8.40 took the rag off; at 9 A. M. went to work. In less than five minutes after that the pain was gone. The one application cured me. Have not had return of it since." Mr. E. W. Spangler, York, Pa., June 17, 1887, writes: "Years ago had neuralgia; am not subject to it now. The cure by the use of St. Jacobs Oil was permanent. There has been no recurrence of the painful affliction." Chas. W. Law, Jr., Pottstown, Pa., April 19, 1887, writes: "Was troubled for years with neuralgia in neck and head. Tried St. Jacobs Oil; had tried different kinds of remedies without effect. One bottle of the former did the business. No return of pain and aches." In almost every instance the reports are the same.
